U. S. STRIPS FOR WAR

AMERICAN STEAMER SUNK—GERMAN SHIPS SEIZED

AN EDITORIAL

> "Our Country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
> —Stephen Decatur.

WE MUST PREPARE.

The severance of diplomatic relations with the imperial German government brings our country to the brink of war.

It has been the earnest desire of the American people that our peace should continue, and the whole nation shares in the wish and hope expressed by the president that the ties of friendly intercourse which have so long bound us to the German people may not be broken.

Nevertheless, in the grave and deliberate action taken our chief executive may rest assured of the wholehearted support of the nation. All differences of opinion, all doubts and hesitancies are resolved in this solemn hour, and all Americans stand today at the president's shoulder in patriotic union and unflinching devotion.

The president and the nation have devoutly desired peace. But they will as resolutely enter upon war if that tragic alternative is thrust upon them. They have now before them one clear duty. It is to prepare for that alternative. The time for reluctance and delay is past. The time for swift and thorough action is at hand.

The severance of diplomatic relations is not war. But history warns us that as between great nations it is the virtually certain prelude of war. We must realize that whether it shall be in this instance is now wholly without our control. It is for Germany to cast the die, and if we are not willfully blind we must believe the conditions of the world conflict are such as to offer us little or no hope the die will be cast for peace.

We desire peace. We hope for peace. But we must prepare at once for war. To hesitate and postpone now would be criminal folly; folly because it would ignore the lessons of experience and the plain dictates of self-preservation; criminal because if war comes every hour of delay, every compromise of vigorous preparation, will be paid for in the unnecessary and unforgivable expenditure of precious American blood.

Our conscience is clear as to the issue. It cannot be clear if we neglect to prepare with all our might to meet the issue. Congress and the government must realize that this responsibility is now upon them, and upon them alone. However the indifference of the American public may have contributed in the past to the procrastination of its representatives, the responsibility for delay must now be borne by congress and the executive. There is no shirking this responsibility. Government exists for it and must be faithful to the trust. The time for action is here. The government must act.

The navy is grossly undermanned. We had a fleet of sixteen battleships and sent them round the world in 1907. Now our fleet numbers only thirteen. The authorized strength of the navy is 74,000. We are 24,000 short of that number. In case of war we shall need probably 150,000 men for the navy.

The naval militia should be mobilized immediately to meet our pressing deficiency and assigned to duty on ships.

The ships and submarines now building should be pushed to completion at the highest rate of speed. All the resources of all shipyards, public and private, must be utilized, with three shifts working twenty-four hours to the day. Plans for expansion of these facilities should be formulated.

The naval board and the general staff of the army should present plans for the mobilization of naval and military forces at the earliest possible moment and legislation framed by experts should be passed without debate or amendment by our civilian congress to place these plans in immediate operation.

The problem of developing our maximum resources of equipment, munitions, and supply should be taken up at once. The great leaders of the various industries that will be called upon to provide our navy and army in war should be summoned to Washington and organized in an industrial general staff to act with the army and navy heads and see that all necessaries are supplied promptly and continuously.

Modern warfare is a gigantic synthesis in which confusion, maladjustment, and delay mean cruel waste of life and may mean defeat or utter ruin. If we are to enter the world war it is imperative that we should meet its standards of efficiency and concentrated power. The precedents are before us. The methods have been worked out by other governments which have preceded us in the conflict. We owe it to our country and to every man we call upon to fight for her to summon all our resources of brain and material and to place them at the disposal of our navy and army on the highest level of our efficiency.

HASTEN BILLS ON TREACHERY

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—Steps to strengthen the federal statutes under which prosecutions may be brought against those committing offenses in the United States to further the interests of foreign governments were hastened in congress today after the break with Germany was announced.

Seventeen bills submitted by the justice department several months ago to facilitate prosecution of such offenders were approved by a senate subcommittee when word came that President Wilson wanted action on them hastened, and they probably will get to the floor of the senate early next week.

HANG OUT THE FLAG!

If You Have an American Flag Hang It Out!

ROOSEVELT SAYS, "I AND MY SONS SERVE AMERICA"

Pledges Aid to Wilson —Seeks to Raise an Army Division.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Feb. 3.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt tonight pledged his support to President Wilson in upholding the honor of the United States. He offered to the country his own services and those of his four sons in the event of hostilities.

Col. Roosevelt said he had asked permission from the war department to raise an army division, to be under his command. His friends, it was stated, have worked on this plan ever since the Lusitania was sunk.

"I shall in every way support the president in all that he does to uphold the honor of the United States and to safeguard the lives of American citizens," he said. "Yesterday I wrote to the war department asking permission to raise a division, if war is declared and there is a call for volunteers to go to war. In such an event I and my four sons will go."

Col. Roosevelt would not discuss the country's foreign situation further, preferring to wait for developments.

He had an extended conference late in the afternoon with Henry L. Stimson, formerly secretary of war, concerning the formation of the volunteer division. Mr. Stimson, in event the division becomes a reality, will become commissary general.

Regular army officers have been asked to serve as brigade and regimental officers of the division, but Col. Roosevelt refused to give out their names or any particulars. He said he could not discuss that feature.

Several thousand men, he declared, have conferred at various times with Regis Post, who has had charge of affairs of the volunteer army unit for the colonel. At present telegrams are reaching him from all parts of the country.

New York, Feb. 3.—The Military Training Camps association, composed of 18,000 men trained at the federal camps, today offered the president, through its executive committee, "the active cooperation of our national machinery and organization for such use as you may direct," assuring him "loyal support for any measures" he might deem best "to uphold the honor and interest of the nation."

LATINS CHEER NEWS OF BREAK

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 3.—Tremendous excitement followed the news of a German-American break here today.

Bombs which the newspaper offices exploded from their roofs called a big crowd together.

This great gathering made practically no distinction between the diplomatic break announced by Washington and a declaration of war. Being enthusiastically pro-ally and pro-American, they cheered the announcement wildly.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—(Special.)—Orders were flashed today to every ship in the United States navy to prepare for action.

BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—(Special.)—Mobilization orders for the regular army and national guard are ready and await only word from President Wilson to go into effect. Secretary of War Baker says they would bring an equipped force of 212,000 men into service virtually over night.

This information was disclosed tonight following a conference between the president and secretary at the White House.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—With news received of the sinking of the first American ship in the new war zones proclaimed by Germany war with the Teutonic empires looms menacingly on the American horizon tonight.

President Wilson had scarcely ended his address to the congress dismissing Ambassador von Bernstorff of Germany and recalling Ambassador Gerard from Berlin when word was received of the destruction of the Housatonic, American owned and with a crew largely composed of Americans.

Should official reports show this affair violated international law the president will appear before the congress to take the further steps he threatened today.

Break with Austria Expected to Come Soon.

The severance of diplomatic relations between the United States and Germany is likely to be followed immediately by a similar rupture with Austria-Hungary.

A diplomatic communication from the Vienna government was delivered to the state department today by Count Tarnowski, the new Austrian ambassador, who arrived only two days ago.

The note is reported to be an announcement of Austrian participation in the program of "ruthless submarine warfare" or an indorsement thereof. If this proves the case, diplomatic relations with the dual monarchy will be severed by the recall of Ambassador Penfield from Vienna and the dismissal of Count Tarnowski. An appointment for the presentation of the count to the president has been canceled in view of the impending break.

Dramatic Scene Comes in Halls of Congress.

Appearing before congress this afternoon in the most impressive joint assembly of the houses in the history of the nation, President Wilson announced the rupture with Germany, the first break in friendly relations with a power of major rank in more than a century.

To the accompaniment of patriotic applause and cheers from the senators and representatives of both parties and from members of the Supreme court headed by Chief Justice White, the president proclaimed the necessity of acting on his ultimatum.

Amid even greater applause the executive announced that he will appear again before congress to obtain measures for the employment of the armed forces and other resources of the nation to protect Americans if Germany, by overt act, disclosed the intention of carrying out its announced program.

Declaration of War Still May Be Avoided.

Declaration of war on Germany by congress is not contemplated at this time or even if the president should propose the use of armed force to protect Americans. Count von Bernstorff says that Germany will not declare war. A state of war, however, may develop without specific declarations.

Congress stands almost unanimously by the president in what he has done and what he proposes to do. In the speaker's room after he and others of the reception committee had escorted Mr. Wilson from the joint assembly, Minority Leader Mann said to the executive:

"Mr. President, you could not have said less; I am glad you did not find it necessary to say more at this time."

The contingency of war and all that it entails in the way of preparedness of a totally unprepared nation is uppermost in the minds of those officials who realize the gravity of the situation.

Congress will authorize the president to commandeer all private navy yards, if necessary, to rush to completion the additional battleships and other naval craft which constitute the new navy on paper, tardily provided by the administration and the Democratic majority in congress.

One hundred or more additional submarines will be authorized and private plants given contracts to build them in double quick time.

Battleships, cruisers and other craft now in reserve will be sent to sea as fast as a speeded up recruiting furnishes enough men to man them.

GREAT TASK IS AHEAD.

In providing personnel and an adequate supply of ammunition and other equipment, in which there are grave deficiencies, the administration, as a result of inactivity in preparedness for two and a half years, has a herculean job on its hands.

If the situation grows more serious an extra session of congress is inevitable. To provide an army by universal military training is being urged upon the president by the general staff of the army.

The crews of interned German naval vessels have been removed to barracks and increased guards have been provided for German merchantmen in refuge in American ports.

GUARD ABOUT WHITE HOUSE.

The issuance of passports to Germany has ben suspended. Although the loyalty of the great mass of the German-American population is unquestioned, many known agents of the German government are under surveillance.

The White House and grounds, the state, war, and navy department building, navy yards, and arsenals throughout the country, and other government institutions have been closed to the public and additional guards provided.

The president is endeavoring to persuade other neutral nations to sever diplomatic relations with Germany. He believes that such concerted action would deter Germany from carrying out its program of ruthless submarine warfare and possibly result in ending the European conflict within a few months.

CONGRESS IS A UNIT.

The members of the senate and of the house of representatives gathered in joint session gave ample evidence, both during the president's address and afterward in interviews, that the legislative branch of the government is practically a unit in suporting the course outlined by the executive. As enunciated by the president, this course is:

Severance of diplomatic relations with Germany, in accordance with the Sussex ultimatum, on the ground that Germany has proclaimed a revocation of her promises to respect the rights of Americans on the high seas.

Employment of the armed forces and other resources of the government to protect Americans, should Germany carry into effect her announced program of ruthless submarine warfare.

Encouragement of other neutral nations to pursue a similar policy in defense of their nationals.

Efforts to convince the German people that Americans value their friendship and desire to promote peace, not war, and that the drastic action of the United States is occasioned solely by the conduct of the German government, which violates these treaties and bonds of friendship uniting the two peoples for more than a century.

GERMANY STANDS FIRM.

It was disclosed this morning that the president decided late last night to sever diplomatic relations with Germany, but to postpone undertaking any more aggressive action for the protection of Americans in the newly proclaimed submarine war zones until Berlin demonstrates by an overt act that the program menacing American rights is to be carried out without modification.

The president reached his decision after receiving from Ambassador Gerard a cablegram stating that Germany appears determined to carry out her announced intentions, and makes no concessions which would assure safety to Americans.

Mr. Wilson determined to take the minimum action he conceives consonant with the dignity of the United States in enforcing the terms of the ultimatum he delivered to Germany last April.

He refrained from asking congress to authorize the employment of the armed forces of the nation to protect Americans in the war zones because he hopes the severance of diplomatic relations with Berlin and the threat of more drastic action will deter the German government from carrying out its program.

AMERICANS ARE HELD.

It is possible that a fresh grievance which assumed more menacing proportions today will furnish the spark to the powder magazine of war. While the president was making preparations to go before congress he was notified by Ambassador Gerard that Germany had imprisoned and refused to release sixty-four Americans captured on British prizes of war by the German raiders in the Atlantic within the last month.

Germany contends that these Americans are prisoners of war because taken from armed British merchantmen regarded by Berlin as auxiliary cruisers. The administration regards such merchantmen private ships armed for defensive purposes and not warships in any sense.

The president immediately caused the state department to cable Ambassador Gerard to demand the immediate release of these Americans. A refusal by the German government to comply with this demand would be likely to cause the president to ask congress for authority to adopt warlike measures against Germany.

CROWD GREETS PRESIDENT.

Mr. Wilson, accompanied by his official aids, Secretary Tumulty and a squad of secret service men and police, reached the capitol at 1:55 o'clock. The president, as he made his way between the ranks of onlookers packed in the corridor of the capitol, never looked more solemn. His features were totally devoid of the suggestion of a smile as he doffed his hat to the populace.

There was a brief wait in the speaker's room, for the senate already had filed into the chamber of the house and taken the three front rows of seats. Practically every senator and representative was in his place and a crowd of government officials banked the walls about the chamber.

It was a somber picture, lightened only by the colors of women's gowns in the galleries.

Seated in a front row of benches at the left of the speaker's rostrum were Chief Justice White and Associate Justices McKenna, Pitney and Van Devanter of the Supreme court. It was the first time that members of the highest tribunal of the land had been seen in the joint assembly of congress.

Nearly all the members of the cabinet were grouped at the foot of the steps leading to the speaker's desk behind which Speaker Clark and Vice President Marshall sat solemnly awaiting the advent of the president.

In the executive gallery were Mrs. Wilson and a party of relatives and the wives of a number of cabinet officers. The diplomatic gallery was crowded with the envoys of foreign countries and their wives. In the front row sat Ambassador Jusserand of France, dean of the diplomatic corps, and Ambassador Naon of Argentina.

RISE TO GREET PRESIDENT.

It was precisely at 2 o'clock that the sergeant at arms of the house announced:

"The president of the United States."

The whole assemblage arose as Mr. Wilson, escorted by the joint committee of house and senate, entered, ascended the clerk's rostrum before the speaker's desk and solemnly shook hands with Mr. Clark and Mr. Marshall. The president was greeted with a great outburst of applause and cheers, which continued until he turned with his manuscript to the lectern, and the legislators suddenly resuming their seats relapsed into a profound silence.

READS IN QUIET TONE.

In even, unemotional tones the president quietly began reading his address. He proceeded slowly, never throughout the address raising his voice much above a conversational pitch. In the intense silence that prevailed, however, every syllable that he uttered was heard throughout the chamber.

This silence deepend and the countenances of the assembled statesmen waxed more solemn as Mr. Wilson dispassionately reviewed the history of the ultimatum he delivered to Germany in the Sussex affair and the conditional promises to reform submarine warfare given by Germany in response thereto and his rejoinder to Germany rejecting the conditions but accepting the pledges otherwise, to which Germany made no response.

QUOTES GERMAN REVOCATION.

Then the president quoted the essential part of the German note of Jan. 31 last proclaiming the revocation of these pledges and the intention of resuming ruthless submarine warfare.

Not a sound interrupted this statement of the case and the president's statement immediately thereafter that "this government has no alternative consistent with the dignity and the honor of the United States but to take the course" enunciated in the ultimatum, but the assemblage suddenly burst into applause when he then announced that he had dismissed Count von Bernstorff and recalled Ambassador Gerard. This demonstration halted the president's address for half a minute.

Again the assemblage relapsed into silence while the president expressed his refusal to believe that Germany intends to carry out her announced program.

"Only actual overt acts on their part can make me believe it even now," asserted the president amid another outburst of applause.

BIG DEMONSTRATION BEGUN.

The greatest demonstration, however, was accorded this declaration by the president:

"If this inveterate confidence on my part in the sobriety and prudent foresight of their purpose should unhappily prove unfounded; if American ships and American lives should in fact be sacrificed by their naval commanders in heedless contravention of the just and reasonable understandings of international law and the obvious dictates of humanity, I shall take the liberty of coming again before the congress to ask that authority be given me to use any means that may be necessary for the protection of our seamen and our people in the prosecution of their peaceful and legitimate errands on the high seas. I can do nothing less. I take it for granted that all neutral governments will take the same course."

NO HILARITY SHOWN.

The enthusiasm was clearly the expression of a sober, solemn patriotism. There was no hilarity, and as soon as the applause subsided a profound stillness fell upon the chamber, and in this silence the president pronounced the conclusion of his address in which he proclaimed his devotion to peace, not war.

As he ended the assemblage rose amid more applause. The president bowed to the senators and representatives, turned and shook hands with the vice president and speaker, and quickly descended the rostrum and passed out of the chamber followed by the reception committee.

It was 2:15 o'clock when the president concluded. Within the next three minutes the senate had filed out of the chamber and the house had resumed consideration of the naval appropriation bill.

"AMERICA DEFENDS RIGHTS AND JUSTICE;" PRESIDENT'S APPEAL TO THE CONGRESS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3 (Special).—President Wilson, in his address to the joint session of congress this afternoon, spoke as follows:

Gentlemen of the congress: The imperial German government, on the thirty-first of January, announced to this government and to the governments of the other neutral nations that on and after the first day of February the present month it would adopt a policy with regard to the use of submarines against all shipping seeking to pass through certain designated areas of the high seas to which it is clearly my duty to call your attention.

Let me remind the congress that on the eighteenth of April last, in view of the sinking on the twenty-fourth of March of the cross channel passenger steamer Sussex by a German submarine, without summons or warning, and the consequent loss of the lives of several citizens of the United States who were passengers aboard it, this government addressed a note to the imperial German government in which it made the following declaration:

"If it is still the purpose of the imperial government to prosecute ruthless and indiscriminate warfare against vessels of commerce by the use of submarines without regard to what the government of the United States must consider the sacred and indisputable rules of international law and the universally recognized dictates of humanity, the government of the United States is at last forced to the conclusion that there is but one course it can pursue.

"Unless the German government should now immediately declare and effect an abandonment of its present methods of submarine warfare against passenger and freight carrying vessels the government of the United States can have no choice but to sever diplomatic relations with the German empire altogether."

In reply to this declaration the German government gave this government the following assurance:

"The German government is prepared to do its utmost to confine the operations of war for the rest of its duration to the fighting forces of the belligerents, thereby insuring the freedom of the seas, a principle upon which the German government believes itself, now, as before, to be in agreement with the government of the United States.

"The German government, guided by this idea, notifies the government of the United States that the German naval forces have received the following orders:

"'In accordance with the general principles of visit and search and destruction of merchant vessels recognized by international law, such vessels, both within and without the area declared as naval war zone, shall not be sunk without warning and without saving human lives, unless these ships attempt to escape or offer resistance.'

"But neutrals cannot expect that Germany, forced to fight for her existence, shall for the sake of the neutral interests, restrict the use of an effective weapon if her enemy is permitted to continue to apply at will methods of warfare violating the rules of international law. Such a demand would be incompatible with the character of neutrality, and the German government is convinced that the government of the United States does not think of making such a demand, knowing that the government of the United States has repeatedly declared that it is determined to restore the principle of the freedom of the seas, from whatever quarter it has been violated."

To this the government of the United States replied on the 8th of May, accepting, of course, the assurances given, but adding:

"The government of the United States feels it necessary to state that it takes it for granted that the imperial German government does not intend to imply that the maintenance of its newly announced policy is in any way contingent upon the course or result of diplomatic negotiations between the government of the United States and any other belligerent government, notwithstanding the fact that certain passages in the imperial government's note of the 4th inst. might appear to be susceptible to that construction.

"In order, however, to avoid any possible misunderstanding the government of the United States notifies the imperial government that it cannot for a moment entertain, much less discuss, a suggestion that respect by German naval authorities for the rights of citizens of the United States upon the high seas should in any way or in the slightest degree be made contingent upon the conduct of any other government affecting the rights of neutrals and noncombatants. Responsibility in such matters is single, not joint; absolute, not relative."

To this note of the eighth of May, the imperial German government made no reply.

On the thirty-first of January, the Wednesday of the present week, the German ambassador handed to the secretary of state, along with a formal note, a memorandum which contains the following statement:

"The imperial government, therefore, does not doubt that the government of the United States will understand the situation thus forced upon Germany by the entente allies' brutal methods of war and by their determination to destroy the central powers, and that the government of the United States will further realize that the now openly disclosed intentions of the entente allies give back to Germany the freedom of action which she reserved in her note addressed to the government of the United States on May 4, 1916.

"Under these circumstances Germany will meet the illegal measures of her enemies by forcibly preventing, after Feb. 1, 1917, in a zone around Great Britain, France, Italy, and in the eastern Mediterranean, all navigation, that of neutrals included, from and to England and from and to France, etc., etc. All ships met within the zone will be sunk."

I think that you will agree with me that, in view of this declaration, which suddenly and without prior intimation of any kind, deliberately withdraws the solemn assurance given in the imperial government's note of the 4th of May, 1916, this government has no alternative consistent with the dignity and honor of the United States but to take the course which, in its note of the 18th of April, 1916, it announced that it would take in the event that the German government did not declare and effect an abandonment of the methods of submarine warfare which it was then employing and to which it now purposes again to resort.

I have, therefore, directed the secretary of state to announce to his excellency, the German ambassador, that all diplomatic relations between the United States and the German empire are severed, and that the American ambassador at Berlin will immediately be withdrawn; and, in accordance with this decision, to hand to his excellency his passports.

Notwithstanding this unexpected action of the German government, this sudden and deeply deplorable renunciation of its assurances, given to this government at one of the most critical moments of tension in the relations of the two governments, I refuse to believe that it is the intention of the German authorities to do in fact what they have warned us they will feel at liberty to do.

I cannot bring myself to believe that they will, indeed, pay no regard to the ancient friendship between their people and our own or to the solemn obligations which have been exchanged between them and destroy American ships and take the lives of American citizens in the willful prosecution of the ruthless naval program they have announced their intention to adopt. Only actual overt acts on their part can make me believe it even now.

If this inveterate confidence on my part in the sobriety and prudent foresight of their purpose should unhappily prove unfounded; if American ships and American lives should in fact be sacrificed by their naval commanders in heedless contravention of the just and reasonable understandings of international law and the obvious dictates of humanity, I shall take the liberty of coming again before the congress, to ask that authority be given me to use any means that may be necessary for the protection of our seamen and our people in the prosecution of their peaceful and legitimate errands on the high seas.

I can do nothing less. I take it for granted that all neutral governments will take the same course.

We do not desire any hostile conflict with the imperial German government. We are the sincere friends of the German people and earnestly desire to remain at peace with the government which speaks for them. We shall not believe that they are hostile to us unless and until we are obliged to believe it; and we purpose nothing more than the reasonable defense of the undoubted rights of our people.

We wish to serve no selfish ends. We seek merely to stand true, alike in thought and in action, to the immemorial principles of our people which I sought to express in my address to the senate only two weeks ago—seek merely to vindicate our right to liberty and justice and an unmolested life.

These are the bases of peace, not war. God grant we may not be challenged to defend them by acts of willful injustice on the part of the government of Germany!

ASKS PRIVILEGE TO COMMANDEER U. S. WAR PLANTS

Daniels' Request Is Met with Varied Responses on the Part of Congress.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—To insure quick construction of naval vessels and manufacture of ammunition and equipment for which private plants are under contract, Secretary Daniels asked congress today for authority to commandeer such plants, if necessary, and operate them in the public service.

A draft of the proposal sent to the house by the secretary was presented by Chairman Padgett of the naval committee as an amendment to the annual naval bill, on which debate was just closing. Following closely upon the president's address to congress, submission of the amendment enlivened discussion of the bill, and there were many references to impending developments in connection with the break with Germany.

No Partisanship.

"This is an hour of reflection and serious consideration," said Mr. Padgett. "I address myself to the patriotism and wisdom of the house. There is no partisanship in considering the navy. Under the circumstances, at this time that sentiment finds cordial expression from every member. This is not the hour to hesitate."

Several Republicans expressed similar sentiments, urging that the naval bill be brought to passage as quickly as possible, but others on both sides of the house entered objections against the commandeering amendment. Representative Madden, Republican, suggested that it involved the question of taking private property without due compensation, and Representative Fitzgerald, Democrat, said it involved the inviolability of contracts.

Clark Asks—"Why?"

Speaker Clark interrupted the discussion to ask why warships could not be constructed more rapidly and to urge the naval committee employ every means to speed up building.

Representative Britten announced he had prepared an amendment to appropriate $119,000,000 to hasten completion of 113 warships authorized at previous sessions of congress and now under construction in government and private ship yards.

General debate was concluded today, and detailed consideration of amendments will begin Monday.

King of Munitions Makers.

As a result of the tremendous ammunition orders sent to this country by the allies the United States today probably is equipped to manufacture as much munitions as all of the rest of the world.

The Bethlehem Steel plant alone, it is said, is much larger than the Krupp works in Germany. The Krupp factories, according to general understanding here, have been keeping the German army supplied with guns, practically without assistance since the war started.

The United States, in the various Dupont works, has the greatest powder making facilities in the world. The government could take these over simply through action on a requisitioning resolution if congress passed one.

If the United States is plunged into the war the allies unquestionably would object to any cessation of their supply streams from the United States, it is believed, and the United States, on the other hand, would not want to stop them, according to congressional belief, for fear of aiding Germany to continue the war longer.

Universal Service Campaign.

Senator Chamberlain, chairman of the senate committee, believes now is the time for universal training to be put into operation.

It is not generally believed about the capitol that the United States would be called upon to send an army to Europe, but it is thought that the course of wisdom would be to organize an army immediately so as to be prepared for any eventuality.

GUARD WILSON

White House Gates Closed and Extra Police Bar Entrance to Grounds Following the President's Speech.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 3.—Additional guards were thrown about the White House today soon after the president delivered his speech to congress. The gates to the White House grounds were promptly closed, and extra police were stationed to keep any one from entering.

Newspapermen and others with business at the executive offices were passed through a special gate, after they had satisfied the policemen of their identity.

In spite of the unusual situation, the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage, announced that its "picketing" outside of the White House grounds would be continued to show that the women thought they should have a part in reaching momentous decisions possibly involving the nation in war.

SECRET ORDERS PUT NAVY YARDS ON WAR FOOTING

U. S. Warships Train Guns on Interned German Raiders.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—The navy department today issued instructions to all government navy yard commandants to close the gates against visitors.

Orders also were issued to all naval officers instructing them to prohibit visitors on shipboard "until further orders."

Train Guns on Raiders.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 3.—The League Island navy yard here was put on a war basis today.

After a day of feverish activity aboard the ships yesterday the gates of the yard were closed to all visitors, shore leaves were countermanded, and triple guards placed at every entrance, while extra patrols were thrown about shops, warships, and streets.

The port guns of the dreadnaught North Dakota—those facing the interned German raiders Prinz Eitel and Kronprinz Wilhelm—were "broken for action."

"Merely a precautionary measure," was the way the officers explained it.

Brooklyn Yard Is Closed.

New York, Feb. 3.—The Brooklyn navy yard was closed to visitors this afternoon. It was stated that no orders had been received so far from Washington, and that otherwise everything was being conducted in a normal manner.

Guard Munition Plants.

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 3.—The national guard and Pennsylvania state constabulary will be called out to guard the great Bethlehem and a score of other munitions factories in this state, it was made known here tonight.

Guard at Rock Island.

Rock Island, Ill., Feb. 3.—Upon orders of Col. George W. Burr, commandant at the Rock Island arsenal, all arsenal passes, except to employés coming to work, were suspended today. Strangers are excluded from all parts of the plant and the grounds. The order warns against "suspicious persons or circumstances that might jeopardize the safety of this establishment." The arsenal at present is employing the largest force in its history.

$500,000,000 IN WAR BOND ISSUE ASKED IN SENATE

Thomas Resolution Likely to Await Request of the President.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—Senator Thomas of Colorado today introduced a resolution authorizing the issue of $500,000,000 in bonds to enable the government to put the country in a state of military and naval preparedness.

While senate leaders denied they were ready to authorize huge expenditures at this time unless the president asked for them the action of Senator Thomas points clearly to the fact that there is general sentiment in favor of getting the nation ready for war if complications continue to get worse.

Bond Issue Method Liked.

At any rate, the bond issue method of meeting expenses in event of a war with Germany will be used instead of further taxation, according to statements made today by prominent administration officials.

The present tax rate, it was said, is just about as heavy as the country can stand. On the other hand, it will be far easier, in the opinion of administration officials, to raise the huge sums necessary for the conduct of a war through issuing bonds than levying taxes.

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo has already conferred with members of the house ways and means committee on this feature of the situation and he has informed them that bonds will be requested.

House Will Pass Bonds Required.

Representative Rainey of Illinois, ranking Democratic member of the committee, today said it would not take more than five minutes to vote through the house any issue the administration might want.

"We have paid for all former wars through bonds," said Mr. Rainey, "and if we are to have war now we will pay for it in the same way. American bonds should go at a great premium on the market today. All congress would have to do would be to agree with the administration on the size of the issue necessary and the rate of interest to be paid. Naturally such bonds would be exempted from all forms of local, state, and federal taxation, so that they would be desirable as investments. Likewise their denominations would be fixed so that the small as well as the large investors could purchase them."

British Depend on Taxes.

When the war began the allied nations started out to pay for it by issuing bonds. Great Britain long ago, however, found it absolutely necessary to revise her whole system of taxation upwards. She is now raising money through taxes, the sale of long term bonds and of short term credits.

Billions could be raised in this country by additional taxation if it becomes necessary to do so. In the event of war little question would be raised in the opinion of members of congress as to the government's right to reach out and tax everything in sight.

Large sums could be added to the revenues produced from the income and inheritance taxes; luxuries would be hit harder than ever before and general business which would prosper in war as well as in peace would be taxed heavily.

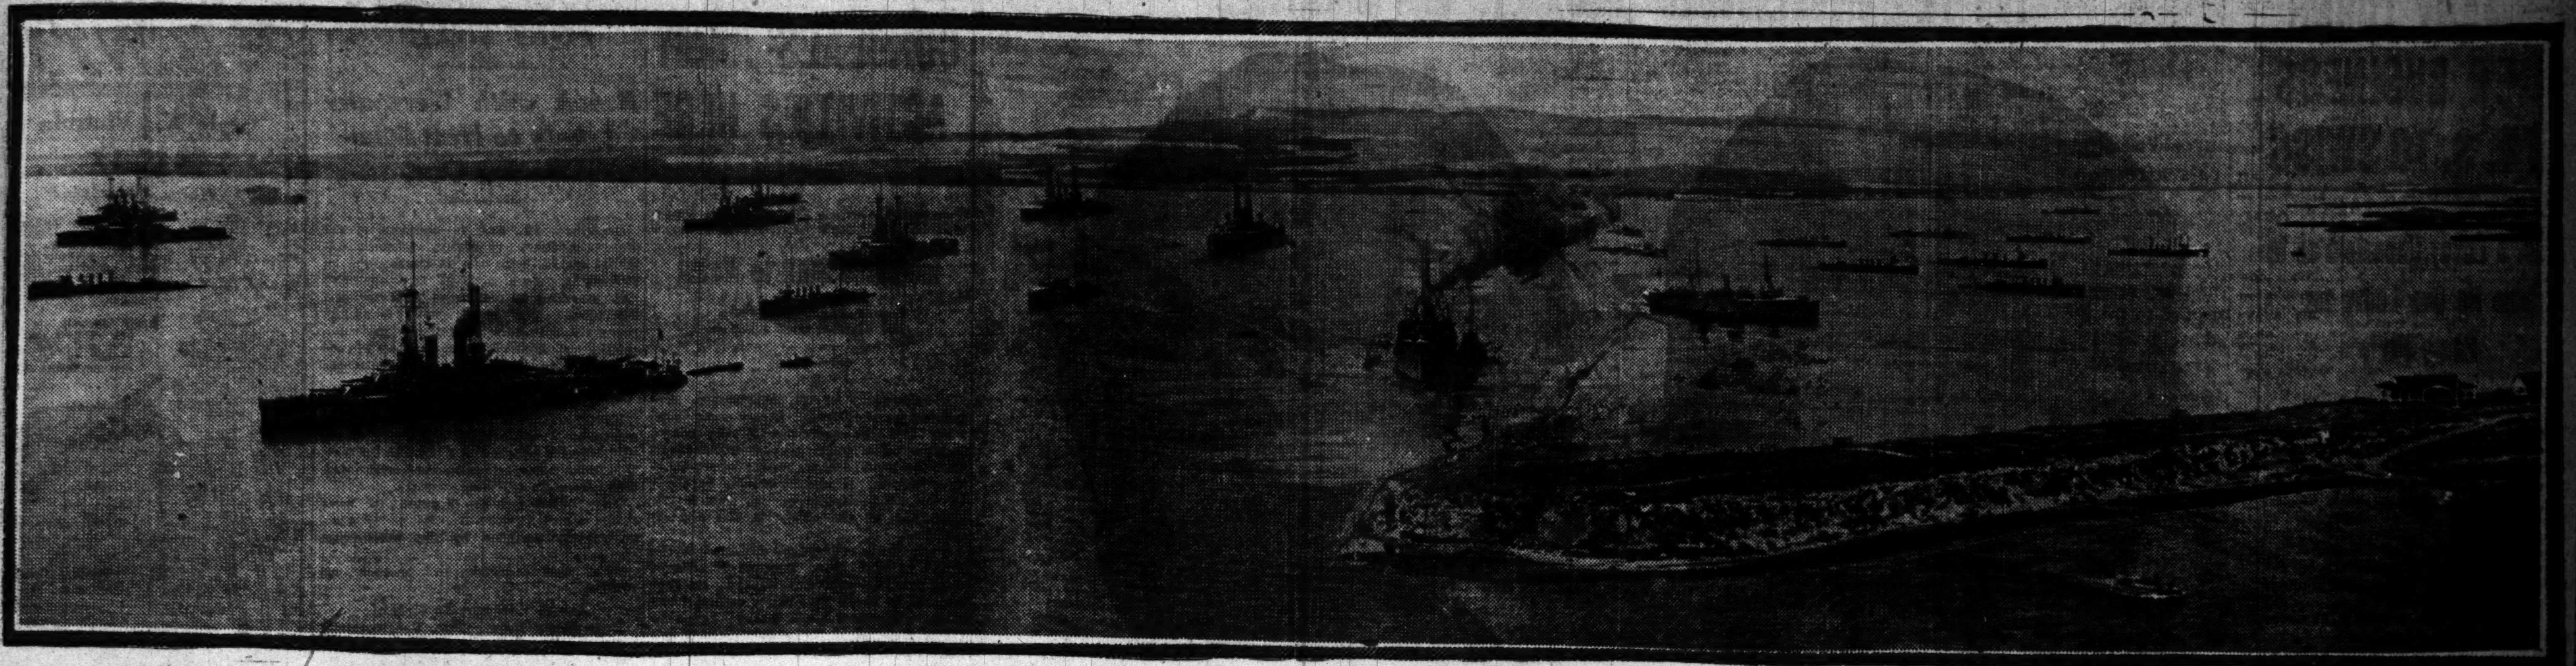
MAIN FLEET OF UNITED STATES NAVY IN GUANTANAMO BAY READY FOR ACTION



This bird's-eye view of the Atlantic fleet in its winter quarters at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, was sent to Mrs. E. G. Livingston of 64 East Thirty-sixth place, by her son, Edwin H. Livingston. It was received yesterday morning. Livingston is 18 years old and a sailor on the U. S. S. Wyoming. The photo, according to a letter accompanying it, was taken a week ago.

AMERICAN SHIP SENT TO BOTTOM BY SUBMARINE

London Report Says Housatonic Was Given No Warning Before Attack.

(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

LONDON, Feb. 3.—The American steamer Housatonic, Galveston to London, was sunk today by a German submarine.

It was reported, but not confirmed officially, that no warning preceded the attack.

It is officially reported that all the officers and crew of the Housatonic were saved by a Brtish armed steamer. The eight officers and most of the crew were Americans.

The destruction of the vessel took place near the Scilly islands, close to the route which the German warning of "unrestricted submarine warfare" said was to be left open to American vessels not carrying contraband. The location indicates the Housatonic was therefore in the "barred zone."

ALARM IN CAPITAL.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—News of the sinking of the Housatonic created a sensation here, but state department officials pointed out that it would depend entirely upon the circumstances whether the incident would affect the present situation.

The ship was carrying wheat contraband, and if it was destroyed with proper warning and provision for the safety of the crew, or in an attempt to escape, the United States merely would have a claim for damages, as in the Frye case.

AN ACT OF WAR.

Admittedly, if the vessel was sunk without warning or with loss of American life, it will amount to little less than an act of war and be followed by all the consequences which the president so clearly pointed out in his address.

The ship was of American registry, flew the American flag, and its eight officers and twelve or more members of its crew were American citizens.

AWAITS FULL REPORTS.

The only comment at the White House was that the president would "naturally await full official reports" on the sinking.

Meantime this government is struggling to get the facts. It will be impossible to hear directly from Germany, as neither Gerard nor Von Bernstorff are longer accredited representatives of their respective governments.

It will be necessary to depend almost entirely upon American consuls in England to furnish the required data.

MATE A CHICAGO MAN.

Galveston, Tex., Feb. 3.—The second mate of the steamer Housatonic was a Chicago man, Paul W. Boness. All the other officers were Americans, as were practically all the members of the crew.

The Housatonic sailed from Galveston on Jan. 6 and from Newport News on Jan. 16 for London. The Housatonic formerly was the Hamburg-American line steamer Georgia, and the American registry was granted to it in April, 1915. Prior to that time it had been laid up at New Orleans since the beginning of the war.

It was then announced that the vessel had been bought on March 29 for $85,000 by the Housatonic Steamship company, of which Edward F. Geer of New Orleans was president.

The Housatonic was 3,143 tons gross and was built in Glasgow in 1890. It was 238 feet long, 40 feet wide, and 20 feet deep.

FIVE SUBMARINE VICTIMS.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—The destruction of five vessels by submarines and one by a mine is reported by Lloyd's ship agency. The victims' names follow:

ESSONITE—British steamer; ten members of crew drowned. Captain and two men landed. Submarined.

GAMMA—Dutch steamer of 2,189 tons. Crew rescued. Submarined.

BUTRON—Spanish steamer. Two of crew drowned. Sunk by submarine U-67.

ELECKON—Greek steamer. Crew rescued. Sunk by U-67.

HEINLAND — Norwegian steamer sunk by mine. Three members of crew were saved.

HELICOT — Greek steamer. Crew rescued.

MINE SINKS THE QUEBEC.

New York, Feb. 3.—The Quebec, a passenger ship which plied between France and the West Indies, has been sunk after striking a mine, the French line, owners of the vessel, announced here today. The news came in a cablegram from the French line offices in France and gave no details.

MEETS FATE OF NAMESAKE.

The sinking of the Housatonic recalls the fact that the first ship ever sunk by a submarine was named Housatonic. It was a federal frigate and was sent down in Charleston, S. C., harbor in 1862 by a confederate submarine, known more popularly as the David, but also known as the Huntley.

A POEM FOR TODAY

YOUR FLAG AND MY FLAG.

BY WILBUR NESBIT.

[By permission of P. F. Volland & Co.]

Your flag and my flag,
And how it flies today,
In your land and my land
And half a world away!
Rose-red and blood-red
The stripes forever gleam;
Snow-white and soul-white—
The good forefathers' dream.
Sky-blue and true-blue, with stars to gleam aright—
The gloried guidon of the day; a shelter through the night.

Your flag and my flag!
And O! how much it holds—
Your land and my land,
Secure within its folds!
Your heart and my heart
Beat quicker at the sight;
Sun-kissed and wind-tossed—
Red and blue and white.
The one flag—the great flag—the flag for me and you,
Glorified all else beside—the red and white and blue.

BORDER SERVICE LEAVES MILITIA IN BETTER TRIM

Still physically fit from extended Mexican border service and as well prepared in the matter of military knowledge as America's civilian soldiery ever has been in time of need, the units of the Illinois National guard are awaiting the call to arms.

That there are imperfections must be admitted; likewise that there are disgruntled ones who now believe—sincerely—that no condition could be serious enough to induce them to return to active service.

In the state arsenal at Springfield is a supply of field and camp equipment, arms and ammunition, due to federal shipments to replace equipment used in the Mexican service.

COL. JOHN J. GARRITY of the Second infantry said last night:

"There are 950 men in the regiment, 300 of whom have refused to take the Hay oath. I doubt if many would reenlist after their service on the border."

COL. DANIEL MORIARTY of the Seventh infantry: "The regiment is ready and if called upon will go. We have complete equipment."

COL. GEORGE GREENE, Third infantry, Fort Sheridan: "We have received no orders for any preparation, but as a precautionary measure I have cut down all leaves of absence to twenty-four hours, and have asked men on longer leave to return."

COL. FRANKLIN A. DENISON, Eighth Illinois infantry [colored]: "Just start the band playing and keep 'em at it and my boys will go anywhere and fight all of the time. We have 1,108 officers and men."

COL. M. J. FOREMAN, First Illinois cavalry—The regiment has nine machine guns and a large amount of unused clothing and equipment. It is ready to start out on an expedition for a limited time with its present supplies.

INTERNED TEUTON CRUISERS SEIZED; ALSO STEAMERS

U. S. Takes Over Two Warships and Eleven Steamers—Two More Disabled.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 3.—The German auxiliary cruisers Kronprinz Wilhelm and Prinz Eitel Friedrich, interned at the Philadelphia navy yard, were seized by order of the navy department early tonight and their crews imprisoned in an isolation barracks.

Take Five at New Orleans.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 3.—Dock board officials here today ordered the two German and three Austrian steamers, which took refuge in this port at the beginning of the war, to be removed into midstream, just opposite the naval station. The United States gunboats Castine and Smith, port officials understood, have been assigned to guard the five steamers.

Seize Appam at Norfolk.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 3.—United States officials, consisting of a dozen representatives of the customs bureau and the navy department, today boarded the interned ship Appam, brought into port by a German prize crew, and formally took possession.

Grab Four at Panama.

PANAMA, Feb. 3.—Four Hamburg-American line steamships which have been in Cristobal harbor were seized this afternoon by the Canal Zone authorities.

Liner Seized at Boston.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 3.—United States Marshal Mitchell tonight took physical possession of the North German Lloyd liner Kronprinzessin Cecelie, which has been nominally in his custody since the litigation instituted against the owners by the National City bank of New York.

One hundred and nine policemen, under command of Supt. Crowley, were sworn in late today as deputy marshals and immediately ordered to the water front on guard duty at the pier where six German ships are docked.

Teutons Disable Two Ships.

Hoboken, N. J., Feb. 3.—Definite statements attributed to an authoritative source were made today that the German steamship George Washington, which has been here since the beginning of the European war, has been damaged to such an extent that it is practically useless.

The Austrian freighter Himalaya, interned in Newark bay, has had its cylinder heads removed and its engines smashed, according to reports of neutrality agents this afternoon. Collector Malone refused to discuss the case.

TRY TO SINK U. S. BOAT.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 3.—A sailor, said to be of German parentage, attempted to sink the United States torpedo destroyer Jacob Jones, one of the navy's newest, by opening a sea-cock late this afternoon. The sailor is under arrest at the League island navy yard tonight. The vessel was tied up at the dock with two feet of water in its hold.

The attempt was made while the Jacob Jones was on neutrality patrol duty in Chesapeake bay and was thwarted by an officer who noticed the vessel was listing badly as it left the yard for duty.

PLEDGES BRAZIL TO SUPPORT U. S.

RIO JANEIRO, Feb. 3.—In an interview here today Augusto de Souza e Silva, deputy from Rio Janeiro, predicted the United States would be drawn into the war and said that it would be supported by Brazil. The deputy praised the efforts of President Wilson for peace, and continued:

Baron Reiswitz, German Consul Here, Is Silent

Baron Kurt von Reiswitz, German consul in Chicago, spent the evening at his home awaiting word from Washington on the diplomatic break. He had learned only from the newspapers that Ambassador Bernstorff had received his passports.

When informed through THE TRIBUNE that it was reported in Washington that all German consuls would be returned to Germany Baron von Reiswitz said:

"I am waiting official information from Washington. I have nothing to say until then."

SEEK QUICKEST WAY TO PUT U. S. ON WAR FOOTING

Mobilization of Army and Guard Await Wilson's Word.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Mobilization orders for the regular army and national guard are ready and await only a word from the president to be put into effect. According to Secretary of War Baker, they would bring an equipped force of 212,000 men into service virtually over night.

The president and Mr. Baker at a White House conference tonight discussed the most expeditious means of bringing the country to a war footing.

The war department's mobilization plan, drawn up by the general staff, is regarded by Secretary Baker as fitting any initial trouble which might result if actual war is announced. It also will be used as a basis for the establishment and equipment of a new army which the president now realizes must be speedily put into shape if war confronts the country.

Redouble Guards at Forts.

The tentative plans discussed revolved about the actual mobilization and the creation of new forces. Orders were sent out to every fort, arsenal, and depot of military supplies to redouble the guard against any surprise attempt to damage them, but the main features of the conference concerned the plans for really putting the country on a war footing.

So far as the mapped out mobilization is concerned, it is probable that, during the cold months at least, the national guardsmen, after being mustered into federal service, would remain at the armories or in camp. Training would be the watchword.

The plan for raising an army is being considered on the basis of the war department's universal service bill. Maj. Gen. Scott, chief of staff, and army officers generally regard this as affording the most practicable means of providing a nucleus for an efficient force, and Secretary Baker has indorsed this view.

Plan for 1,500,000 Men.

This plan, the details of which have been withheld from publication, would provide for the raising of approximately 500,000 men by calling to the colors all fit citizens of 19, for example.

It is estimated there are approximately 1,000,000 of this age available, and discounting those who would prove physically unfit or for other reasons be rejected, and also discounting those who might be given duty in munition factories, etc., there would remain roughly half a million men for the intensive training which the war department would require.

By this scale the war department calculates it could provide another 500,000 men by calling to the colors men of 20, and another 500,000 by extending the age limit to 21. Thus 1,500,000 men could be called out by confining the age limit from 19 to 21.

Intensive training would equip raw recruits for war service in approximately nine months, it is estimated.

ORDERS FLASHED TO ALL SHIPS IN NAVY: PREPARE!

Neither Daniels Nor Baker Is Able to Tell Wilson: "We Are Ready."

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Orders were flashed today to every ship in the United States navy to prepare for action.

Even before the president announced the diplomatic break with Germany the navy department was a scene of feverish activity not sen since the Spanish war.

Preparations were made for any eventuality. Battleships were ordered to keep under steam, to provide coal, to keep all men aboard, and, in short, to make every preparation for action except the actual painting from the peaceful white to the war gray.

President Wilson this afternoon called Secretaries Daniels and Baker of the navy and war departments to the White house for an hour's conference, during which the readiness of the United States to enter a conflict was discussed. Neither secretary was able to assure the president that everything possible had been done to prepare the United States military forces for war, if war should come.

Daniels Foresaw Break.

The navy department has known for some time that the present crisis might arise. Plans have been made for a mobilization of the industrial forces of the country and for the taking over of munition plants and of shipyards.

Early today, when the news of the break with Germany was known, shipyard owners, owners of steel plants, munitions factory owners, and many others telegraphed and telephoned the navy department asking if there was anything they could do and offering their plants to the government in the event of trouble.

One telephone call came from Eugene Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel company, who only a short time ago had been carrying on a campaign against the navy department.

The United States navy yards were empowered to employ extra men and to proceed at full speed, day and night. Shipyards which now are building warships were urged to lay everything aside to hasten the completion of these ships. Blank contracts were prepared for the wholesale ordering of supplies, munitions, and food.

Speed was ordered in the repair of United States ships now in port. The necessity of having these ships ready to put to sea at once was impressed on the navy yard officials and instructions issued, it is understood, that the commanders should be ready to put to sea at any time, no matter whether the repairs were completed or not.

Admiral Benson, head of the navy, immediately ordered the bureau of intelligence to make no more announcements concerning the whereabouts or movements of American ships.

Have You a Motorboat?

The general board met and laid out a general policy of procedure. The navy has the name of every motor boat owner in the country as well as that of every passenger liner and freighter. If the department decides that the government needs these ships they will be requisitioned over night.

Early in the day the navy department announced that all visitors were to be barred from navy yards. No one except employés may enter without a written order from the commandant. Even the state, navy, and war building was surrounded by police and no one except employés and newspaper men admitted.

The largest United States fleet, the Atlantic fleet, is at Guantanamo, where it has been having maneuvers. Consequently, this fleet is regarded as already mobilized and ready.

This fleet is consttiuted of all the first line battleships in the United States navy, most of the second line ships, a number of cruisers, destroyers, and submarines.

Included in the list are the Pennsylvania and the Oklahoma, ships which are as large as those of any navy in the world. In addition the battleship Arizona is almost completed, and there are three more which can be completed within a short time.

The United States, however, presents a woeful comparison with Germany in respect to first line battleships. Germany had nearly twice as many as the United States at the outbreak of the war in addition to those which have been built since the war began.

The United States has not a single battle cruiser. Four of these were authorized last year, but not a single one of them has been laid down. In fact, the navy department has been squabbling for some time with the shipyards over the prices for these ships.

The battle cruiser is now regarded as one of the most efficient warships afloat. It attains a speed of more than thirty knots an hour, one-half again as fast as the fastest battleships. In addition it mounts guns as heavy and with as long range as those on the battleships. Its only inferiority is in its protection, it having much less armor than the battleship.

The United States navy has about twenty-five cruisers of various classes, many of those ships being of the old type and therefore of not much use.

Weakness in Submarines.

The greatest weakness of the navy is in the matter of submarines. Although the naval register shows that the United States has thirty-five of these ships, only about half of these would be of actual use in case of war.

The navy is also deficient in personnel, there being many ships which do not have a full complement of men. The authorized strength of the United States navy is 74,500 men. This number may be increased at any time, without act of congress, to 87,000 men. Of this number the navy now has 57,000 men, according to the latest recruiting statistics.

To meet this shortage, nothing is being done at the present time, except to urge recruiting officers to use all their efforts to get men into the navy. However, it is felt that no trouble will be experienced in getting all the men required for the ships within a week or two after an actual declaration of war should be made, but it would take much time to train the men.

Will Take Six Months.

Navy department experts estimate that it would take six months to train these men to their work. If the men could be so divided that one green man was apportioned to every two experienced men on each ship, then this time could be shortened materially. However, this is not feasible, and it is anticipated that a large number of men will have to be put on the ships without previous training.

It is stated at the navy department that sufficient ammunition and supplies of all sorts are available for the present. Definite figures on the amount of ammunition on hand, however, is regarded as military information and for this reason cannot be printed.

The secretary of the navy tonight asked the newspaper correspondents to use care in what they wrote.

"There has been no censorship of newspapers discussed so far as I know," Secretary Daniels said, "and we want to keep away from such things."

GERARD IS RECALLED AS VON BERNSTORFF GETS HIS PASSPORTS

GERMANY TURNS OVER BUSINESS IN U. S. TO SWISS

Kaiser's Envoy Uncertain as to Time He Can Leave for Home Port.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—German Ambassador von Bernstorff was handed his passports at 1:57 o'clock this afternoon and American Ambassador Gerard was immediately recalled from Berlin. Previous to this official notification of a diplomatic break between the United States and Germany Von Bernstorff had turned over Germany's interests in the United States to Dr. Ritter, the minister from Switzerland.

Spain will care for American interests in Germany.

Von Bernstorff got in touch with the Swiss envoy as soon as he received the news of the break through the press. He made provisional arrangements to cover all immediate details with Dr. Ritter. The latter will make an early call on Secretary of State Lansing and discuss with him the details of his new interests.

All American consuls have been ordered to leave Germany.

The state department announced that British interests in Germany, which Gerard has been handling, have been transferred to Holland; Japanese and Serbian to Spain, and Roumanian to Spain temporarily till the Roumanian government has been heard from.

Plans Made Secretly.

Von Bernstorff's passports were handed to him by Lester Woolsey, confidential assistant to Secretary of State Lansing.

The plans of procedure were made in secret at the department during the morning. About 12:30 Woolsey casually walked out of the state, war, and navy building, just at the usual hour when he goes to lunch. Three newspaper men were the only ones on his trail. Woolsey took a roundabout course, stopping at a little lunchroom for a plate of beans and a cup of coffee just before performing his momentous task.

The three newspaper men joined him in the restaurant and walked with him to the embassy. Woolsey proceeded slowly up the steep incline leading to the embassy's door. Just before ringing the bell he felt in his pocket for the historic document.

"I Am a Private Citizen."

Immediately after the departure of Woolsey Von Bernstorff received the newspaper men, opening the audience with the following words:

"Gentlemen, I am now a private citizen."

He smiled and added:

"I had not expected the pleasure of seeing you again.

"I am not surprised at America's move. My government will not be surprised either. The people in Berlin knew what was bound to happen if they took the action they have taken. However, I have simply been here to carry out the orders of my government. I have had no official information either from my government or from the United States since I presented the note which brought this about."

Von Bernstorff said his passports made no mention of German consular agents or of Austrian diplomatic officials, but it is expected Germany will withdraw all its consuls in this country.

While Von Bernstorff was talking to the newspaper men a letter was brought in on White House stationery announcing the presence of William Nye, United States secret service man, who saw Von Bernstorff when the newspaper men left. It is supposed he wished to confer with Bernstorff about protecting the latter against possible danger from attack by fanatics.

Letter Ousting Von Bernstorff.

The letter from Secretary Lansing that made Von Bernstorff a private citizen follows:

"Excellency: In acknowledging the note with accompanying memoranda, which you delivered into my hands on the afternoon of Jan. 31, and which announced the purpose of your government as to the future conduct of submarine warfare, I would direct your attention to the following statements appearing in the correspondence which has passed between the government of the United States and the imperial government in regard to submarine warfare."

[Then follow the quotations used by the president in addressing congress: that from the Sussex note giving notification of a severance of diplomatic relations unless Germany's submarine warfare is brought within international law; that from the German reply giving new pledges, but reserving liberty of action should the allied blockade continue unmodified; that from the American rejoinder saying the United States could not predicate Germany's compliance with international law upon the conduct of another belligerent; and lastly that from a memorandum accompanying the German note on Jan. 31, giving notice of unrestricted naval warfare.]

Break Is Announced.

"In view of this declaration," the note concludes, "which withdraws suddenly and without prior intimation the solemn assurance given in the imperial government's note of May 4, 1916, this government has no alternative consistent with the dignity and honor of the United States but to take the course which it explicitly announced in its note of April 18, 1916, it would take in the event that the imperial government did not declare and effect an abandonment of the methods of submarine warfare then employed and to which the imperial government now purposes again to resort.

"The president has therefore directed me to announce to your excellency that all diplomatic relations between the United States and the German empire are severed and that the American ambassador at Berlin will be immediately withdrawn, and in accordance with such announcement to deliver to your excellency your passports.

"I have the honor to be

"ROBERT LANSING."

No specific instructions have been sent to facilitate the withdrawal of Americans now in Germany, but Ambassador Gerard has been instructed to keep them posted as to developments.

THE TWO AMBASSADORS—RECALLED AND DISMISSED

UNDERWOOD UNDERWOOD

JAMES W. GERARD.

COUNT VON BERNSTORFF.

BRITISHERS SEE DRAWBACKS IN ENTRY OF U. S.

Entente Prisoners and Relief for Belgium Suffer by the American Break.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—The American rupture with Germany has created the deepest impression here of any event since the first war days of August, 1914. There were no crowds around the newspaper offices nor the exhibition of excitement as in those days, because the public has been hardened to sensational events. But the general feeling is one of satisfaction mixed with a considerable measure of surprise.

British officials recognize that the new situation brings drawbacks as well as advantages to British interests. Great anxiety is felt for the welfare of entente prisoners in Germany, who now are deprived of the assistance and measures of guardianship which the American consular service and embassy have been able to render, and doubts are felt whether the other neutral establishments will be able to do as much for the interned civilians and military prisoners.

Belgian Relief Suffers.

Belgian relief work is faced with the greatest danger, as the withdrawal of the American commission may result in its complete collapse and bring hundreds of thousands face to face with starvation.

The universal feeling here is that the United States will inevitably be forced into war and the part which she will be able to play therein is the chief topic of discussion, coupled with speculation as to its effect upon the supply of munitions to Europe.

England's intense interest in "what America is going to do about it" was manifest in the foreign office action in keeping constantly in touch with American Ambassador Walter Hines Page.

No less was it apparent in British newspapers' action in subordinating even the news of the situation with which Great Britain is confronted in the new "blockade of frightfulness" to copious cabled dispatches from America.

Hear of Housatonic Case.

The news of the sinking of the American steamer Housatonic as well as the contents of the president's address came too late for the evening papers, but wherever the sinking of the American vessel was known it was assumed that it would go far toward precipitating war. The new German campaign of unrestricted submarine warfare is regarded here with composure. On the other hand, the withdrawal of the shipping of Scandinavia, Holland, and Spain from traffic with England is recognized as a serious factor. The public, however, looks confidently to the admiralty to speed up its anti-submarine measures at least as fast as Germany increases her fleet of submarines, while it is expected that the German ships in American ports will soon reinforce Atlantic mercantile traffic.

Excitement in Germany.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 3.—Dispatches from Berlin this afternoon declared there was the greatest excitement throughout Germany because of the tensity of the German-American situation.

The newspaper Tidente, in publishing these dispatches, said Germans agree the "worst period of the war has arrived; that Zeppelin raids are next in order."

[The above dispatch was, of course, filed before news of the break in diplomatic relations between America and Germany had become known abroad.]

Chicago Elks Laud Break, Although It Mars Banquet

Resolutions commending the stand of President Wilson in the war situation, and United States Senator Ollie James of Kentucky for remaining at his post in Washington instead of being their principal speaker, were telegraphed to Senator James at Washington last night by Chicago lodge, No. 4, B. P. O. E., from their banquet hall in the Congress hotel.

LLOYD GEORGE'S SPEECH BRANDS ENEMY PIRATES

Germany Respects No Flag but the Black Flag, He Says at Home Town.

CARNARVON, Wales, Feb. 3.—David Lloyd George, Britain's prime minister, speaking here on his first visit to his home town since he was named premier, declared that Germany's announcement concerning the new submarine policy was a statement to the world that Germany henceforth pays respect to "no flag except the black flag."

"It is, after all," he said, "only a development and advance along the road to complete barbarism, which is crushing out of that country the last shreds of civilization.

"Germany intends to sink ships without warning. No respect will be paid henceforth to any flag except the black flag.

"Germany graciously permits American ships to sail under the masks which are customary for Dutch cattle boats. Such insolence is only insanity."

"We can overcome it," the premier continued, "but only if the nation is prepared to back the government with the whole of its resources. The nation must support the government in money, labor, and in sacrifice of conveniences and comforts. Then we shall pull through.

"When the smoke of this great conflict has been dissolved," the premier went on, "there will reappear a new Britain. It will be the old country still, but it will be a new country. Its commerce, trade, and industries will be new. There will be new conditions of life and toil, new conditions for capital and labor alike, and new relations between both of them and the state. Old principles will still survive, but there will be a new outlook and character in the land. The men and women of this country will become fine building material for the new Britain that is to be.

The premier referred to the work done by the ministry of munitions and said that at the end of the Somme offensive there had been more guns and more munitions than when the battle began.

The government already had saved many thousand tons of shipping, had arranged for construction of new ships, and had set up a great new organization for the production of food. They were working hard, and "I think effectively, at the urgent problem of dealing with the piratical brutality of Germany on the high seas."

Mr. Lloyd George said the one task was to mobilize the resources of all the entente allies and utilize them for the best purpose possible.

NEUTRALS

Asked by President to Follow America if Further Steps Are Taken.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 3.—In President Wilson's address to congress today he said he would expect neutrals to follow his course if he found it necessary to take further steps to protect American rights.

Officials tonight did not make clear whether the president expected the neutrals to follow his example in the steps already taken or whether he expected them to follow the steps the United States would take in the next eventuality.

Some officials who were asked to explain the uncertainty declined to discuss the subject, and others were inclined to the belief that the president hoped other neutrals would, by severing diplomatic relations, make a combined protest with the United States against the latest war zone decree. The effect of a united neutral protest, some officials hoped, would have the effect of modifying Germany's announced intentions.

CENSOR BLANKET CONCEALS ARMY ACTIVITIES HERE

Secret Service Chief Also Gets Increased Staff to Watch for Spies and Plots.

A censorship of all information pertaining to the United States army and navy and the activities of the secret service department was established in Chicago yesterday on orders issued from Washington. It was rigorously enforced at the headquarters of the central department of the army in the federal building.

Capt. William Bryden, assigned to the office of Maj. Gen. Thomas H. Barry, was put in temporary charge as censor. It is likely that other duties, however, will cause Gen. Barry to relieve Capt. Bryden of the post within a few days, and a new appointment will be made.

That important orders have been transmitted to the commanders of the three great divisions of the army from Washington was the frank admission of attachés of Gen. Barry's staff. But every attempt to learn the nature of any of the plans or orders was met by Gen. Barry with a grin.

Throw Out Spy Net.

Another branch of the federal government which will automatically assume an important place in the scheme of warlike affairs is the investigation bureau of the department of justice. Hinton G. Clabaugh, head of the local division, during the day was notified that his office would be augmented by an additional force of investigators—how many could not be learned.

The classes of duties that will fall to the investigation bureau are multiple. One of these, however, will be the seeking out of organizations and persons who may attempt to form or carry on a system of espionage against the government in matters pertaining to the army and navy.

Big Corps of Operatives.

Mr. Clabaugh ridiculed the idea that private detective agencies had been hired by the United States, and added:

"Any report purporting to be about any of the activities of this department can be branded as a fake. We would be defeating our own ends to let even a hint of what we are doing or intend to do become known."

FIRE DEAD TOLL RAISED TO 12; 2 BODIES FOUND

Two more bodies, ice incased and blackened by fire, were taken yesterday from the ruins of the West Fourteenth place tenement building demolished early Friday morning by a gas explosion. This brings the total of known dead to twelve, with the probabilities that another score of bodies are frozen in the ruins. Battalion Chief Dillon later expressed doubt that any of those known to be imprisoned in the wrecked structure can be alive.

ORDER ILLINOIS TROOPS BACK TO FORT SHERIDAN

Break with Germany Likely to Halt Mustering Out.

Rockford, Ill., Feb. 3.—Soldiers of the Third infantry regiment, Illinois national guard, who are at home here on furloughs, were notified by telegraph this morning to return at once to Fort Sheridan. The break with Germany probably will halt indefinitely the mustering out from federal service of the troops. The regiment has just returned from the Mexican border.

Call New York Militia.

New York, Feb. 3.—The entire national guard of New York state and the naval militia were ordered out tonight by Gov. Whitman after a conference with Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan.

Gen. O'Ryan was directed to have every arsenal, armory, and water shed adequately guarded by the militiamen and Commodore Forshew of the naval militia was ordered to protect all bridges.

Naval Reserve Is Called.

Bridgeport, Conn., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—The local contingent of the naval reserves received orders tonight to mobilize at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Pershing Gets the News.

Army Base, Columbus, N. M., Feb. 3.—[Censored.]—The army camps here were electrified by news of the diplomatic break between this country and Germany. A bulletin was flashed to Gen. Pershing on his northward march to the border.

It was unofficially declared here that certain preparatory orders as a result of the diplomatic break have already been given.

Orders Cavalry Division.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 3.—The war department has ordered that a cavalry division be formed at El Paso, to consist of the Fifth, Seventh, Eighth, Eleventh, Thirteenth, and Seventeenth regiments. Gen. Eben Swift will command the division.

Close Army Reservation.

San Diego, Cal., Feb. 3.—The military reservation at Fort Rosecrans, Point Loma, was closed to visitors today. None but soldiers and civilian employés on government works was allowed to land.

BERLIN MODIFIES BLOCKADE ZONE

BERLIN, Feb. 3.—The following official statement was given out here today:

The eastern limit of the blockaded zone around England has been altered as follows:

The line now runs from the point 52 degrees 30 minutes north latitude, 4 degrees east longitude, across to the point 56 degrees north latitude, 4 degrees east longitude, to the point 56 degrees north latitude, 4 degrees 50 minutes east longitude. Otherwise the line remains as already announced.

The effect of the alteration of the blockaded zone is to move about twenty miles further from the coast that part of the eastern limit of the blockaded zone which lies off the northeastern Dutch coast and Schleswig-Holstein. This affords Dutch shipping a wider pathway to the Atlantic through the eastern part of the North sea.

The Luxury Car

The Coupe

It is the conception of an artist, translated in a manner unusually distinctive—in line, in color, in detail.

The smart body is swung low to the ground—and is most convenient of entrance and exit.

It is finished, as you prefer, in a deep rich blue or a vogueish green.

Upholstery and interior are daintily done in a mist gray fabric or a heavy French tapestry—whichever you choose.

Four passengers are comfortably accommodated—all facing forward. And a generous space is provided for ample luggage.

The top is permanent—of the Springfield Type—with removable windows. And the squeaks and rattles so usual in the ordinary closed car are entirely eliminated in the Jordan.

In detail, in appointments, in finish, the Jordan Coupe is irresistible.

Only a limited number will be built, for those who want a most distinctive vehicle.

Permit us to demonstrate the Coupe—or any of the other equally distinctive Jordan enclosed cars.

UNITED STATES NOT PREPARED FOR WAR; FAULTS OF ARMY AND NAVY SHOWN

FLEETS WEAK IN MEN; LAND FORCE LACKING

Navy Needs Half Year and Army One to Two Years for Preparation.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—The United States is not prepared for war.

Neither the army nor the navy is ready for a struggle with any first class power.

Experts agree that it will take at least six months to bring the navy as present constituted up to 100 per cent fighting efficiency.

While the present army is as good as any that exists, in size it is infinitesimal. It would take, according to conservative estimates, from one to two years for the United States to raise an army of 1,000,000 men, outfit it, train it, and put it in the field, ready for action. In order to train it practically the entire regular army as now constituted would have to be turned into an instruction corps and the better officers of the rapidly diminishing national guard would have to be called on.

Weaknesses of American Navy.

The navy's weaknesses were shown up in a startling manner by Congressman Fred A. Britten of Chicago in the house yesterday. Briefly stated, they are these:

An actual shortage of 24,000 men to man the present ships.

The inability of the entire navy to mobilize for lack of men, approximately 50 per cent of the tonnage being tied up at the docks because of inadequate crews.

A shortage in battle cruisers and auxiliary ships.

The army's weaknesses have been exposed year in and year out by members of the general staff and heads of departments in their appearances before congressional committees in an effort to put the army on its feet. Here are some of the major weaknesses of the army:

A shortage of men; no reserves, and a shortage of arms, ammunition, and supplies of all sorts.

Austria, in the first eighteen months of the present war, expended 15,000,000,000 rounds of small arms, or rifle, ammunition. The United States has only 300,000,000 rounds on hand today.

Machine Guns Almost Negligible.

European armies have found that a minimum of twelve machine guns to a regiment are absolutely essential to successful attack. The United States has a maximum of four guns to a regiment at the present time.

A total of 17,280 machine guns are needed for the American army. There are less than 1,500 on hand now. True, an order was recently placed for 4,000 new machine guns. But deliveries are not to begin until June 1.

Gen. Crozier in his recent appearance before the house military committee, said the army needs 560,00 cavalry pistols. It has 180,000 on hand.

At the present time, if the United States should call for 1,000,000 volunteers, it would not have rifles enough to go around. It has only 750,000 on hand now, and facilities at the government arsenals for making only 300,000 a year even though working the arsenals on double shifts.

The army is also woefully short in field artillery and field artillery ammunition. It hasn't even an adequate supply of smaller field artillery guns which are used to blow up trenches.

Field Guns Are Outclassed.

Maj. Robert R. McCormick, of the First Illinois cavalry, who has been with the British army on the French front, and with the Russian army on the eastern front, in appearing before the senate military committee recently compared the American fieldpieces with those of the French.

"The French heavy fieldpiece," he said, "ranges 15,000 metres and weighs 5700 pounds; the American heavy fieldpiece ranges 14,000 yards, a mile less, and weighs 10,000 pounds. The French light fieldpiece fires sixteen aimed shots a minute, and the American fieldpiece, eight aimed shots a minute. The American mountain gun is a relic, and should be used to decorate the parks in Washington.

We never have had and have not now any large caliber heavy artillery, nor have regular officers ever had any opportunity to practice artillery fire with aeroplanes. There was no such thing as a steel hat or a hand bomb on the Mexican border."

Border Volunteers Not Fit.

Maj. McCormick pointed out that the army is equipped with only about ten per cent as many machine guns as are necessary for the small number of troops we have. This fact was also admitted by Gen. Crozier when he appeared before the house military affairs committee.

Although administration officials insist that by calling out the national guard and the regular army they will have an army of at least 250,000 ready over night, Maj McCormick's testimony indicated clearly that the guard, despite its service on the Mexican border, is still wholly unfit for actual warfare and actually without supplies and equipment to go to war.

If it becomes necessary to raise an army, this country will have to go through practically the same experience England passed through during the first two years of the war—that is, build one up from almost nothing. Men, material, and supplies, all will have to be acquired before an American army can be put into the field.

Navy Better Than Army.

Although the navy is not in shape to give a 100 per cent account of itself, it is in a better way than the army.

What ships we have are the equal, ship for ship, of those in any navy in the world, but with 50 per cent of our ships tied up at the docks for the lack of men to man them, if it becomes necessary to impress them into service those which are now on the ocean either will have to go greatly undermanned or else take a lot of novices with no experience. In an engagement with an enemy it is questionable which would be the more dangerous.

Until a little over a year ago the navy also was short of ammunition. In this respect today, however, it is in fine condition. There is enough ammunition on hand now to wear out every gun not only on the ships actually at sea but on those tied up at the docks. The reserve supply was brought up to standard largely as a result of the effort made by the big navy group in congress, headed by Representatives Britten of Chicago, Batter of Pennsylvania, and Gardner of Massachusetts.

No Steps to Raise Armies.

With neither the army nor the navy actually ready for war, no steps had been taken tonight by the war department to make the army of the United States ready for any emergency that might arise. It was stated at the war department that nothing had been done to hasten recruiting, to obtain additional supplies, or to prepare to equip and train a volunteer or a drafted army.

Outside of the general preparations that have been made by the general staff toward the preparation of a bill to be offered in congress for universal military training, which would authorize the use of the present army to instruct the new army, no step has been taken to build up the United States army, which now numbers less than 125,000 men.

No meeting of the council of national defense has been called to prepare the industrial and civilian forces of the United States for a possible conflict, and no effort has been made to hasten the strengthening of the coast refenses.

All day long the war department has been besieged with telegrams and telephone calls from prominent citizens all over the country offering their services in the event of a war. Col. Theodore Roosevelt offered to raise a division. It was estimated that if all the offers could be taken up, and if all the men could furnish the troops they said they could, an army of nearly 1,000,000 men could be organized right away.

Must Take Raw Recruits.

However, probably 1 per cent or less of these men would have seen previous military service, according to officers of the army. It would be the rawest of raw recruits that would make up its bulk; recruits so new that it would take a year to train them even if all the officers in the army were available for training purposes.

Calls and messages were also received from munition plants, from factories, and from business men offering to do what they could. None of these offers was answered.

It was stated that all of the coast artillery corps which have been at the border have been returned, so that no fort on the coast is without its unit of men, although some of these units are sadly depleted, which are woefully weak in many particulars.

Garrisons Only Protect Coast.

With the whole of the available forces of the army at the border, there is not a single man outside of the garrisons of the coast forts and the coast artillery available for duty to guard the Atlantic seaboard. Once past the navy and the coast defenses an armed expedition could land on our shores without the firing of a shot.

All the troops must remain at the border until measures are taken to provide othen protection.

'ILLINOIS BACKS YOU,' LOWDEN'S WORD TO WILSON

Governor Will Ask Legislature to Pledge Full Support of State to President.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Illinois is ready to go the limit in backing up President Wilson and the government of the United States.

Gov. Frank O. Lowden, upon the instant that the flash was communicated to him that diplomatic relations had been severed, wheeled around and dictated a telegram addressed to President Wilson at the White House, pledging the unalloyed support of the state to the president at this crisis.

Later in the afternoon Gov. Lowden said without reserve that he himself is prepared to take his part in war if war shall come.

"I should feel it to be my duty, in the event of war," Gov. Lowden said to newspaper men, "to do my part, I shall feel very lonely if I could not go with my old regiment."

Would Join Old Regiment.

This is the First Illinois infantry of which Gov. Lowden was lieutenant colonel. He is not now a member of the regiment, nor is he under legal obligation to go with it. If there is real trouble, the governor gave every indication, however, that his purpose is to seek to go with the First if it is necessary to employ the Illinois troops.

Gov. Lowden's telegram follows:

The President, White House, Washington, D. C.:

A crisis in our international affairs is upon us. The president is charged under the constitution with the conduct of our foreign affairs. The president has acted. It is the solemn duty of all Americans, without respect to party, to rally to his support. I have no doubt that the people of Illinois, whether native or naturalized, of whatever party, will measure up to their full duty in this emergency.

I shall recommend that the general assembly adopt appropriate resolutions pledging to the president the hearty support of Illinois. (Signed.) FRANK O. LOWDEN, Governor of Illinois.

Message to Legislature.

Gov. Lowden said that he will follow up this telegram with a special message to the assembly when it reconvenes on Tuesday recommending such action as may seem proper at that time.

Inquiry at the office of the adjutant general showed that no word has come from Washington with respect to any impending troops movement or mobilization.

Montana Sends Its Pledge.

Helena, Mont., Feb. 3.—Gov. Stewart telegraphed President Wilson today the following message:

"Whatever the eventuality in the crisis now confronting our nation, permit me to assure you that the people of Montana stand loyally behind you in any step that may be deemed necessary in upholding the honor of our country."

Utah Promises Support.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Feb. 3.—The following telegram was sent today to President Wilson by Gov. Simon Bamberger:

"In this grave crisis in our country's affairs I want you to know that the people of Utah are squarely back of you in anything you deem best to be done under these exceptional circumstances."

Other Messages Reach Wilson.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—Governors of states began early in the afternoon to telegraph President Wilson approving his course. The first to come were from Gov. Lowden of Illinois and Gov. Manning of South Carolina.

TAKE CONTROL OF WIRELESS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—While official announcement of action by the navy department was refused, it became known just before noon that every wireless station charted in government archives is now virtually under government control. Such wireless stations include Sayville, Tuckerton, and all other great stations.

WHAT ILLINOIS CAN DO TOWARD MANNING FLEET

Has Recruiting Station, Naval Reserve, and Lake Seamen.

An air of expectancy prevailed yesterday at the central United States naval recruiting station at 130 North Fifth avenue when definite news of the break with Germany arrived.

The same feeling prevailed on the Commodore, the Illinois naval reserve ship anchored at the foot of the State street bridge.

"No orders have been received, but this office is holding itself in readiness for an emergency; a rush in recruiting is expected when the office opens Monday morning," was the statement given out at the naval recruiting station.

"Ready in a Day."

"The Illinois naval reserves will be in readiness for duty within twenty-four hours," declared Senior Ensign A. R. Pieper in charge of the Commodore.

There are 800 members of the naval reserves—almost enough to man one of the large battleships. They are in excellent condition, Ensign Pieper said.

Included in the naval reserves, 350 of whom are Chicagoans, is a completely outfitted company of marines.

This company of marines, under Capt. Frederick Steele, was organized a year ago.

At the naval recruiting station it was said that if war comes Chicago probably will furnish 25,000 men for the navy during the first six months, this being increased to 50,000 in a year.

40,000 Able Seamen.

There are 40,000 able seamen in America not identified with the navy, who are members of the International Seamen's union.

Many of the members of the union have seen service in naval warfare. A healthy percentage served in the Spanish-American war.

Victor Olander said yesterday it would not be a difficult matter to mass the members of the sailors of the great lakes.

Training Station Guard Doubled.

Guards about the Great Lakes Naval Training station were doubled yesterday. Capt W. A. Moffatt announced that the step had been taken as a precautionary measure and without orders from his superiors. No visitors will be allowed. There are 1,800 officers, petty officers and apprentice seamen at the station.

The Chicago, North shore and Milwaukee railroad has notified all its agents to aid in recruiting in the navy.

War Talk Stirs No Fears, Says Chief Schuettler

"Everybody is peaceful, quiet and loyal," said Chief Schuettler last night. "There have been no calls for special protection because of any war feeling. The people are loyal and ready to fight for their country."

LAKE STEAMERS USELESS IN WA UNLESS REBUIL

Salt Water Fittings Necess —Months Are Needed fo Alteration Work.

Great lake steamships, if war co will be practically useless for months as adjuncts to the United navy.

A report that lake boats may be over by the government brought the following statement from an of the Lake Michigan Passenger association:

No Use to Government.

"Lake steamships would be pra ly useless to the government. No could leave the great lakes befor navigation season opens up lat March, and there is only one boat in the lake service fit for salt work.

"This ship, the Nevada, owne the Goodrich Transit company equipped with salt water condenser the galvanized pipings necessary t water service, and is fitted with deep sea rudder required for ocea surance. The other boats are equipped with these necessities changes would have to be made in yards, which are booked up for and a half in advance. At the yards at South Chicago, Manistee, land, Detroit, or Buffalo, it would at least three months to ma changes necessary.

No Sea Craft on Lakes.

"The great lakes are skinned as far as sea-going craft are conc One French line recently bought of fourteen old boats for use trade and the former owner boats made $450,000 on the deal.

"Another circumstance which hinder the use of lake boats as is the fact that the shortest lock the boats must pass throug get to the ocean is 264 feet long many of the boats would have cut into two, bulk-headed and again after passing through the This is true for instance of the bus, and it would apply to many larger lake passenger ships."

A "Better" Player-Piano

The Strad

Price $450

The purchase of a player-piano is something that should be considered with great caution. It is a thing that should ordinarily last a lifetime. For this reason we strongly recommend the Strad, for, though the price is a trifle higher than the ordinary player-piano, it is well worth the difference in cost. Do not buy a less expensive player-piano if you can afford the Strad.

We urge you to refrain from buying any player-piano before you have given us the opportunity to place before you the superior merits of the Strad player-piano. The advantages of our payment plan are offered to those who desire to purchase a Strad on time payments. You can purchase the Strad player-piano on payments as low as $10 per month.

Wurlitzer is Chicago's only "one-price—no-commission" piano store — the store that makes you sure that what you get for what you pay is of the highest possible quality.

On the morning of Feb. 1 we captured the last line of trenches but one east of the Tigris-Hai junction, on the right bank of the latter river. A Turkish counter attack was repulsed. One hundred and sixty-six prisoners, including four officers, remain in our hands.

Later in the day we attacked and captured enemy trenches west of Tigris-Hai junction, killing a large number of the enemy, but a subsequent counter attack compelled our troops to relinquish some of the ground gained.

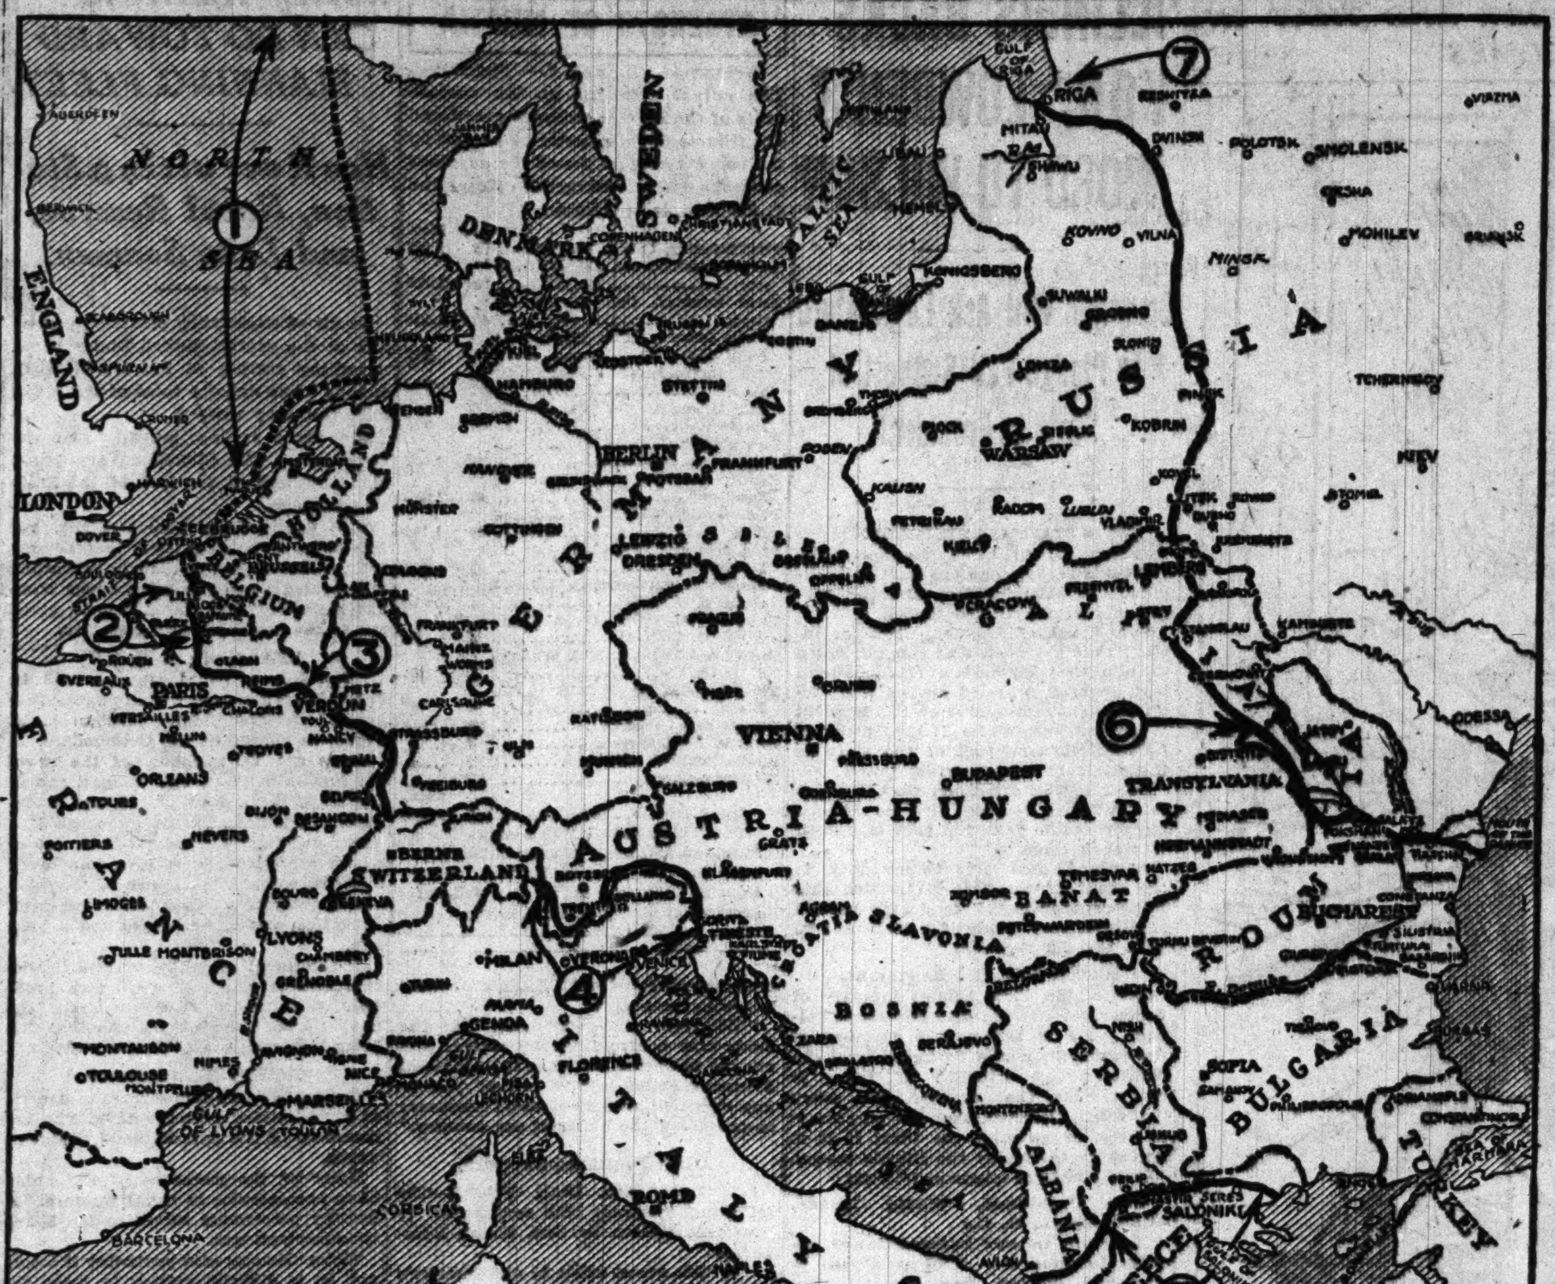
WEEK'S PROGRESS OF THE WAR



Severe cold and snow restricted the week's operations along the European battle fronts to minor engagements and scouting skirmishes. There was little of significance concerning land battles during the first half of the week and less during the latter half, the entire attention of the world being centered for the last three days on the German submarine blockade regulations for the North sea, circling England and the eastern Mediterranean. The ruthless U-boat warfare announced by the kaiser has brought the United States to a severance of diplomatic relations and to the verge of war.

1—The German U-boat blockade lines bottle up Holland and Denmark and close in part of Sweden, besides circling the British isles and running along the Spanish coast to France. The United States is allowed to penetrate the zone to Falmouth, England, with one boat a week, or more if especially arranged for.

2—On land, in the Ypres and Somme regions the British and French claimed some minor gains during the week, but the fighting lost much of the intensity of the previous seven day period.

3—The Verdun front brought no development of importance. There was some vigorous fighting around Hill 304, but the Germans held their position.

4—On the Italian front artillery dueling continued with no changes in positions of note.

5—Greece has dropped almost out of the limelight, and the Macedonian front is comparatively quiet.

6—The Russians made the important progress of the week in the upper Bistritza valley district on the Roumanian front. Several thousand prisoners were captured and the Germans were forced back along a three mile front in the Kimpolung-Jacobni road.

7—The Russians also claimed the advantage in the week's battles in the Riga sector, where the Germans surrendered a stand along the road to Kalnzem.

RUSH FOR FLAGS; THRONGS SING NATIONAL AIRS

Chicago Breaks Out Colors—Cafes and Theater Crowds Cheer "O, Say."

Chicago gave an immediate response in patriotic spirit to the news that President Wilson had given the German ambassador his passports. From the time the board of trade, getting information of the crisis among the earliest, unfurled a massive flag covering a large part of its building until dusk flag after flag was raised.

On public buildings, on office skyscrapers, on clubhouses, and on residences flags were hurriedly raised as an indication of support for President Wilson in whatever action he considers necessary.

Department stores found an immediate strain on their supply of flags.

Schools to Fly Colors.

Before leaving for the east today, Jacob M. Loeb, president of the board of education, will arrange to have every school fly the colors. Mayor Thompson gave instructions to have the flag displayed on municipal buildings and government authorities took the same action.

Throughout the city, the possibility of war with Germany supplanted practically every other topic of conversation. In the hotels, the streets, elevated coaches and street cars, and cafes, it was the dominant theme.

Women made plans to respond to the first call for nurses. At meetings and parties they asserted that the women of the United States would be as ready as the women of Europe to do their part.

Sing Anthem in Theaters.

In several theaters and cafés demonstrations continued for many minutes after the playing of the national anthem. Some of the theaters hastily obtained large numbers of American flags and scattered them throughout the audiences.

The Garrick theater was the scene of one of the largest demonstrations. Players and audience joined in singing "The Star Spangled Banner," while the colors were dropped from the curtains.

At the Chicago theater, the Illinois theater, the Majestic, the Auditorium, where 5,000 persons witnessed "Hip, Hip, Hooray," the Cort, and George M. Cohan's Grand demonstrations lasting a quarter of an hour took place during the intermissions. Flags in both places were distributed by the ushers.

At the Hotel La Salle more than 1,000 diners stood, cheered, applauded, and waved napkins as the orchestras played "Yankee Doodle," which reached a frenzy with the playing of "My Country 'Tis of Thee." At the College Inn and the Pompeian room similar scenes were enacted.

NAVY TO CONVOY AMERICAN SHIPS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—Convoying of American merchantmen through European waters with warships is being considered by the government.

The sailing of American vessels for Europe is now considered by the state department as a military measure. No general order has yet gone out, it was indicated at the department; the intention of the United States is said to be to take every physical precaution for the protection of such ships.

MAY GO, TOO

Austrian Envoy Who Is Likely to Be Given His Passports; Recently Arrived in New York After Many Difficulties en Route.

COUNT TARNOWSKI TARNOW.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—That the credentials of Count Tarnowski, new Austrian ambassador, may not be accepted by this government was regarded as a possibility in official circles here this afternoon.

The state department announced that the matter of accepting his credentials had not been determined upon, but it was significant that a communication from Austria—probably a note similar to Germany's sea war declaration—came in this afternoon.

It is known Austria was sending such a note. Hence, if it is joining hands with Germany, there is no reason that officials can see why similar treatment should not be accorded to the Austrian envoy as was accorded to Bernstorff.

SOCIALISTS ASK U. S. EMBARGO TO END GREAT WAR

A "national emergency committee" of the Socialist party yesterday forwarded to President Wilson and congressional leaders in Washington a fervid appeal for an embargo on all supplies to the European belligerents. The message was signed by Victor L. Berger, Adolph Germer and John M. Work. It follows in part:

"In behalf of the great multitude of socialists in the United States, and in order to preserve peace in our country, we urge that a complete embargo be placed upon all shipments from the United States to any and all of the belligerents.

"We take this position because it is the only way in which our country can take a genuinely neutral position, and because it is the only way to keep our products at home where they are sorely needed to assist in reducing the cost of living.

"From the beginning of the war the United States has obeyed the letter of international law, but has constantly violated its spirit by shipping supplies to one side when it was prevented from shipping them to the other.

"All three of these wrongs—the participation in bloodshed, the anti-neutrality, and the exportation of our substance—would be avoided by an embargo.

"Follow the example of your illustrious predecessor, Thomas Jefferson, Mr. President, and have a complete embargo placed on all shipments. It will end the war."

'STREET LEVEL' OPINION BACKS UP U. S. ACTION

Citizens from Here and There Hope for Peace, but Are Ready to Fight.

Street level comment on the strained condition of affairs in Washington, assummed varied tones last night. Men in every walk of life, brokers, street car conductors, merchants, laborers, bankers, clerks, teamsters, tailors, the average citizen sas they came, were approached by reporters for THE TRIBUNE and asked for an opinion.

Hope was generally expressed that war may be avoided. But this in most cases was followed with the declaration that every one is with the president if the final break comes.

Critics Outspoken, Too.

Here are some of the "street level" interviews:

E. C. Handley, 3938 West Twenty-second street, conductor on surface car: "Germany has the right to stop all the ships she wants to, if they are carrying contraband. She is making her last stand, in which international law plays no part. After she had established the boundary and given the United States warning, it is our own fault if any ships are sunk."

Nathan Goldman, 1432 South Central Park avenue, clothes cutter: "The United States did wrong in breaking off relations with Germany. It will probably lead to war, and this country is not prepared."

Man who wouldn't give name for fear that "boss" would fire him: "In the first place I don't see what object the United States has in breaking off relations. It seems to me that it is looking for war, and I hope it gets all that is coming to it."

Has "Done His Bit."

Edward Smith, 1236 South Forty-eighth court: "I think that it was a foolish idea to sever relations, but if war comes I will be ready, as I have done my 'bit' before."

Man who would not give name: "I don't think it was necessary to break off relations, but if war does come I stand prepared to help."

D. H. Lenters, 2403 Fillmore avenue, private detective: "The United States undoubtedly was right when it severed connections with Germany. If war comes I am ready."

Nick Poppas, 2024 West Twenty-second street, a poolroom keeper: "The United States did right."

Victor E. Kossian, 3025 South Karlov avenue, inspector at Western Electric company: "I think that the United States did wrong. Germany is making her last stand. I see no reason why we should interfere."

Frank Massener, machinist, 2207 Wentworth avenue: "The United States will declare war and then whip Germany."

C. E. Firestone, 1248 North Clark street, car inspector for the Pennsylvania: "As long as Germany does not interfere with American ships we have no right to interfere with her."

Ralph Lee Goodman, president of the Boys' Brotherhood Republic: "I think the United States has the right to into fight in the ranks, but I'll wash dishes in the mobilization camps if necessary."

LOYALTY

Pledged to America by Patriotic Organizations, Leaders of Industry and Individuals.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Pledges of loyalty to the United States and President Wilson by patriotic organizations, representatives of industry, and many individuals followed closely the news from Washington.

William Fellowes Morgan, president of the Merchants' Association of New York, sent a telegram to the president on behalf of the 5,000 New York business and professional men constituting the membership of the association, assuring him of "our support in this national crisis."

Louis N. Hammerling, president of the American Association of Foreign Language Newspapers, representing 467 publications in many different languages, sent a telegram to President Wilson pledging the support of his association.

The United States Eastern Aeroplane corporation wired the war department that the company's factory and aviation school in Brooklyn are at the disposal of the government, and that the government "can have anything we have or can provide."

Officers of the United States Junior army, recently organized by Robert Vincent, a 15 year old boy who served as a dispatch rider at the French front, sent a telegram to Secretary of War Baker offering the services of 500 boys in the organization, should "need arise."

The Aero Club of America, in a letter tonight to Maj. Gen. Wood, offered its entire resources for the development of the country's air service. The communication stated that with the general's approval the club would immediately take charge of all detail work in registering recruits. The plan would provide at the outset 1,000 aviators under training.

terfere with both the allies and Germany when they are broaching upon our rights, and that we did right in our action with Germany."

M. J. Gressman, a policeman for twenty-six years: "'War is hell' on the common people, because it raises prices. I am an American through and through, and I am for Wilson, but, as he said in his message, 'God grant that we can stay out of war.'"

A man who refused to give his name said: "I am with Wilson, and I have three boys who will fight. If we were to back down we would be the laughing stock of the world."

Excuses for Germany.

Mr. C. C. Janzen, a Kansas man here on business: "There are only two reasons that I can see for Germany's actions, either she wants an excuse for quitting by saying that she can't fight the whole world, or she wants to get America into the peace conference."

Harry H. Sheldon of Indianapolis, salesman: "I believe in standing by the president, but I can't understand the necessity at the present time of breaking with Germany."

Frank J. Wilson, former alderman of the Twenty-seventh ward: "It is a regrettable situation. Of course, every patriotic citizen stands ready to back up the president. Nevertheless I feel that we are confronted with a war whose grave consequences will outweigh everything else."

W. B. Netterstrom, 1444 Foster avenue, real estate: "Our national honor demanded the step. We couldn't maintain our prestige before the world if we put up with the slap in the face that Germany has given us. I may be too big

CHEAPER FOOD A TRANSIENT HOPE, EXPERTS ASSERT

Reduction of Shipments Due to German Blockade Declared Incidental to Prices.

The ham and eggs of the immediate future may cost less than those of the last few months if the new German submarine blockade becomes a reality, but the relief to the family pocketbook which a reduction in foreign demand may bring will be only temporary, almost evanescent.

Those in touch with the markets for flour, canned meats, canned milk, eggs, butter, canned fruits, and vegetables declare a shortage will appear even though the ever hungry maw of Europe is closed for a time.

"Big depreciations in food values if a war comes are a possibility, but will not last," said Frank H. Armstrong, president of Reid, Murdoch & Co. "Owing to the tremendous shipments abroad, the supply of milk, cheese, and canned goods in the United States is small, and a drop in prices will be temporary."

"The general impression seems to be that any marked change in foreign conditions, such as peace or war, will bring a setback in prices, but, in my opinion, the shortage of supply will assert itself and prices will return to their former plane," said Lawrence A. Carton, treasurer of Swift & Co.

"I cannot foresee any lasting reduction in the price of foodstuffs," asserted Oscar B. McGlasson, secretary of McNeil & Higgins, and former president of the National Association of Wholesale Grocers.

"War means waste," said Sol Westerfeld, an official of the retail grocers' organization. "The surplus which would come with the cessation of a foreign demand will be eaten up by our own soldiers and sailors, if war comes."

Daily "Talks" to the Many Classes That Drink Too Much

Watch for your "classification." It will be published in this paper some day during February.

These talks, prepared by ex-Senator J. E. Bruce, are based upon his thirty years' experience and observation as a lawyer and banker in public life, and knowledge acquired during the past seven years exclusively devoted to the international work of the modern "Neal Way."

He will tell the "Tired Out" professional man, the "Nervous, High-Strung" business man, and the "Overworked" employee of this "strenuous age" how he can easily, quickly and effectively overcome the cause and effects and avoid the well known final results of his daily increasing "stimulation"—without leaving home or neglecting business.

Read these "Talks" every day until you find the one that "hits your case." In the meantime ask the head NEAL INSTITUTE, No. 811-T East 49th Street, Chicago (Oakland 489)—or Springfield, Illinois—or No. 716-T Paseo Boulevard, Kansas City, Mo., for full information about the humane, scientific and modern methods of the "NEAL WAY"—taken at home in ordinary cases—or in any case at nearest one of the

PALM BEACH AIR IN YOUR HOME ALL WINTER

Hot, dry air—artificial heat—the kind produced by present heating systems, is positively injurious to health because it rarely contains more than 25% moisture, whereas it should be double 25% to avoid many so-called "winter ills." Living in superheated, dry air rooms and then going outdoors where the humidity is 60% to 70% causes a shock to the system liable to result in colds, grippe or pneumonia. No home with hot, dry air can ever be comfortable, even if heated to 75 degrees, because of the lack of correct humidity, while properly humidified air demands only 65 degrees. The extra 5 or 10 degrees are the hardest to get in cold weather—they are the fuel-wasters.

For Your Health's Sake—Humidify!

Put the right moisture in the air in your home and you will have normal, summer-time air all winter through. Your family will be healthier and more comfortable. The only correct humidifier is the

American Humidifier

This apparatus works directly from the furnace. It is attached to the smokepipe next to the furnace by moving the check door farther away. This makes the humidifier an integral part of the furnace and operates itself by utilizing the valuable waste heat which formerly escaped through the smokepipe. Installed without extra charge. Note detailed illustration below of humidifier attached to furnace.

A Guarantee Bond, signed by an officer of this company, to the effect that the "American Humidifier" will positively humidify correctly, accompanies each machine installed by us.

STOCKS LEAP UP UNDER THE SPUR OF PATRIOTISM

Big Interests Unite to Stem the Decline—Wall Street Ablaze with Flags.

BY MARK WATSON.

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—After a momentary stagger from the impact of the Washington announcement of broken relations with Germany and the closing of the New York navy yard to all visitors, Wall street caught itself late this forenoon. The large banks and investment houses rushed into the sagging market with a flood of buying orders which sent Steel common upward nearly five points and the rest of the list bounding after the leader.

The market closed at noon stronger and with a far more confident tone than it has exhibited in weeks. Nervousness is over. The market knows how critical the situation is now, and seems to feel that knowledge even of bad news is better than uncertainty.

The financial district's reception of the news was inspiring. All the banks and brokerage houses were crowded with customers fully expectant of serious developments during the day.

Exchange in Patriotic Fervor.

The news crept over the tickers and over the private wires almost at the same time. There was a hush in most of the offices while the floor manager read the brief announcement, then a rush for the door, for the telephone, or in most cases for the counter.

Before the tape had finished spelling out the news of the withdrawal of Ambassador Gerard operators in the gallery of the produce exchange had seized a great American flag and swung it out over the pit to the accompaniment of a yell which fairly rattled the windows. Then some one with a resounding bass voice started "The Star Spangled Banner" and all trading stopped, while the whole exchange joined vigorously in the national anthem.

The chorus started enthusiasm up the street. Messengers ran to the brokers' offices. Telephone service was unspeakable, due to the terrific demands on every switchboard.

Street Brilliant with Flags.

Broad street was filled with racing figures which collided with each other in the press of the curb mob, already filling the street.

At the corner of Wall and Broad streets, across from the statue of George Washington, which stands in front of the subtreasury, another giant banner was flung out from an upper window. The crowd in the streets yelled, and one by one windows opened in every direction and new ensigns joined the mighty display. In fifteen minutes the whole street was brilliant with the Stars and Stripes whipping the heavy gale which had swept Manhattan all day.

Whether all this had some influence on the spirit of the traders may be theory. At any rate, the markets generally had stopped, stunned, at the first news, expected though it was. Then there had been a swift although not terrifying decline. Then came the great press of buying orders from the banks. It was a strong bull market at the close with every active issue at or close to the highest point of the day.

Cotton Drops, then Rallies.

Cotton went through much the same experience with an abrupt drop of 30 points at the first flash, and then a good recovery, not as great as that in stocks, for just now cotton is depending a good deal on southern buying for support and that buying is not strong. The stock market seems to have the cordial support of the best buying interests in the street.

Country Well Prepared Financially.

It is a fact that in many Wall street houses there is not only optimism, but rejoicing.

"This step should have been taken the day after the Lusitania was sunk, one market leader declared. The country today is united behind the president as it never has been before. The country's condition is sound. Speculation has been curbed, and market values are rarely higher than intrinsic value. A declaration of war might cause selling by the nervous, but I believe such a wave would be ended shortly, and I look for even greater industrial activity."

"The banks could not be in better shape than they are today," said a banker. "Nobody wishes war, or ought to wish it, but if it comes it will find America better prepared in every way than she has been before."

SCANDINAVIA

Norway and Sweden Sent Protests by Germany Against Their Treatment of the Kaiser's Submarines.

BERLIN, Feb. 3.—[By wireless to Sayville.]—Germany has sent a protest to the Norwegian and Swedish governments regarding the treatment of German submarines. The protest is directed particularly at Norway. The semi-official Nord Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung says it is hoped no situation which cannot be adjusted by a mutual understanding will be created. The Nord Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung says:

"A Norwegian order, which is directed against Germany, deprives submarines of their former character. The German point of view is comprehended as little by the Norwegian as by the Swedish government, and the new order, as well as the previous order, can be explained in the light of the important interests involving the neutrality of both states, situated so near to the theater of maritime war.

"The German government, therefore, expresses its standpoint in principle by a legal protest to the Norwegian and Swedish governments, without attaching practical consequences to this protest.

"It is to be hoped the fearful struggle which has exposed relations between belligerents and neutrals to so many difficult tests will not create between Germany and Norway a new cause of conflict which cannot be compromised in a spirit of mutual understanding and mutual concessions."

The relations between Norway and Germany have been strained for some time on account of the submarine question, although no word has been received of a new Norwegian order. The Norwegian government last October forbade submarines of the belligerent powers to traverse Norwegian waters except in cases of emergency. Germany made a protest, to which Norway responded in November.

SOLDIERS PAID WELL IN CANADA; RESPONSE GOOD

Pensions Liberal, Families of Dominion Recruits Provided For, Training Thorough.

With a population of only 8,000,000, Canada has sent 300,000 soldiers to France. When it is considered that about one-half of the population is composed of French Canadians, who have contributed almost no recruits to the war, the acomplishment appears even more remarkable.

Unlike the United States, Canada's militia has always been federal. There have been no provincial forces corresponding to the American national guard. Canada has the English regimental system, which is used only for recruiting, and any number of battalions may be organized in any regiment and sent overseas. The older and better organized regiments have obtained the larger number of recruits and sent the greater number of battalions.

Good Pay Influences Result.

While much has been accomplished by meetings and organizations to improve recruiting, the principal reason for the result obtained has been the high rate of pay given the soldiers. The pay of officers and men in the Canadian force begins on the day they enlist. Including field allowance, which in the case of a private is 10 cents a day and increases with rank, the rates are as follows:

Privates, $1.10; corporals, $1.20; sergeants, $1.50; quartermasters' sergeants, $1.70; sergeant major and pay sergeants, $1.70; color sergeants and staff sergeans, $1.80; orderly room clerks, $1.70; warrant officers, $2.30; quartermasters, $3.75; paymasters, $3.75; noncommissioned officers who are skilled artificers or tradesmen, and whose services are used as such, get extras, 50 cents a day to $1.

Soldiers' Wives Paid.

The wives of privates and noncommissioned officers get separation allowances from the government, paid direct, of $20 a month, and their husbands must also assign to them not more than $20 a month and not less than $15 a month out of their pay. The separation allowance to the wives of officers is:

Lieutenants, $30 a month; captains, $40; majors, $50; lieutenant colonels, $60.

Pensions for privates range from $480 yearly for total incapacity, with $250 special allowance where the recipient is also totally helpless, down to small sums for minor injuries or ailments.

Disability Pensions Liberal.

The highest pension for ranks below lieutenant is $620. Where there is disability of 100, 80 or 60 per cent payment of $6 a month per child in the family is also allowed. For officers totally incapacitated the pension runs $720 for lieutenants; captains, $1,000; majors, $1,260; lieutenant colonels, $1,560; colonels, $1,890 yearly, with from $8 to $12 a child per month. Smaller pensions are given for lesser injuries. Where soldiers or officers are killed, or die of wounds or disease contracted on active service, widows and children receive pension to the amounts named. Pensions to children cease after the boys are 16 years old and girls 17 years old, except in special cases decided by the pension boards. Widowed mothers, stepmothers or grandmothers, or fathers, wholly dependent on men who died on service or as result of service get modified pensions.

Additional Allowances.

For the wives and families of privates and noncommissioned officers, the patriotic fund, a voluntary public organization which raised $12,000,000 last year, and aims at $15,000,000 this year, also makes certain allowances. To children up to 16 years of age a small daily grant is made and for the mothers help is given as the need warrants. This, in some centers, takes the form of assisting to meet interest on mortgage debts, payment of doctors' bills, etc., while in others a flat monthly allowance is made. Beyond all this, a number of municipalities have insured the men from their boundaries or undertaken to see that none of their dependents shall want.

$1,000 for Toronto Men.

The men who have enlisted in Toronto, about 45,000, are insured for $1,000 each at the public expense. In the case of death the money is paid to their families.

Canada has insisted that officers must be trained before they could be intrusted with the lives of men in battle. Officers of the overseas forces undergo pretty stiff courses at the regular schools of instruction, or in the training corps of several of the universities, which have given so many of their best men to the army. Unless an officer is already qualified, his appointment to a battalion or battery is provisional. Practically, he must qualify, or revert to the ranks, or get out. Infantry officers take a six weeks' course to begin with, closing up with a written and practical working examination. If they pass, their appointment is confirmed. They then train in Canada with their battalion for periods ranging usually from six months to nine months, and must take further courses if they desire to specialize as bombing, machine gun, or other class officers.

Officers Must Qualify.

Artillery officers take a three months' course. While promotion is sometimes conferred on the battlefield, it may be stated generally that an officer must qualify for every rank he gets. A number of officers who have qualified in various specialties have been brought back to Canada to assist in training. On arrival in England officers have to go through a good deal of their old grounding and some new schooling, and the weeding out process over there is rigorous. Experience at the front has shown the need of qualified officers. It has been found on the whole that young professional men make the best officers. There was a considerable surplus of Canadian officers in England for a while. Many got commissions in Kitchener's armies and a considerable number reverted to the ranks so as to get to the front rather than return to Canada to await a chance for attachment to new battalions.

AMERICA FORCED TO CEASE LABOR FOR SUFFERERS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—An entire diplomatic structure to protect probably two million prisoners in the midst of their enemies, to care for a whole conquered nation in Belgium, to represent the interests of four sovereign states in Germany and German interests in nine enemy countries, crumbled today before German necessity.

One of the most complex, ultra legal humanitarian machines ever evolved, the slow, patient work built up during two and a half years of effort, thus is sacrificed at the Berlin government's challenge to the whole neutral world in a last attempt to reach England.

American organization and genius and American means of restraint in the war zones will cease to operate. All American representatives will be withdrawn from Germany and the duties they have performed will fall on untrained forces.

From Belgium the United States will not withdraw till the military conquerors make it impossible for her to continue. The 100 Americans who have from the war's beginning proved the directing genius for the greatest and longest sustained relief work in history will remain at their posts until the Germans force them across the frontier. Brand Whitlock, American minister to Belgium, will remain in Brussels until forced to the present seat of the Belgian government in Havre, France.

Belgian relief ships will continue to run for the present, it is understood here, and every attempt made to secure their immunity from German attack.

"The Car of a Thousand Speeds"

The Final Car

- Tremendous enthusiasm for the Owen Magnetic was marked all week at the Automobile Show.
- This final car of universal fame fascinated all visitors.
- Now the automobile era has indeed attained in the Owen Magnetic dependable unit of power transmission, what all engineers have been striving for and must turn to eventually. In no other car has this universally sound principle been applied.
- In the Owen Magnetic the whole bunglesome, clanging machinery requiring gear-shifting, clutch, clutch-pedal, fly-wheel and clumsy levers has been done away with.
- No more gear-shifting—no more of the many operations necessary in driving or stopping, as with other cars.
- All power functions are under one magnetic control. One little finger-lever on the steering wheel does all the work.
- Limousine, Town Car and Landau Models from $4350 to $5200. Touring Cars and Roadsters from $3300 to $3950.

NDIANA HOUSE PROMISES AID TO PRESIDENT

xpresses Confidence in Him and Pledges Patriotic and Loyal Support.

ndianapolis, Ind., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—ter learning that the United States d severed diplomatic relations with many, the members of the Indiana e of representatives adopted a reso- "expressing the confidence of the e in the president in the crucial " and "pledging to him and to the gress our loyal and patriotic support the grave responsibilities now before ."

When the proposal to appoint a com- ttee to draw up resolutions was first ght up to the floor of the house it eared that a clash might occur along itical party lines.

After Speaker Eschbach and other Re- blican members urged that a ques- of such grave importance be not own into the arena of party politics, animous action was taken.

Inject Party Politics.

The motion was first presented to the use by Representative Durham, a mocrat. It called for the speaker to point a committee of five to draw up olutions "indorsing the action of esident Wilson and the congress."

me of the Republican members ged that, in view of the fact that the rd had not been officially received, ion should not be taken hurriedly.

At this point Speaker Eschbach sug- ted that party politics should not be ght into the matter. He suggested t the resolution be amended so as to d "express confidence in the presi- t."

Fails to Block Speaker.

Representative Durham refused to cur in the suggestion made by the aker. Representative Harmon, a mocrat, then placed the amended mo- , and it was carried.

MOBILIZATION OF U. S. WOMEN FOR WAR, PLAN

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—A mobilization of women in home, office, farm, and factory to prepare them for war duty is to be effected through a new emergency committee headed by Miss Maude Wetmore and Miss Anne Morgan.

"We hope to organize the women of the country to take the places of the men who will be called to military service," said Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer, one of the organization committee, today.

"Women are ready to do their part alwaye, but they often fail to be effective because of the lack of organization. We are probably the only country that has ever gone to war with its women as well as its men mobilized for national service."

Plans for Nine Groups.

The women will be divided into nine groups, according to their personal preferences. The groups are listed as follows:

Social and welfare work, home administration, agriculture, health, medical and nursing, parliamentary, signaling, motor driving, and general service. As soon as the weather permits there will be national encampments of women where standardized work along these lines will be done.

The new organization, which is known as the National League for Women's Service, came into academic existence about two weeks ago in Washington, but when the international emergency arose the work took a new spurt. Miss Grace Parker, formerly head of the Campfire Girls, is to be the national commandant.

Plans 20 Lay Hospitals.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—Miss Mabel T. Boardman tonight announced plans for the immediate organization of Lay Women's organizations to equip at once more than twenty lay hospitals of the Red Cross throughout the country.

Organization will begin here Monday, with an executive meeting of Red Cross officers preliminary to a public meeting Friday.

Telegrams were sent to 300 Red Cross chapters in the United States urging immediate preparation.

SANE MEMBERS OF HOUSE STILL CRIES FOR WAR

All, However, Favor Speed in Preparations for Any Eventualities.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Excitement became so great in congress today that a half hour before the president was due to address the members the house had to be adjourned, as it was impossible for the speakers to make themselves heard above the din of animated discussion.

Representative Butler of Pennsylvania, the Republican member of the naval affairs committee, touched off the pent up feelings of the house members when he dramatically declared that if he had his way there would be no further discussion of the $351,000,000 naval appropriation bill, that it would be passed immediately to meet the present emergency.

SHOULD RUSH SHIPS.

Representative Kelly of Michigan, another Republican member of the naval affairs committee, followed by declaring that the three year naval building program agreed upon in the last session of congress should be ordered completed at the earliest possible moment.

The house was worked up to a high pitch when Minority Leader Mann and former Speaker Cannon arose and made "keep cool" speeches. Members who had been "whooping" every warlike declaration a few moments before heeded the advice and began congregating in groups on the house floor to discuss in a serious way the crisis confronting the government.

LITTLE NAVY MAN ALARMED.

The house was considering the naval appropriation bill when news reached the capitol that the president had severed all diplomatic relations with Germany.

Representative Callaway of Texas, one of the leading "little navy men" in the house and a member of the naval committee, precipitated the discussion when he declared that the United States should immediately turn all its efforts to the construction of submarines and destroyers in unlimited quantities.

"Why do we face the present crisis?" Callaway continued. "It is because England with all of her wonderful fleet on the surface of the seas cannot protect British commerce from German submarines. All England's great battleships and battle cruisers fly from the presence of one hostile submarine. They say they can sink the submarines, but they know better. The whole British fleet at the Dardanelles fled before one German submarine."

Fess Stirs Up House.

Representative Fess of Ohio lashed the house into a fury with a patriotic address shortly after the news had reached the capitol that the president would come to the capitol to tell congress that he had broken with Germany.

"The newspaper that I hold in my hand carries a headline that is ominous," said Mr. Fess. "Severing diplomatic relations with a great country is not tantamount to war, but may lead to it.

"The hour has passed for us to speculate on what is to come. We are neither militarists, militants nor pacifists. We ought not to be partial to one or to the other, but certainly we ought all be strictly American this hour.

"Differences of opinion and detail count for nothing, but whether we are going to say to the world that nothing will deter us for one moment in standing solidly behind the president at this hour is the question. Nothing that would question that ought to come from this chamber at this time.

"I hope, speaking as a member who is not inclined to be free of criticism, but always independent in my criticism, I hope that there will fall from the lips of no man here criticism that might be regarded by the powers of Europe as unfriendly to the situation that the president is now placed in. I therefore simply speak my own conviction that we ought with one voice, without a dissenting vote, pass this bill immediately."

Just before the house adjourned Representative Padgett, chairman of the naval affairs committee, said that on Tuesday he would offer a resolution authorizing the president, whenever he believed war imminent, to commandeer all shipyards.

This announcement was met with cheers. Speaker Clark left the chair and took the floor to indorse it.

CONGRESS UNITED

Party Lines Smashed as Representatives and Senators Alike Back the President Almost to a Man in New Crisis with Germany.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Congress, almost to a man, fell in behind the president and assured him of support in whatever situation may arise as a result of the breaking off of diplomatic relations with Germany.

The most prominent of those who did not vouchsafe approval of the president's course was Senator Stone of Missouri, the Democratic chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations.

Minority Leader Mann said:

"I do not see how the president could do any less, and I am very glad he did not propose at this time to do any more."

Speaker Clark said:

"I think the president stated the situation exactly. I do not believe there will be a war, and I do not think that the Germans will blow up any of our ships."

Marshall Is Hopeful.

Vice President Marshall, at the time he was notified to arrange for a joint session of congress, said:

"It is sincerely to be hoped that this necessary break will not drag the United States into the war. There are limits, however, to endurance, beyond which no self-respecting nation can go. This government cannot permit the defiance of all law of civilization by any nation to pass unchallenged."

Senator Tillman, chairman of the senate naval committee, said:

"I'm mighty glad of it. I was in favor, when I heard of the note first, of telling Mr. Bernstorff to pack up his duds and go home to his barbarians. We will do the best we can, and I have no doubt that we will live up to our past record in taking care of ourselves. We don't take any passes from anybody to go anywhere we please on the seas. Congress ought to unanimously agree to back up the president to the limit, just like we did McKinley."

Sherman's Views.

Senator Sherman of Illinois in expressing his view said:

"A self-respecting people could not ask their chief magistrate to do less. I approve the course outlined in the president's address. I agree with him entirely."

Senator Lewis of Illinois said:

"It is a gratification to me that the president's address contained as his expression that which Senator Stone and I had expressed to him in the council of senators last night—namely: That only through overt acts by Germany could this government find a cause to sever peaceful relations."

Representative Wood, Ind., Republican, author of the leak resolution, said:

"I am of opinion that there will be no necessity for any more drastic steps being taken. I do not believe that the German government will intentionally destroy American vessels unless they are laden with contraband of war. I feel that if American citizens individually will show their patriotism by staying off armed belligerent ships the peace of the United States will be secure. The United States should be slow in going to war because of the death of an American citizen who voluntarily places himself in danger, prompted solely by the spirit of adventure or for mercenary interests."

Former Speaker Cannon said:

"What else was there for the president to do than to break off relations with Germany? As to the future I do not care to speculate. The constitution provides that congress alone can declare war, but the president can practically make war, or a situation may be brought about where there is nothing for congress to do but to ratify his course. This is a time to keep our heads cool. I do not see what congress can do at present. We must await the action or recommendation of the president."

Lodge Gives Approval.

Other opinions were expressed as follows:

Senator Lodge, ranking Republican member of the foreign relations committee—I most thoroughly approve and cordially support the president in giving the German ambassador his passports and in recalling our ambassador from Berlin. It is the right thing to do and is demanded both by the honor and the safety of the American people.

Representative Madden of Chicago—I don't see how the president could have taken any other course. It has my heartiest approval, especially his conservative attitude towards future developments.

Britten Sees War.

Representative Fred A. Britten, Chicago, member of the committee on naval affairs—The handing of passports to Von Bernstorff and the recall of American Minister Gerard means American entrance upon the bloody European war unless the president's determination to protect American life on the high seas causes the imperial government to change its announced submarine policy.

Senator Kenyon of Iowa—The president's address was strong and clear. We will all have to stand behind him now. There may be a providence in all this which may hasten the end of the war. I cannot believe that Germany will sink our ships, however. This may have the result of showing whether we are all 100 per cent Americans.

Fears It Means War.

Senator Cummins of Iowa—The president could not have done anything else. I approve entirely of his course. If Germany carries out her threat and sinks American vessels and kills Americans in violation of international law, I fear that it means war. But I do not believe that Germany will do it.

Democratic Leader Kitchin—I don't believe the president could have said or done less and I am greatly gratified he didn't do or say more. He has given Germany the last clear chance to avoid conflict with the United States. All true Americans hope it is a chance she will take.

WAR TO FOLLOW GERMAN BREAK, EXPERTS CLAIM

Prof. William Gardner Hale of the University of Chicago, who was in Europe at the beginning of the war and who has made a study of the present situation, issued the following statement of the severance of relations with Germany:

"No other course was possible. War must be the immediate result. We shall then be helping and save democratic civilization from its threatened overthrow by a feudal absolutism which claims the authority of divine right and which makes its supposed interest its only conscience. This is what I advocated at the beginning. If we had taken this course no other nation would have dared to join Germany and Austria and the war would have been over before this, with an enormous saving of suffering."

President Judson of the University of Chicago today issued the following statement:

"There are two causes of an ambassador being sent away from the country in which he is serving: First, on account of disapproval of his country's actions and, second, on account of disapproval of his actions. Dismissal because of the first cause does not necessitate war, but it makes war almost inevitable. Dismissal because of the second cause almost never causes war. When the United States sent Dumba away last year this second reason was the cause, but it did even suggest war."

'WE ARE FOR U. S.,' SAY PAPERS IN 30 LANGUAGES

A unanimous pledge of fealty to the stars and stripes representative of more than 8,000,000 foreigners of various nationalities exclusive of German and Austrian was taken at a meeting of the executive committee of the American Association of Foreign Language Newspapers held yesterday.

"One ideal—one purpose—to uphold the good name and retain the honor of this our beloved country, the United States of America," is the motif of the resolution, copy of which last night was wired to President Woodrow Wilson.

It reads in part:

"We call upon our readers, friends, and fellow countrymen, from whatever part of the globe they come, to remember they are a part of this great republic; that their fealty and devotion belongs first to the United States of America and to President Wilson.

"We are ready to spare no sacrifices, to lay down our lives for this great commonwealth. We are for the United States first and always. We believe in the words of the illustrious Stephen Decatur:

"'Our country, may it always be right; but right or wrong, our country.'"

The resolution was signed by V. E. Geringer, chairman of the executive committee and publisher of the Bohemian Daily Svarnost; P. S. Lambros, the Greek Star; John R. Palandech, the Balkan World, and Harry Lipsky, the Daily Jewish Courier.

S. GERMANS RALLY BENEATH AMERICAN FLAG

rry Rubens, Friend of Carl Schurz, Says They'll Stand by Stars and Stripes.

rry Rubens, the lawyer, secretary the late Carl Schurz, and speaking on of the American citizens of Ger descent, declared yesterday that such citizen, however heavy his may be, will be as loyal to the States in a break with Germany native born American.

Rubens has been a severe critic of government in the controversy that to the present break. But from he said, there is only side of the for all Americans, native or nat- , and that is the side of the rican flag.

"Many of us," he said, "are placed in ition of a man forced to choose his mother and his bride. We choose our bride.

"When I was secretary to Carl the greatest American citizen of descent, he was asked what German-Americans would do in the of a break between Germany and United States. He replied that such was unthinkable.

"Well, the unthinkable has happened. Germans in the United States did not here as colonists, as they went to America and Mexico. They came to stay. Most of them were young when they came. "War of Races," Threat of Chicago German Editor

UNDER the caption "Decide in Haste, Repent at Leisure" Horace L. Brand, editor of the Illinois Staats-Zeitung, declares editorially it is doubtful if the majority of the people will indorse giving Von Bernstorff his passports. He also says that if America were to align itself on one side or the other "the war of races would break out," unless the causes were "so shocking, aggravated, and often repeated that all peaceful procedure became futile."

Here Is the Editorial.

The Staats-Zeitung editorial follows:

"'He kept us out of war' was one of the most forceful reasons advanced by the Democrats during the recent presidential campaign when appealing for votes for the reëlection of President Wilson. Huge posters portrayed the picture of the president and a happy American woman and her child in the foreground, with factories and a scene of peaceful industry in the background. The posters bore the legend: 'He protected me and mine.' These appeals to the peace loving instinct of our people bore good results. The 'peace vote' of America was cast for Woodrow Wilson.

"That was but three months ago.

"Have the people of this country changed from a peace loving nation to a belligerent one?

Do Not Want War.

"We do not think that the people have altered their views.

"Has President Wilson changed his views

"We do not think that he has.

"President Wilson is earnestly desirous of keeping this country at peace with all the world.

"He would like to assist in bringing the European war to a close. He champions the 'freedom of the seas,' the 'right of small nations to govern themselves' and a 'world league to enforce peace.'

"It cannot be doubted that an overwhelming majority of our people stand behind the president in his efforts to keep this country at peace with all the world.

"Perhaps a majority even approve of his efforts to end the European war.

"But it is very doubtful, indeed, that a majority will indorse giving the German ambassador his passports at the present time.

"We will not now argue for Germany's cause nor actions.

Consider America First.

"Let us consider America first, last, and all the time.

"Firstly—America's historic policy is opposed to entangling alliances. America has not approved a change in policy. The senate of the United States refused to discuss the plan to change our time honored course. In harmony with that policy it is the duty of our government to keep us out of the European holocaust. Millions of Americans are bound by blood ties to Europeans who are fighting.

"The war of races would break out in our midst, passion aroused, and hatred engendered, internecine warfare would result; unless the causes that led to our entering the European war were so shocking, aggravated, and often repeated that all peaceful procedure became futile, and then only would the government have a united nation supporting a war policy.

"Lastly, we are a just people. The United States never waged a war unless justice sanctioned. 'Peace or war, as our interest, guided by justice, shall counsel,' is the advice of the father of our country, George Washington.

"'First, last, and all the time,' America will jealously guard the lives of her people and her interests, with justice dictating her decisions."

CITY'S EDITORS OF ALIEN PRESS RALLY TO WILSON

Serbian, Greek, Polish, and French Editorials Pledge U. S. Loyalty.

Subjoined is an editorial, in part, in the United Serbian, of which John Palandech is editor:

"Serbians in America, many of whom have responded nobly to the call of their mother country, will give themselves more willingly to fight for America because their duty is two-fold. In fighting for America they fight also for their mother country and the freedom and civilization of the whole world.

"No man can pride himself with Serbian blood in his veins who does not stand by the president and the American flag."

From the Greek Star.

"For the Sake of Civilization," is the title of an editorial in the Greek Star, P. S. Lambros, publisher.

"After the British lion and the rest of the allied powers that are fighting for the rights of humanity, justice, and civilization," reads the editorial, "we are bound to see the new world's power participating in the world's greatest war—America—a power aiming not to conquer, but to check the would be conqueror and to lend her great assistance in freeing the small nations that are sighing under the yoke of the iron ring of the central powers.

"There shall be no political parties, or factions now, there is only one party—the great American party—there is only one leader—the president of the United States, so let us follow our president and let us pray that God may guide, strengthen him."

Views of Other Editors.

Expressions gathered from other editors by THE TRIBUNE follow:

John J. Chrzanowski, editor of the National Polish Daily—The Polish citizens of America are grateful to this country for its hospitality, and love it for the freedom which they enjoy here. They will follow the star spangled banner to any part of the world.

Vladimir A. Geringer, editor of the Daily Svornost [Bohemian]—The people I represent come from a land which has fought for freedom and liberty, which has suffered because it has not gained that liberty. They have come to America because they wanted liberty. They are anxious to prove that they will stand by the new country they have chosen and will follow your leadership in the world struggle.

Oscar Durante, editor of the Daily L'Italia—This step should have been taken long ago. This is the great move Germany has been planning. But it is a last desperate move; it is the emperor's trump card. If America can frustrate the plan the world will soon be at peace.

Louis J. Beachand Vertefeuille, editor of the Courier Franco-Americain—"I am an American and I run an American paper. I hardly believe, therefore, that a statement is necessary. Of course, my paper stands behind my president."

CHANDLER SIX $1395

This Great Car Leads All Sixes
Because of Its Marvelous Motor

THOUSANDS of men and women who would pay hundreds of dollars more for an automobile, if paying more would get them more, choose the Chandler. They are not seekers after a low price. They desire the best six-cylinder motor regardless of price. They desire a Six because time has shown that a six-cylinder motor, correctly designed, gives all the power and all the flexibility of power that any motor can give; that such a motor has the life and snap and "go" they desire; that such a motor is genuinely economical in cost of operation.

So these devotees of the Six choose the Chandler, because through four years of intelligent, conscientious, manufacturing effort, and without radical or experimental changes of design, the Chandler motor has been developed to a point approximating perfection.

Chandler Low Price is Important, Too

While with so many the question of price is of secondary consideration, still Chandler leads in price today quite as distinctly as it has always led.

In the face of advanced cost of all materials and labor, the Chandler price is but $100 higher than two years ago. And the car is finer than then. Not a feature has been cut out of it. Much has been added.

AND OTHER CARS IN THE CHANDLER FIELD HAVE ADVANCED AS MUCH AS THREE HUNDRED DOLLARS THE PAST YEAR, EITHER BECAUSE OF NECESSITY OR OPPORTUNITY.

The Chandler Company has not been willing to take advantage of a situation which would have permitted price inflation.

And this year we shall probably build and sell more cars than any other manufacturer building a car of even similar quality.

Wide Choice of Beautiful Bodies

You who demand such a motor as the Chandler demand grace of body design, also, and richness of finish. Chandler offers you five beautiful types of body, each mounted on the one standard Chandler chassis.

NOT ALWAYS WAR AFTER BREACH, HISTORY SHOWS

United States and Other Nations Have Dismissed Ambassadors Without Hostilities.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

The breaking of diplomatic relations does not necessarily mean war between the two nations involved.

The handing of his passports to Count von Bernstorff and the recall of Ambassador Gerard from Berlin does not make war between the United States and Germany inevitable.

It is a preliminary step towards hostilities. It makes war probable, as shown by historic precedents in similar cases. The fact that all American consular officers are also recalled from Germany—thus making the break more complete—increases the probability.

But there are plenty of similar incidents to show that war is not certain to follow the dismissal of diplomatic and consular officers. Especially does historic precedent make clear that, in any event, the actual declaration of war may be postponed for many months after diplomatic ties are severed.

Italy's Case Cited.

In May, 1915, Italy declared war on Austria-Hungary. Simultaneously the German ambassador to Rome, Prince Buelow, was forced to leave Italy, taking with him all German diplomatic and consular officers. At the same moment the Italian ambassador to Berlin was handed his passports. The break between the two countries was complete from the diplomatic standpoint.

But though war was hotly waged between Italy and Germany's ally, there was no actual declaration of war against Germany until more than a year later. It was not until the last of August, 1916, that King Victor Emmanuel's government issued its formal declaration against the kaiser.

Meanwhile Italy had early in the war with Austria requisitioned and taken for use the German liners and freight ships which were interned in Italian ports. Such action was not regarded as an act of war, the ships remaining the property of their German owners who, at some future time, would be indemnified for their use.

Has Dismissed Two Ministers.

Twice the United States has more or less summarily dismissed British ministers to Washington.

In 1809 Minister Jackson was handed his passports as the result of what were practically charges of falsehood and duplicity made by him against the American secretary of state. That was, of course, preliminary to the war of 1812, but war did not begin until three years later.

Lord Sackville-West, British minister to the United States, was dismissed by the Washington government in 1888, because of personal letters he had been trapped into writing which were regarded as unwarranted interference with domestic politics. In this instance the American minister was not recalled, nor was he handed his passports, and no declaration of war followed the incident.

Thirty Year Rupture.

When the Emperor Maximilian was executed in Mexico in 1867 his brother, Emperor Francis Joseph, withdrew all his diplomatic and consular officers from Mexico. Diplomatic relations were not resumed for more than thirty years. But during all that time Austrian subjects lived in peace in Mexico and were not molested by the Mexican government. The fact that the Austrian forces withdrew from Mexico under strong pressure from the United States is to be considered as a controlling cause for Francis Joseph contenting himself with making only a diplomatic protest.

In somewhat the same way, when its South American colonies revolted against the sovereignty of Spain, the government of Madrid cut all diplomatic ties with the southern continent. For more than a quarter of a century after the independence of the South and Central American republics had been generally recognized, they had no diplomatic or consular representatives in Spain, nor did the mother country send any of its officers to its former colonies.

In 1797 France insolently ordered the American minister, Pinckney, to leave its shores. At the same time it withdrew his official character from Adet, its minister to the United States, but allowed him to remain in the country.

Break from "Discontent."

Adet published a letter in American papers in which he said his withdrawal was not intended to be a "rupture between France and the United States, but as a mark of just discontent, which is to last until the government of the United States returns to sentiments and to measures more conformable to the interests of the alliance and to the sworn friendship between the two nations."

For the next year or two there were various fights between French and American ships. Treaties of commerce were suspended. Privateers to the number of more than 300 were fitted out by the United States. Yet, although we were actually fighting France we did not consider ourselves at war with her. Not until 1800 was a treaty signed which ended a war which had never formally been begun.

"WE'RE LOYAL."

American and Most of the German-American Editorial Comment Backs President Wilson in Step That May Bring Armed Conflict with Central Powers.

Editorial comment, both American and German-American, on President Wilson's severance of diplomatic relations with Germany indicates that the whole nation is a unit behind the executive. President Wilson has taken the only step possible under existing conditions, they say. The comment is appended.

NEW YORK WORLD—The United States is now on the verge of war with Germany. If war now comes it is not of our making. It is no time for jingoism.

NEW YORK SUN—The blood of the citizen who is first of all things an American pulses more firmly and proudly this morning. His government has at last spoken the voice of the nation.

NEW YORK TRIBUNE—President Wilson gave the only answer that could be given honorably to the German government's last arrogant and brutal note. . . . We look for German overt acts which will precipitate a declaration of war by the United States.

NEW YORK HERALD—Wilson has made his decision and it is for the right.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH—President Wilson has taken the first step in a program of decisive action to defend American rights. What will follow depends upon Germany.

ST. LOUIS GLOBE DEMOCRAT—The president has done the only thing that in honor could be done. To have retained friendly relations with Germany after the notice of Jan. 31 would have been a shameful subservience to the dictates of a form of prudence that is difficult to distinguish from cowardice.

MILWAUKEE EVENING WISCONSIN—The severance of diplomatic relations with the German empire followed inevitably the action taken by the government of the kaiser.

MILWAUKEE EVENING JOURNAL—Against our will the government of Germany has [illegible] this rupture.

CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER—President Wilson takes the only action possible. This nation has endured insult and reproach until patience is no longer a virtue.

DETROIT FREE PRESS—President Wilson has taken the one course left for a self-respecting, courageous, and honorable sovereign power.

PITTSBURGH GAZETTE-TIMES—President Wilson has taken the right course with Germany. The first gun pointed at an American ship should be followed by a declaration of war by the United States and our every action should conform to the new situation.

LINCOLN DAILY STAR—When neutrality is only construable as cowardice, there can be no doubt where the government, the press, and the people will stand.

GERMAN COMMENT

ST. LOUIS WESTLICHE POST—We are Americans. We must stand behind President Wilson. The nation must be solid. German-Americans must work for peace and the suppression of irresponsible German utterances here.

DETROIT ABENDPOST—It is rather foolish even to doubt that German-Americans, in case of necessity, would hesitate to shoulder arms for the country to which they have sworn allegiance. Our stand as true Americans should be unquestioned.

SEATTLE GERMAN PRESS—The people do not want war; they want peace. No nation has the duty to protect foolhardy adventurers who insist on presenting themselves as targets to the German bullets.

OMAHA TRIBUNE—The break with our old fatherland is at hand, but our duty and our allegiance belong to America first, last, and all the time.

CHICAGO HOPES FOR PEACE, BUT BACKS WILSON

Views of Prominent Men in Various Lines on the Crisis for America.

"STAND by the president," whether it means peace or war, epitomizes, in the main, the expressions of prominent Chicago men in all walks of life. Following are some of the statements:

J. P. Griffin, president of Chicago board of trade—I think all there is to say at the present time is that every patriotic American citizen should stand by and support the president.

James A. Patten—The action taken by Germany seems to me to be the last act of a nation facing desperate conditions. The submarine operations are likely to cause serious losses, but I do not believe they will stop the exportation of grain or other products to any important extent. I do not see why even war should cause any serious break either in cereals or stocks. It would mean an enormous demand for all products.

Samuel M. Hastings, president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association—I do not now think that our having severed relations means a more serious crisis than existed at the breaking out of the war. But when the time comes to move there will be no question as to our attitude or any doubt as to our government taking a position that is fearless, that is right. I hope that every firm will raise a flag over its plant, or in some way demonstrate its loyalty to our government. It has been clearly demonstrated that we should be prepared.

Mayor Thompson—What does it all mean? Does it mean that there will be war? I deeply regret the possibility of a break. Let us hope, though, that it won't be necessary to have war with anybody.

Former Gov. Deneen—The president having spoken for the nation, the time for controversy has passed. I am sure that every true American desires peace and hopes that war will be avoided; but whatever course of action the president and the congress decide upon, it should be the undivided aim and purpose of every loyal American to follow and sustain.

Former Secretary of War Jacob M. Dickinson—I would not have our country go into war except for just reasons, but I have long been of the opinion that if such reasons existed the sooner we get into the war the better it will be for the future of our nation. In case of war we should coöperate at once with our navy, give the full strength of our financial aid, send munitions and supplies where they are needed, and release Americans from neutrality obligations who wish to volunteer in the allied armies.

James B. Forgan, chairman of the board of the First National bank—Keep cool and calm and stand by the president.

David R. Forgan, president of the National City bank—I don't see how the president honorably could have done anything else. It means war with Germany. We must face that fact.

George M. Reynolds, president Continental and Commercial National bank—We have expected it. It was the only course open to the president. Now that the break has come every one in the United States should stand behind the president.

Judge Charles M. Walker—I don't see how anything else could be done. It goes without saying that in any crisis Americans will stand behind the president and the flag.

Judge George A. Carpenter, United States district court—There is no doubt the whole people will stand behind the president.

Judge Samuel Alschuler, United States Circuit Court of Appeals—I am willing to leave it to the president.

Lewis F. Mason, United States commissioner—We are with the president, all of us. I believe Germany will hesitate before forcing war.

Herman F. Schuettler, chief of police—I am for the president and for the country, first, last, and all the time. My boy is ready for whatever comes, and my sentiments go for all my relatives, too.

Bishop Samuel Fallows, veteran of civil war—We will stand to a man at the order of the president. He has steered a wise and diplomatic course in the entire controversy, and if war with Germany must come the whole nation will be ready to respond.

William A. Tilden, president Fort Dearborn National bank—The president undoubtedly will act to protect the rights of the United States.

NATION, NOT U. S. HONOR, AT STAKE, IS BERLIN'S PLEA

Teutons Believe Victorious and Speedy Close of War Lies In U-Boat Campaign.

This wireless message from Mr. Bennett may be the last allowed to come from Berlin.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

[Special Wireless Dispatch to The Tribune.]

BERLIN, wireless via Sayville, Feb. 3.—Lacking official American tidings, the Berlin situation is unchanged from yesterday, except for a deepening seriousness. The continuing official deliberations are characterized by a solicitude to safeguard America's interest and to respect its honor. The attitude in official circles is that not American honor is threatened, but Germany's safety. The substance of one utterance of the first instance follows:

"Our enemies know precisely what they are aiming at in their hunger policy, and to a certain extent they have been successful in their aims. Our duty is clear. Whatever inconvenience may be caused to neutral nations by the exercise of belligerent rights, it is not to be compared for an instant to the suffering and loss occasioned to mankind by the war's prolongation even for a week."

Plans for Campaign Completed.

The outstanding facts in the new colossal phase of submarine warfare launched at midnight are four:

First, that the German notes and pronunciamentos heralding the campaign to the German empire and the world mean precisely what they say.

Second, that Germany considered both the probable defense and possible perils of the campaign from every angle before acting.

Third, the decision was reached after deliberations characterized not alone by gravity, but deepest solemnity. Complete unanimity marked the decision. The admiralty, political leaders, Gens. von Hindenburg and von Ludendorff all agreed. Their standpoint can be emphasized in the words "it is a most serious step, but necessary."

Fourth, there are resources of an incredible extent at Germany's command for working out the gigantic project.

People Are Confident.

The gravity with which every step toward the great decision was taken is reflected in the people's acceptance of the decision this morning.

There is no jubilation, but a profound confidence that the pressure which has made the people feel stifled will now be lifted. When, as recently has been the case, people read extras from the British press proclaiming what England is planning to do as far ahead as 1918, it was felt that Germany must not weaken in the coming year, but strike a decisive blow now.

There is a strong conviction now that the decisive period has come. Hence the prevailing view of belief in the decision. On every hand are heard the words:

"It is serious, but it had to come."

Everywhere there is confidence of success. In political circles there are no party splits over the decision. One hears no talk of the chancellor faction or the Tirpitz faction. There is no suggestion that the decision is untimely, which was the principal objection made when the subject was discussed earlier in the war. The gravity with which the matter has been considered and the unanimity of opinion convince all foreign observers here that this is no reckless threat of desperado warfare, but a measure vital to the preservation of the empire.

Staggering Results Expected.

Pointing to the record of 415,000 tons of shipping sunk in December, German experts say:

"If we could attain such results with cruising submarines it is obvious that results will be staggering in an unlimited submarine warfare, with no obligation of visit and search. Submarine warfare has reached such a stage of perfection that this new phase of the question will be no bluff."

Another TRIBUNE informant added:

"This new measure is the creation of a new war zone, and it is Germany's conviction that neutrals can keep out of the zone just as they have been compelled to keep out of trade with Germany since the war's outbreak."

LYMAN E. COOLEY, NOTED ENGINEER, DIES SUDDENLY

Lyman Edgar Cooley, eminent civil engineer, economist and "the man who made the Chicago river flow uphill," died yesterday afternoon at his home, 2010 Sherman street, Evanston.

The four physicians who attended Mr. Cooley during his brief illness, were unable to agree as to the cause of death, and an autopsy will be held today. Mr. Cooley addressed a meeting of the Western Society of Engineers, of which he was a former president, last Wednesday evening. At 1:45 o'clock the following morning Mrs. Warren E. Gill, one of his daughters, with whom he lived, heard him groan and went to his aid. He lapsed into a coma before physicians arrived and never regained consciousness.

Until about a year ago Mr. Cooley was consulting engineer for the sanitary district. He has been connected with the district almost continuously since 1885 and drew the plans for the drainage canal.

Mr. Cooley was born in Canandaigua, N. Y., Dec. 5, 1850. He was graduated from Rensselaer Polytechnic institute and later became professor of engineering at Northwestern university. Subsequently he gained note in various engineering projects and as a writer and editor of engineering subjects.

Mr. Cooley leaves seven brothers and sisters. They are: Ernest L. Cooley, also an eminent engineer; Mortimer E. Cooley, dean of engineering at the University of Michigan; H. Seymour Cooley, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Mrs. Inez Nichols, Hastings, Mich., and Clarence E., Eugene A., and Emma T. Cooley of Canandaigua, N. Y. He is also survived by Mrs. Warren E. Gill of Evanston, his daughter, and Charles A. Cooley of Toledo, O., a son.

Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made.

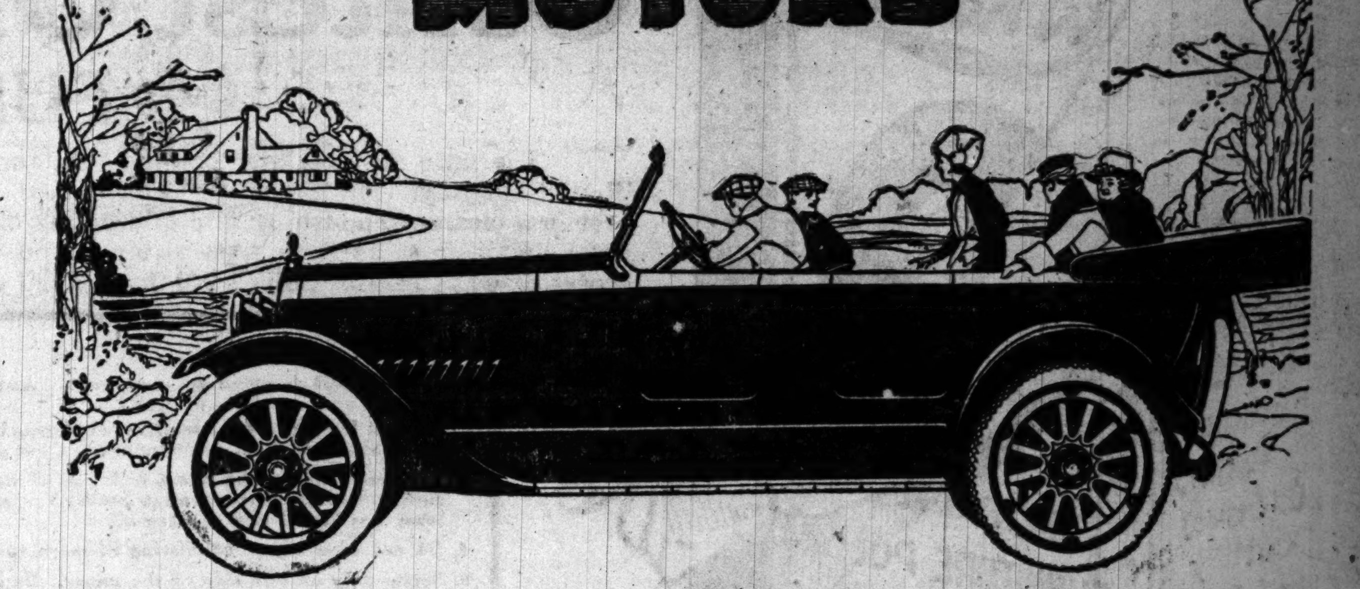
NASH Jeffery MOTORS



Chicago's Roster of Jeffery Owners Is Steadily Growing

IT includes the names of more than 2,000 satisfied owners—more than 2,000 customers who are pleased with their purchase and pleased with Centaur Service.

And 1917 promises to be the biggest year Chicago has ever known. Two reasons make us confident of that: the first is the cumulative advertising that comes from 2,000 satisfied owners; the second is the Jeffery Six touring car, in every respect the finest Jeffery that ever bore the name.

The Jeffery Six has beauty, power and performance. It is upholstered in finest leather. It has divided front seats. The appointments are perfect. It has the famous hammock-slung body and the straight stream lines.

Driven by the 53 horsepower Jeffery Six motor it develops a smooth flow of power that carries the car two miles an hour on "high" or spins the needle to seventy if it's speed you want.

But, best of all, Jeffery Six is dependable. Day after day it performs its work capably, efficiently. Even after thousands of miles of roughest travel parts replacements are almost negligible—upkeep low.

It's a car for boulevard of corduroy, asphalt or gumbo, level macadam or mountain trail.

That's because steel goes where steel belongs. No finer materials are used in the most expensive cars. The Jeffery Six is made right before it leaves the factory. That's why it is right when it comes to you.

The price you'll say is reasonable at $1465

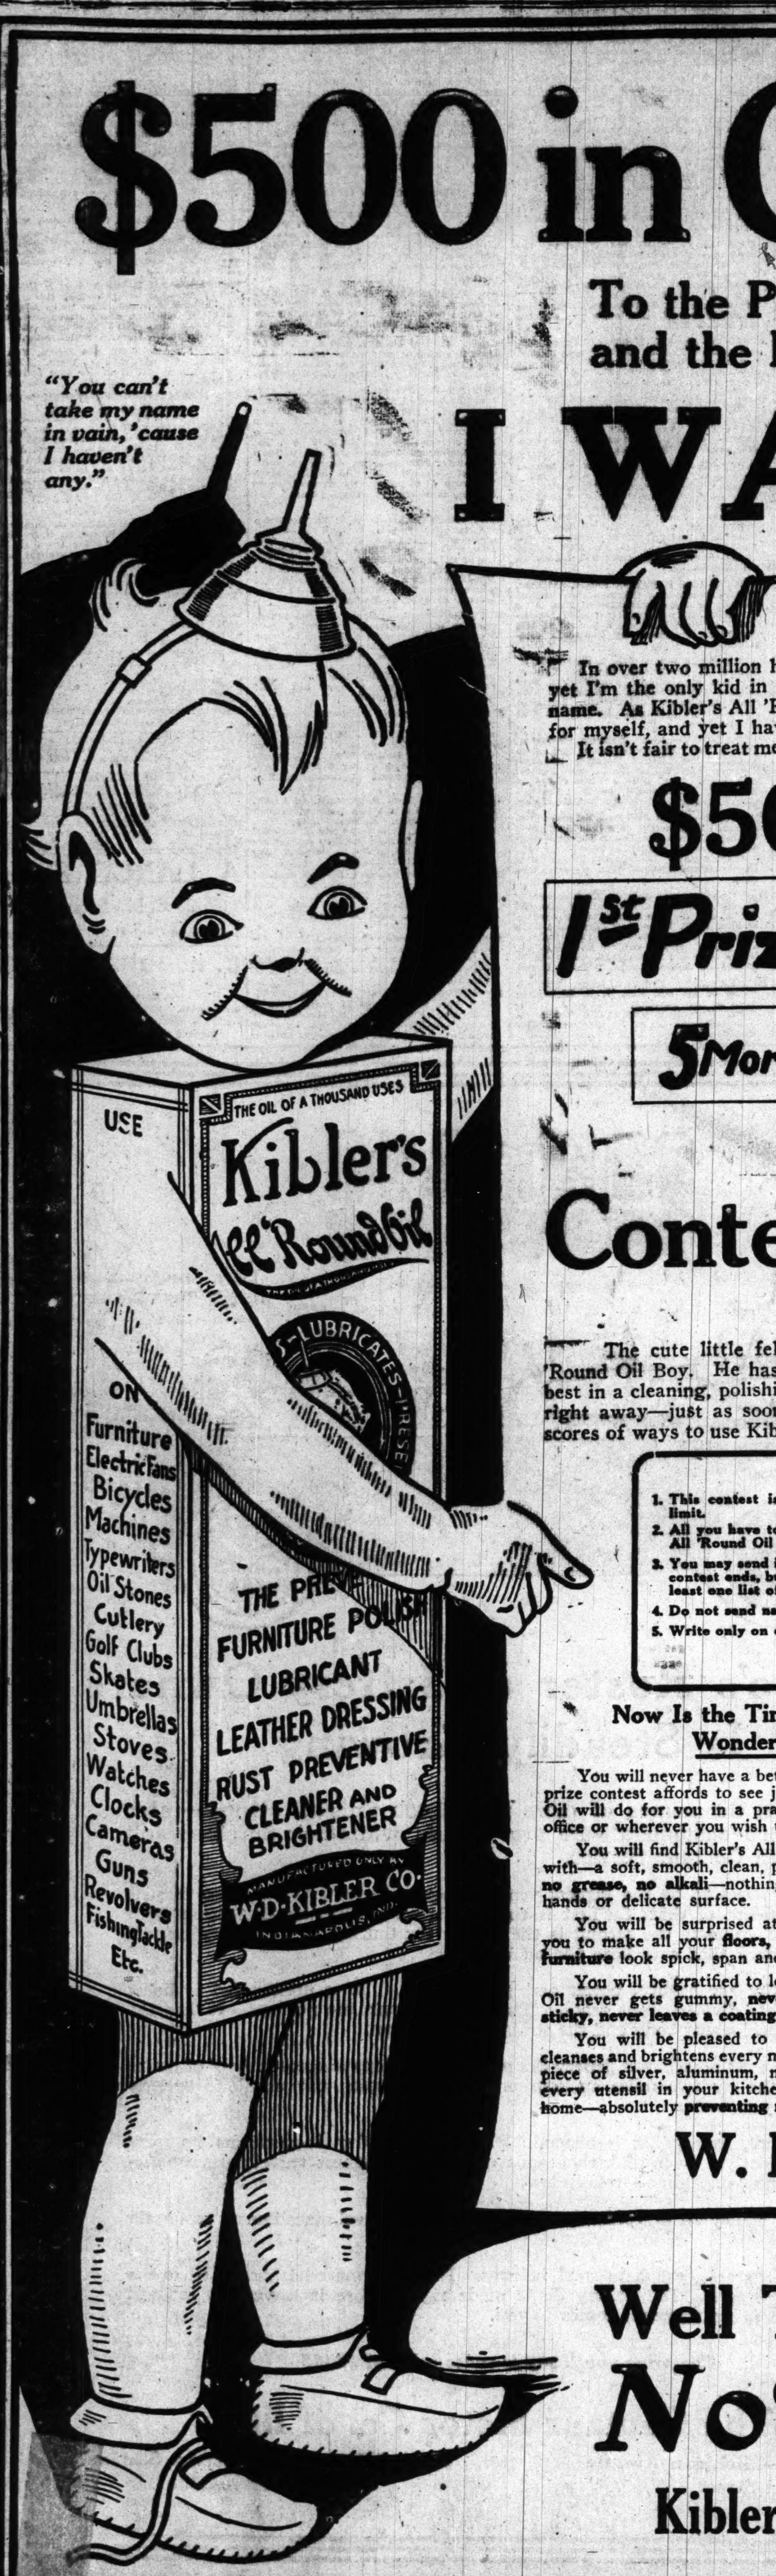
To the Persons Suggesting the Best Names for Me—and the Best List of Uses for Kibler's All 'Round Oil



I WANT A NAME

I want it because I am entitled to it. I've earned it. I've made good. I've done things worth while.

In over two million homes I have the best kind of a reputation, and yet I'm the only kid in the country without a name—not even a nickname. As Kibler's All 'Round Oil Boy I've really made a wonderful name for myself, and yet I haven't got it.

It isn't fair to treat me this way. Besides, I'm tired of being anonymous.

If I am to go on proving the unfailing superiority of Kibler's All 'Round Oil as a polisher, lubricant, rust-preventive, cleaner, brightener and as a dustless duster, I want a name. A name that tells about me and my business—a "catchy" name that people can easily remember—a regular name so that I can stick up my head in the world and be somebody. A name that means something. And Mr. Kibler (he's my boss) is willing to pay well for it. This is the way he'll do it:

$500.00 IN CASH PRIZES

1st Prize $250.00 for the best name for Kibler's All 'Round Oil Boy and list of uses for Kibler's All 'Round Oil.

2nd Prize $150.00 for second best name for Kibler's All 'Round Oil Boy and list of uses for Kibler's All 'Round Oil.

3rd Prize $50.00 for third best name for Kibler's All 'Round Oil Boy and list of uses for Kibler's All 'Round Oil.

5 More Prizes $5.00 EACH for five next best names for the boy and lists of uses for the oil.

25 Other Prizes $1.00 EACH for twenty-five next best names for the boy and lists of uses for the oil.

Prizes Will Be Paid for the Names Considered the Best for Kibler's All 'Round Oil Boy and the Best Lists of Uses for Kibler's All 'Round Oil

Contest On Now—Ends March 31

PURPOSE OF THE CONTEST

The cute little fellow holding this announcement is Kibler's All 'Round Oil Boy. He has never been named. But he typifies all that is best in a cleaning, polishing and lubricating oil, so we want to name him right away—just as soon as possible. And as there are undoubtedly scores of ways to use Kibler's All 'Round Oil that we do not have listed in our files yet, we are going to ask for a list of the uses of Kibler's All 'Round Oil from each person who enters this contest. The contestants who send in the best names for the boy with the best lists of uses will win the prize money.

RULES OF CONTEST—READ CAREFULLY

1. This contest is open to everybody. Anyone can enter—old or young—no age limit.

2. All you have to do is, send us what you believe to be the best name for Kibler's All 'Round Oil Boy, together with a list of uses for Kibler's All 'Round Oil.

3. You may send in one name, or a list of names, as often as you want, until the contest ends, but you cannot qualify for one of the prizes unless you send in at least one list of uses for the oil.

4. Do not send names consisting of more than 3 words.

5. Write only on one side of the paper. Be sure to state your name and address.

6. You will be more likely to suggest a prize-winning name for the boy if you first prepare and study your list of uses for the oil.

7. If two or more contestants suggest the winning name for any prize, then the best list of uses sent in by any of these contestants will break the tie and determine final winner. If, however, there also should be a tie in the winning lists of uses, equal prizes will be awarded the winning contestants.

8. If you want additional copies of this announcement, write us, or ask your dealer, who can get them for you quickly if his supply happens to be exhausted.

9. Clip and save this announcement so you will have these rules on hand when you are ready to make up and send in your list of names and uses.

REMEMBER—You must send in at least one list of uses for Kibler's All 'Round Oil in order to have any of the names you may suggest for the boy qualify for one of the above prizes.

Now Is the Time to Try This Wonderful Oil.

You will never have a better opportunity than this big prize contest affords to see just what Kibler's All 'Round Oil will do for you in a practical way in your home or office or wherever you wish to use it.

You will find Kibler's All 'Round Oil pleasant to work with—a soft, smooth, clean, polishing oil—no acid, no lye, no grease, no alkali—nothing to harm the most tender hands or delicate surface.

You will be surprised at how quickly it will enable you to make all your floors, all your woodwork, all your furniture look spick, span and new.

You will be gratified to learn that Kibler's All 'Round Oil never gets gummy, never turns rancid, never gets sticky, never leaves a coating.

You will be pleased to discover how thoroughly it cleanses and brightens every metal surface it touches, every piece of silver, aluminum, nickel, copper, bronze ware, every utensil in your kitchen, every ornament in your home—absolutely preventing rust or tarnish.

Its Action Is Marvelously Effective

After you have once tried it you will always have Kibler's All 'Round Oil on hand for lubricating your sewing machine, clocks, scissors, Victrola, every modern housekeeping convenience or pleasure device that you use or enjoy.

You will be glad to know that Kibler's All 'Round Oil makes dusting really dustless—drying quickly, and leaving no coating to catch more dust or lint. You will marvel at the way it works out the dirt and works in the finish—the lustre that lasts, a beautiful, bright, permanent gloss, with the spots and stains entirely removed, all scratches and scars completely covered, and the original grain restored.

Start Using Kibler's All 'Round Oil Today. It Will Help You Win!

Your list of uses that you intend to enter in this contest with your suggestion for a name for Kibler's All 'Round Oil Boy will grow and grow until you have doubled and trebled the number of uses now listed on the side of the box in which your bottle of Kibler's All 'Round Oil comes to you.

Every good dealer has now or will soon have this wonderful oil on sale, all ready for you when you call for it. Just as fast as possible we are placing Kibler's All 'Round Oil in every drug store, grocery store, furniture store, hardware store—every store possible. If by any chance it is not yet on sale at your store, just send us your order for a bottle of Kibler's All 'Round Oil, either twenty-five or fifty cent size, with the name of your dealer, and we will see that you are supplied at once with both the oil and full particulars about Kibler's big name contest.

Somebody is going to win the prize money that we have offered for the best names for our All 'Round Boy and for the best lists of uses of Kibler's All 'Round Oil. You might just as well be one of the fortunate prize-winners.

BY MAROON.

Illinois defeated Chicago 19 to 16 in a bristling basketball battle at Bartlett gymnasium last night. The passing game of the veteran Illini players was too much for Pat Page's fighters, but the Maroons tried desperately to rescue the game in the last few minutes and missed by only three points.

The struggle was rough throughout, both teams being penalized heavily. Bent had a chance to win for Chicago on free throws, but caged only two of eight. Ralf Woods also had a bad night on the short tosses, missing six of his nine chances.

Maroons Lead at Start.

Gorgas opened the scoring with a long basket for the Maroons. Each team got a free throw and then Townley tossed another ringer. The Maroon lead soon vanished when the passing game of Alwood and Ray Woods started, and by feeding the ball to Ralf Woods, the downstaters pulled ahead, 13 to 7, at the half.

The same passing game gave the Illini a big lead in the second half. Pat Page shifted his lineup and changed to the long shot game. Clark caged two of his many attempts and Bent got a basket. When the Maroons got within three points of the orange and blue, Coach Jones' men resorted to slow passing and held their lead.

Crowd Storms Gym.

Special police were called to keep back the lines that struggled to get into the gym. Many failed to get past the gate. Lineup:

PRIVATE CLUBS CAN HOLD BOUTS

New York, Feb. 3.—Boxing fans were somewhat surprised today to learn, through an interview with Gov. Whitman, his belief that the repeal of the Frawley boxing law in this state would not mean the end of boxing.

Gov. Whitman declared bouts before members of clubs could not be prevented, although he admitted that if the "clubs" and their members became too numerous police laws would be used to control them. He asserted amateur bouts would not be affected.

It had been the general belief that the repeal of the law would put an end to bouts of any class. No promoter could be brought to see, however, that he would be able to stage a bout that would bring in many dollars without violating the laws of the state.

JOHNNY KILBANE WINS EASY BOUT

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Johnny Ray of Pittsburgh had a bad case of stage fright when he faced Johnny Kilbane at the National A. C. tonight and the featherweight champion of the world won an easy victory. Ray played safe, and through his ability to cover up, crouch, and hold when the going became a trifle rough he was able to weather the six rounds. In the third round Ray accidentally hit Kilbane foul and the champ went after him for a few exchanges, but that was about the only thrilling moment in the contest.

White to Fight Leonard in Garden Next March

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Charley White and Benny Leonard, two of the foremost lightweights, may be principals in the third of the series of big ring contests which Grant Hugh Browne intends to promote in Madison Square garden. Managers of Nate Lewis, for White and Billy Gibson for Leonard plan to have the match early in March. It may take place on March 12, a week after the Darcy-McCoy fight. As Leonard is booked solid until early in March, the bout could not be staged before then. Browne also is said to be negotiating for a match between Johnny Kilbane and Freddie Welsh.

ORGANIZED professional football, which is being discussed as a possibility of the future, does not appeal strongly to those who have been brought up on and enjoyed the game as played by college elevens. Professional football has made its greatest progress in those cities which are not visited by the big college elevens. Followers of collegiate football seldom have shown much interest in the professional brand.

Football is properly a college game. No objection can be found if others want to play it; in fact, it would be un-American to attempt to discourage from playing, if they wish, those who for one reason or another do not go to college. It is, however, best suited to a college environment.

Football, in its highest development, calls for a strenuous ante-season period of physical preparation, with much time devoted to team drill. Educators frequently question whether the time devoted to the development of our successful elevens is not too great. Americans are noted for their strenuousness in athletics and their desire to win—qualities which frequently bring criticism from vanquished international rivals. Critics should realize, however that preparation really lessens the danger of football injuries. Fatalities, while of course possible, are comparatively rare among the big teams.

Playing football with no financial reward and solely for loyalty to one's college, brings out the best features of such effort. If the coach is not a mucker, sportsmanship is developed. Players are restrained on the field by the honor of their university. The environment is healthful.

No such restrictions prevail in professional football. Nothing except the penalties exist to restrain players from brutal or unsportsmanlike tactics—and football is a game in which injuries may be inflicted willfully. Time for practice necessary to develop team work and the careful coaching and medical attention given college players can hardly be expected.

It may be argued that the pro ranks would be recruited largely from graduated college stars. The answer might be that the college man worth while should not, after graduation, have time for such practice, unless he had decided to enter the field as a coach. Colleges generally are adopting rules to prevent coaches and players still in college from indulging in the professional game.

Professional football may come, and, bulwarked by the American desire for spectacles, it may prove profitable. It never can establish the sentiment behind the victory or defeat which attaches to combats between two elevens representing colleges which for years have been athletic rivals.

SILVER SKATES DERBY MADE ME CHAMP.—STAFF

BY WALTER ECERSALL.

Art Staff and Lee Jensen of the Northwest Skating club and Sigurd [Brick] Larsen of the Norwegian Turners, Chicago skaters, who won honors in the national championships at Saranac lake last week, returned yesterday.

"Because of THE TRIBUNE'S Silver Skates tourney, the trophy which I wanted to win, I kept in shape," Art Staff said. "I won the international two mile championship because I kept in condition by training for the Silver Skates Derby. I am pleased to bring back my trophy to Chicago."

Lee Jensen and Brick Larsen confirmed Staff's statement, lauded the management of the Saranac Lake committee, and gave THE TRIBUNE credit for getting them into condition to bring back titles to the central west.

Staff Heads List.

Wednesday Staff won the international two mile championship. On the same day Brick Larsen won the mile and three-fourths mile, and finished third in the two mile event. Lee Jensen was third in the mile.

Thursday Staff won the quarter, half mile and three mile and was third in the 220 yard hurdle. Larsen was second in the half mile and three mile. The standing of the western skaters who took part in the championships is as follows: Staff, 150; Larsen, 110; Jensen, 10. According to international skating rules, thirty points are awarded the winner of first place, twenty to second, and ten to third.

Delayed on Return Trip.

The Chicagoans returned after considerable delay. They were scheduled to arrive at 9 p. m. Friday, but didn't get in until 4 a. m. Saturday. Hundreds of Swedes and Norwegians who were on hand to meet them at the La Salle street station were disappointed.

HARD SCHEDULE ARRANGED FOR CUB REGULARS

Booked for 34 Training Games, with Several Dates to Fill.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

That the Cubs will have plenty of opportunities to practice for the opening of the baseball season, providing they aren't called out by Uncle Sam to fight the Germans, was made known yesterday when President Weeghman handed out the itinerary of the first team. With four or five dates still open, there have been scheduled exactly thirty-four exhibition combats. If the second squad is booked as freely, the Cubs will have about as busy a time as ever the White Sox did on their various jaunts to the Pacific slope.

Leaving here two weeks from Tuesday night, the Cubs will reach the training camp at Pasadena the following Saturday afternoon, stopping for twelve hours at the Grand Cañon en route. There will be almost a week of limbering up before the boys will be put into a regular game, the first battle being on March 2 against the Los Angeles club at Pasadena. Games will follow against Los Angeles and Vernon, some at Pasadena and some at Los Angeles, for the next ten days, making the entire visit at the south end of the state extend over a period of nearly three weeks.

Ten Days at Frisco.

The squad then will go to San Francisco, playing at Modesto on the way north, and there will be ten days of battles against the Frisco and Oakland teams. The California dates will end on March 25 and there are four open dates to be filled before the regulars appear at Amarillo, Tex., on the way home.

From Amarillo the first squad will go to Oklahoma City for a two days' stop, leaving there the night of April 1 and appearing in Wichita, Kas., the following day. One day at St. Joseph, two days at Kansas City, one day at Des Moines, one at St. Paul, and one at Minneapolis completes the booking, after which the bunch will come to the north side in Chicago to rest up for the opening, which is likely to be on April 11.

Tip O'Neill Arranging Dates.

Tip O'Neill, former president of the Western league, is in California completing the booking for the second team and making arrangements for hotel accommodations at the training camp. Until he has finished his job the dates for the second team will not be announced.

It is the plan of Manager Mitchell to keep the entire squad together during all of the time spent in California, with the exception of short jaunts of one or two days for the second outfit. Jimmy Sheckard will be in charge of the rookies on those jaunts and will take command of them on the homeward route, which is likely to be through Salt Lake City and Denver.

President Weeghman announced he expects at least 100 persons, including ball players, to be aboard the special train when it leaves.

Red Sox and Brooklyn Plan Joint Training Tour

Boston, Mass., Feb. 3.—Plans for a joint spring training tour between the world champion Boston Red Sox and the Brooklyn Nationals, contenders in the last world's series, were announced tonight. Red Sox pitchers and catchers, in charge of Manager Jack Barry, will leave here March 3 for Hot Springs, Ark. Other players will follow March 10.

The first exhibition game between the two clubs will be played at Hot Springs on March 27. Other games in the series are:

March 28, Memphis, Tenn.; March 29, Little Rock, Ark.; March 30, Oklahoma City; March 31-April 1, Kansas City, Mo.; April 2, Davenport, Ia.; April 3, Peoria, Ill.; April 4, Indianapolis, Ind.; April 5, Lafayette, Ind. April 7 and 8 Boston will play the Toledo club of the American association in Toledo.

Chicago Skating Stars to Enter Aurora Events

Members of the Northwest Skating club will conduct a meet under the auspices of the Aurora Skating club at Aurora this afternoon. The Chicago ice speeders will leave on a special from the Marshfield station of the Chicago-Aurora electric line at 12:30 o'clock. The events will be run in a six lap outdoor rink. Art Staff, Lee Jensen, Brick Larsen, and other Chicago cracks will make the trip.

The events scheduled for the Aurora skate meet follow:

Open to Western Skating association athletes—2 mile class A; mile class B, mile class C, and novice.

Closed race for championship of Aurora and vicinity—mile.

Fancy skating prize contests—For men, for women, for couples.

Ex-Ald. John E. Scully of Chicago and Mrs. O. R. Pritchard will give fancy skating exhibitions.

GREATEST AUTO SHOW ON RECORD COMES TO CLOSE

BY SHEPPARD BUTLER.

Last rites were said over the automobile show at the Coliseum last night, with the management jubilant over an attendance record which it estimated at 280,000. Although the distribution of tickets was such that no accurate count could be made, the sponsors of the exhibit insisted it was the biggest ever—a statement which no one who viewed the crowds during the week would be inclined to doubt.

"It was the show supreme," said General Manager Samuel A. Miles as he closed his desk. "It has set a standard which will be hard to eclipse. Above all things, the big exhibition demonstrated that Chicago is naturally the trading capital of the United States, if not the financial center. The country now looks to this city to set the pace for the automobile industry."

At 10:30 o'clock there was a blare from the band, a tooting of tin horns, and a shower of leftover literature from the balconies. Not much time, though, was allowed for the high jinks. Spectators were quickly informed that their presence was no longer desired, and within five minutes the show was over.

Some Cars Driven from Show.

Thereupon workmen swooped down on the exhibits and began the work of trundling the hundreds of cars through the doorways. Here some were filled with "gas" and driven away under their own power. Others, spurning the road after their week of exclusiveness, were loaded on big trucks to be carted home.

All night the circus-like activity went on, and it will continue today, for the Coliseum must be cleared in a hurry to make way for the cement show, which opens on Wednesday.

At the Congress hotel, too, there were grotesque scenes in the dismantling of the automobile salon, which had been in session during the week. At midnight the huge machines were trundled down "Peacock alley," presenting somewhat the same appearance as would a procession of locomotives through your dining room. At the Congress street entrance they were covered with sheets and spirited away, ghostlike, into the night.

Bigger Salon Next Year.

A promised announcement from the salon management as to plans for its display next year did not materialize. It is said, however, that larger quarters are to be obtained for a considerably more ambitious exhibit of high priced cars than was attempted at the Congress.

HYDE PARK WINS AT HOCKEY, 3-1

Hyde Park High school hockey team defeated the Northwest Skating club, 3 to 0, in a well fought match at Garfield park yesterday afternoon. Walter Barndt, the prep golf champion, scored two goals, Murphy getting the other. Capt. Kerr was a big factor in attack. Capt. Hamilton was the best of the Northwest forwards. A big crowd watched the play. Lineup:

CRAZY KENNEDY, DETECTIVE

Words AND Pictures

BY RING W. LARDNER

CHAPTER I.

ONE of the strangest cases ever heard of, and one which required more clever handling than any in which Crazy Kennedy was ever engaged, was that of Miss Minnie Coal, the daughter of a wealthy south side janitor, and her "twin suitors."

Miss Coal was engaged to a young undertaker named M. Balmer. On Miss Coal's thirty-ninth birthday, Balmer presented her with a valuable egg. It was a White Leghorn and he had imported it at great expense from Indiana. Two days later Balmer called up his beautiful young fiance and told her he would be unable to call that evening, as an entire family had died of ptomaine poisoning, and it would take him all night to fix them up.

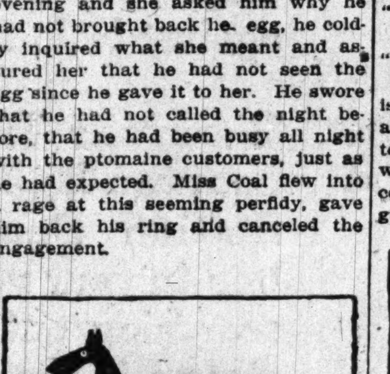
Imagine Miss Coal's surprise then, when she answered the doorbell about half past eight that night and saw her fiancé on the threshold.

"I thought," she thoughted, when he had come in, "that you were going to be busy all night."

"I thought so, too," replied Balmer, "but I lost those clients. Their relatives have a friend in the undertaking business. However," he continued, "I can stay only a little while. I came to get that egg. I am going to have it engraved for you."

"O, that will be cute!" said Miss Coal, and gave him the egg.

But when Balmer called the next evening and she asked him why he had not brought back the egg, he coldly inquired what she meant and assured her that he had not seen the egg since he gave it to her. He swore that he had not called the night before, that he had been busy all night with the ptomaine customers, just as he had expected. Miss Coal flew into a rage at this seeming perfidy, gave him back his ring and canceled the engagement.



"I think it was a dark horse," said Crazy.

Nearly heartbroken, but determined to get at the truth of the matter, Balmer went to the police and told them his story. Their only theory was that Balmer was a somnambulist and had taken Miss Coal's egg in his sleep. Fortunately for the young man, a friend told him of Crazy Kennedy, and as a last resort he appealed to him to solve the mystery and win him back his love and happiness.

CHAPTER 2.

Kennedy told me of the case when I dropped up to see him one afternoon. He was petting a White Leghorn hen, and it was in response to my look of amazement that he gave me the story.

"If Balmer is not a fearful liar," he said, "it is simply a matter of a striking resemblance between he and another man, a clever criminal, who used his appearance to get the egg."

"Possibly one of the Gold Coast gang," I ventured.

"No," said Kennedy, "for I visited the Rogues' Gallery and looked at all their pictures. Not one of them resembles Balmer."

"Who, then?" I who'd.

"I think it was a dark horse," said Crazy. "But this little White Leghorn is going to find him for me."

"How?" I how'd.

"It is a peculiarity of White Leghorns," said Kennedy, "that when they get within a few feet of one of their eggs they cackle, whether they can see it or not. I am going to patrol the streets of Chicago with this hen, and when she cackles I will know I am close to the thief. For it is certain that he is carrying his loot with him. He would not dare try to pawn it so soon."

CHAPTER 3.

The success of Kennedy's striking scheme came two days later. He was crossing the Rush street bridge when the hen emitted a fearful cackle. As luck would have it, there was only one man on the bridge besides Kennedy.

Crazy leaped on the other and bound him hand and foot before he could resist.

"Now, you scoundrel!" he cried. "Give me Miss Coal's egg."

"I can't! I can't!" wailed the thief: "I ate it for breakfast this morning."

"Well, anyway," said Kennedy, "it is not too late to reunite Miss Coal and Balmer. You will have to come to Miss Coal's house with me and with her lover, so that she may be convinced that her former fiancé is guiltless."

Balmer and the robber looked exactly alike.

"I will gladly do that if you promise not to send me to jail," said the wretch.

"I promise," promised Kennedy.

CHAPPTER 4.

An hour later, Crazy, Balmer, the thief and myself entered Miss Coal's mansion. It was no wonder that she had been deceived. Balmer and the robber looked exactly alike.

So great was Miss Coal's joy at finding her sweetheart innocent that she merely laughed at the loss of the egg.

"It was no good anyway," the thief said.

Then Crazy Kennedy sent him to jail, where he had promised not to send him. And the smart little hen Kennedy presented to the bride-to-be.

JOIE RAY RUNS AWAY FROM ALL IN BOSTON MEET

Boston, Mass., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Joie Ray of Chicago had everything his own way in the three mile run at the Boston Athletic association indoor meet tonight. He made a new record for the hall, 14 minutes 33 4-5 seconds. Ray came up from fourth place and took the lead after four laps, never to lose it.

Viller Kyronen, who was expected to press Ray closely, dropped out at the twentieth lap. After the fourth lap he followed Ray and tried to take the lead by a sprint at the mile, but found the going too hot. With ten laps to go, Ray lapped his closest opponent, Henigan of Boston, and at the finish was nearly two laps ahead of him. Nightingale of New Hampshire, the third man, was lapped by Ray three times.

Champion Beaten in Feature.

Ivan A. Myers, national champion, was third in the feature event, the hunter mile, which was won by Mike Devanney of the Millrose A. C., with John Ryan of the B. A. A. second. The time, 4:25 1-5, was one second behind the track record.

Myers sprinted after the first lap, and with five laps to go he was bunched with Ryan and Devanney, Ryan leading and Devanney third. As the bell lap started, Devanney uncorked a great sprint outside of both foes, and won by six yards. Myers was six yards behind Ryan.

BY J. H. RITCHIE.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—The Red River dog derby came to an official finish at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon when Fred Hartman, the last man in but the central figure of the race, staggered over the finish line at Como park and started to lie down in the snow to begin the long rest.

Willing hands grasped the plucky driver and he was lifted into an awaiting limousine at the direction of Louis W. Hill and carried to the latter's home. Late tonight it was announced Hartman, although tired and exhausted, showed no signs of any such a complete collapse as had been feared.

Al Campbell's Team Wins.

First prize of $500 for the 500.5 mile race from Winnipeg went to Albert Campbell, a Creek halfbreed from the Hudson bay district. Bill Grayson was second, Joe Metcalf third, and Gabriel Campbell, brother of the winner, fourth.

But never has fictionist out of the realm of fancy evolved a man who loomed larger in the popular fancy of the northland than does Hartman, a little Boston assayer employed in Manitoba. There have been stories told of suffering and pluck and endurance on the unblazed trails of the whitened north, but never, so far as known, has a man lived such a story as that of the heroic little driver who stumbled across the finish line at Lake Como in the early cold shadows of tonight.

Handicapped from Start.

Almost at the outset misfortune overtook Hartman. One of his dogs was killed in a team fight and it was necessary for him to continue with four. Under the rules he was compelled to finish with four dogs, and the loss of another would have forced him out of the race. He dared not ride, as could the Campbells, Grayson, and Metcalf, with their fresh, strong teams. He was compelled to conserve the strength of his misfit team. That meant care and forced him to run every foot of the way.

Men with crack teams sickened and quit on the long grind, but Hartman, with the whole northwest looking on and applauding, struggled on through blizzard nights and days of keen torture in extreme cold.

When he came to the point that frozen feet, partly frozen face, and unwilling and exhausted dogs seemed to be forcing him out of the race the little chap, the smallest and slightest man in the race, dug in the harder, although every mile carried with it additional pain and added fatigue.

Wins Admiration of Rivals.

The four leaders, after the race had singled down to that number, were inclined to loaf along the road, but every minute of the time they were watching Hartman. They knew he was out of it as winner of first place unless some sort of a miracle happened, but they kept him under close observation, and although they were rivals, they came at last to outspoken admiration of the man who was following them like a persistent ghost, but at the expense of every atom of his strength and iron determination not to quit until he had crossed the finish line.

Hartman's last punishing day started at 2:21 a. m., when, after a four hour rest at Elk River, he rose and attempted to steal a march on his sleeping rivals. Their watchman notified them of Hartman's departure and they were up and after him in a few minutes. They drove "big train" all day. Albert Campbell finished at Como park at 12:44.

Passed by Leaders at Anoka.

At Anoka they passed the plodding Hartman for the last time. Hartman reached Anoka at 6:25 and went to a hotel, where a local physician gave his knotted muscles a final rubdown and treated his frozen and blistered feet. He then breakfasted and snatched a short nap until 8:15 a. m. He left Anoka and followed the trolley line down to Fridley, where the going was fair. He reached Fridley at 12:30 o'clock. Here he had dinner at a farmhouse and remained there until 1:15, when he again took the road with his tired team.

Accompanying him from Anoka were two men on horseback, sent there by the St. Paul carnival committee as an escort. One of them, Dr. A. A. Feist, a veterinarian, treated the dogs, some of which were suffering from frozen feet, with injections of cocaine to ease the pain.

Hits Rough Road Near Fridley.

Hartman left Fridley and here encountered the worst going of the trip, a drifted, unbroken road. The dogs foundered in the snow and the nearly exhausted driver fought his way through big drifts. A team following him could not negotiate the road. At 3 o'clock he reached New Brighton.

Waiters.

THEY COME IN PAIRS:

There was only a short delay at New Brighton, and the resolute driver once more took his lagging dogs out on the road and started the final stretch of his long and heroic run. The dogs were slowing down and needed urging to keep them going.

Hartman's step became more and more a matter of spasmodic habit than endeavor. He was running on cold nerve alone. The road was in fair condition, and about four miles from the finish he was joined by the beginning of what finally evolved into a procession of escort in his honor. There were mounted policemen, horsemen, ski riders, snow shoe runners, and pedestrians.

Dogs Sleep While Crowd Cheers.

Every quarter of a mile added its quota of people, and when the sun went down he was followed by at least a thousand. It was growing into the blue, cold haze of the early night when he came across the finish line at the head of the lake. He was carried away in triumph in a limousine, and his exhausted dogs were piled into a sled and hauled into St. Paul. Their savagery of Friday, when they resented the handling or fitting of canvas moccasins, was gone. They were asleep in the midst of the din almost the minute they struck the hay in the sled.

A great throng gathered at the finish line before 12 o'clock. They were congested at the judge's stand, on Como boulevard, and at the moving picture finish line far up the lake. It would be hard to estimate the number of people waiting at 1 o'clock, but it could not have been less than 25,000.

Victor Finishes at Fast Clip.

Albert Campbell's team, the first to finish, came down the road and on the ice at a spanking gait, with the face of the Cree driver expanded into a broad smile. They whirled down the ice speedway and up to the finish line in a lane of cheering enthusiasts. In a short time Bill Grayson, Joe Metcalf, and Gabriel Campbell appeared. They, too, whirled by the finish in an explosion of cheers.

Their passage was the signal for the officials to figure up their standing on account of the difficulty in starting time at Winnipeg ten days before. In a short time they announced that Albert Campbell had won first place, Bill Grayson second, Joe Metcalf third, and Gabriel Campbell fourth. They were surrounded by throngs of curious people, but shortly after the finish they were taken on into the city and their dogs housed, while the drivers sought sleep.

Brave Cold to Greet Favorite.

"Where is Hartman?" then became the universal query. So strong an appeal had Hartman's heartbreaking race made on the imagination and sentiment of the crowd that few left during the afternoon and such as did were immediately replaced by newcomers.

They spent the entire afternoon in the cold waiting for Hartman. Despite the fact that he was a bad last in the race he was their popular hero. They wanted to see him finish and to tell him so. They did. Only the prompt action of the officials in getting him into a closed car prevented him from being literally mobbed by the throngs of excited admirers.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

A month ago close Chicago followers of sports were asking one another blankly, "Who is this fellow John Olin who made Joe Stecher leave the wrestling ring in the east?" Some stories from the east painted Olin as a veritable blonde giant from the north. Others had him as a hairy caveman who knew nothing of the fine points of the mat game but crushed his opponents by brute strength. John ranged in height from 6 feet to 6 feet 6 inches of brawn, and he might have weighed 500 pounds, to listen to the enthusiastic reports.

Olin last week located in Chicago for the winter to carry out a campaign for the world's championship. He will train in a gymnasium and is anxious to take the mat as soon as possible against contenders in the way of his title hopes, so Chicagoans will have a chance to see the new "hope" in action for themselves.

Born in Finland.

Olin is a Finlander. He was born in the historic old city of Helsingfors, and has as friends of years' standing a number of world's champions—Hannes Kolehmainen, the distance running champion; Armas Taipale, Olympic champion discus thrower, and J. Saaristo, Olympic javelin throwing champion—all Finns from near Helsingfors.

So his ambition to hold a world's championship, too, is easily understandable. He weighs 215 pounds now, although at one time he tipped the beam around 270. He is 5 feet 11 inches in height, an erect, steel muscled athlete who applies in his matches the exertions of a pair of shoulders that might do justice to an ox.

John Frederick Olin, to give him his name in full, is 30 years old. He is one of a family of eight, having four brothers and three sisters. He lived in Helsingfors until four years ago, when he came to the United States, stayed a while in various New England cities, and finally moved to Worcester, Mass., where he is now the proprietor of a bath house.

Learns Tanner's Trade.

The Finn grappler attended the folk school, corresponding roughly to America's grade schools, until he was 14 years old. He was an apprentice in a sort of school to learn the tanner's trade for another three years. Then he practiced his trade.

It was his sturdy 270 pounds which steered John into the wrestling game. After Olin had passed a number of years putting by his tanner's earnings regularly, Finnish athletic officials looked over the bulk of him and said to one another, "Why wouldn't this big, honest young fellow make a fine wrestler with some training?"

That was in 1907, and soon afterward John took part in his first contest against another young heavyweight of Helsingfors. They wrestled according to the Græco-Roman style, which is the European notion of wrestling.

In 1912 Olin came to the United States. In Massachusetts he met Waino Ketonen, a Finn middleweight wrestler, now ranked as top notcher at his weight. The two had known each other ten years ago, before Waino left the old country for America. In Worcester Ketonen worked with Olin, showing him holds and giving him pointers on catch as catch can wrestling. He also gave him lessons in the English language, and renewed these lessons when Olin reached Chicago last week.

Beat Roller in Two Falls.

The two Finns made themselves adept at the game by daily bouts in the Y. M. C. A., and in 1913 Olin made his debut as a professional westler at a Finnish club. He took part in several such matches. In 1914 John won his first match of note, throwing Dr. Roller at Woonsocket, R. I., in two falls. Early last year he engaged Alexander Aberg, another Finn, known as the Græco-Roman champion, at Worcester. They wrestled in European style for two hours and thirty minutes, after which Aberg left to catch a New York train without being able to get near a fall.

Olin's matches were so few that he never broke into print much, and his brief pedigree as a wrestler left him little known. His big match, which thrust him into prominence, was that in which he gained the referee's verdict over Joe Stecher at Springfield last Dec. 11. Olin, through Ketonen, gives this story of that bout:

"There were no ropes to the ring. For the first half hour we were standing up. Then Stecher pushed me off the mat. The referee, Jim Barnes, put us back, with me on the bottom. Stecher worked into position for the scissors and used the scissors for seventeen minutes, but it didn't hurt much.

Breaks Scissors Hold.

"Then I turned quickly, broke the hold, threw Stecher off, and had his shoulders touching the mat for a second. I got up and offered my hand, because I thought I had won one fall, but I hadn't held Stecher's shoulders down long enough. That was after about an hour and five minutes.

"Stecher pushed me off the mat three times. He got the scissors on me again and held it for fourteen minutes, but I broke it again. It wasn't hard to break. Then I said to Stecher: 'Everybody can see you can't beat me. But let's make it Græco-Roman style a little while, and I'll show you how quickly I can beat you.'

"After an hour and a half, when Stecher got rough and pushed me off the mat the third time, I got sore, picked Stecher up, and slammed him down on the mat. Stecher got up, just looked me over, and walked off to the dressing room. The referee gave me the match."

REISELT JUMPS IN CUE RATING

Making his first western trip around the Interstate Three Cushion league, Otto Reiselt of Pittsburgh came through with flying colors and must be taken seriously as a contender for the championship and $1,500 first prize.

Reiselt after losing to Maupome at Cleveland by five points defeated Hugh Heal, Martin Maley, Tod Hascall, and then gave August Kieckhefer the worst defeat on his home table in many moons. This reverse toppled Kieckhefer from first to third, Charley Ellis moving into the lead.

Veteran Joe Capron won one match out of three away from home and gave Ellis and Jackson hard battles. Ellis will travel this week and will open tomorrow night at Bensinger's against Joe Capron.

NEW NET CLUB TO START WITH THIRTY COURTS

Big Organization on South Side Will Have 45 When Completed.

BY KEENE GARDINER.

One reason why Chicagoans are taking more and more to tennis is because of hte South Side Tennis club. The South Side club was born only three months ago, the live offspring of two dwindling clubs—the old Wanderers and the Hyde Park Cricket and Athletic club—but in the ninety days it has been incorporated for $60,000, a seven and a half acre site bought at Seventy-third street and East End avenue, and the work of laying out forty-five courts and building a two story clubhouse awaits only the permission of the weather man.

Thirty stone dust courts are to be constructed, twenty of which have been promised for May 1. Fifteen courts are planned, but will not be ready till later, as the grass must be grown. The clubhouse is the plan of Architect Dave Robertson, an enthusiastic tennis fan, who has donated his services.

Various Sports at Club.

The club is not intended strictly as a tennis organization, but will be the scene of social activities of all sorts. A bowling green, nine hole putting green, sand pile for children, and croquet court are included in the drawings. Provision has been made for holding parties and dances in the clubhouse.

The first floor, dropped two feet below ground level, will contain lockers and bath facilities for 500 men members. The main floor will include dining room, men's lounging room, men's parlor and buffet, and a screened semi-private dining porch. The women's section, located on the main floor also, will include locker rooms, showers, and a parlor.

Pay $15,000 on Account.

The scheme for raising $60,000, for which the organization is incorporated, by selling 1,200 shares at $50 each, went without a hitch. The first payment of $15,000 has already been made. The officers of the new club are:

President—Robert L. Van Arsdale.
Vice presidents—Ralph M. McLellan, Harry S. Knox, John A. Elmsley, Jack H. Evans.
Secretary—H. E. Cragin.

The downtown office of the club is at 1329 Insurance Exchange building.

Service Station

AN All-Weather Tread on a Goodyear Tire is the best guard against winter tire troubles man has been able to devise. It is double-thick and densely tough, studded with big, rugged, sharp-edged blocks—an effective barrier to most punctures, and a vigilant resistant to skidding. It is as sure-footed in snow as a malamute, and as serviceable as your car itself.

Every Goodyear Tire ought to be at work outside a Goodyear Tube. No other tube so safely insures the constant air pressure needed to cushion strain and shock. No other tube is so protected in the making against leak, seep or creep.

Goodyear Tires and Goodyear Tubes both can be had from Goodyear Service Station Dealers. Probably there is one in your neighborhood. He is worth searching out and doing business with. For he is there not only to sell you tires, but to help them deliver you their last mile of service (more than you're used to from your present tires) after he has sold them.

Ask your Goodyear Service Station Dealer about the Goodyear Tire-Saver Kit.

AMERICAN HERO OF GREAT DOG RACE, AND HIS SUCCESSFUL HALFBREED RIVAL

IN CIRCLE Albert Campbell

In the accompanying photograph Fred Hartman, an American, is shown with his team of dogs as it was ready to start in the great race from Winnipeg to St. Paul. Hartman's battle against ill luck and his determined perseverance has furnished the high lights of the dramatic contest. Early in the race the lead dog shown in the photograph was killed at feeding time in a fight with another dog, probably the one seated. Another dog became sick. Hartman finished the race with three dogs hitched to the sled and one carried. He "mushed," parlance for walked or ran, nearly the entire distance of 502 miles.

FREIBERG FLOPS LEO PARDELLO AT C. A. A. SHOW

Rough Tactics by Both Men Feature One-Fall Bout.

BY HAMMERLOCK.

Because of legal complications involving the right to manage John Olin, Leo Pardello and John Freiberg were substituted in the main bout of the wrestling show last night at the Chicago Athletic association.

It was a bitterly fought bout, but after 30:04 of aggressive wrestling, Freiberg won the one fall match with a body scissors and wrist lock. The bout was featured by plenty of rough work. As both seemed equally to blame, no fouls were called.

In the opening bout "Kid" Shea won from Young Barrett in straight falls. He took the first bout in 8:04 with a body scissors and wrist lock, and the second in 10:07 by the same holds. It was an interesting contest.

Louis Talaber, middleweight, won from Herman Koch in straight falls in 15:00 with a scissors on the arm, and the second in 1:24 with a crotch hold and half nelson. After the bout Talaber issued an open challenge for the middleweight title.

In the other bout Jack Savage won from Joe Hendricks in 7:07 with a half nelson and in 7:10 with a bar arm.

Bowlers Meet Today to Name Delegates to A. B. C.

The Chicago Bowling association will hold its annual meeting for the purpose of electing delegates to the American Bowling congress, to be held in Grand Rapids on March 9 and 10, this afternoon at the Hotel Planters at 3 o'clock. The election of delegates is mostly a formality and the most of the time of those at the meeting probably will be given over to discussing the entry list of the ensuing tournament and in passing on the records of the Vermonts, who are claiming the gold medals of the congress for their 1,290 team game and Whitie Johnson's 299 count.

The final half of the intercity match between Indianapolis and Chicago will be played this afternoon and tonight at Blue Island. Jimmy Blouin and Charley Collier, the local representatives, gained a lead of 192 pins on Jess Prichett and Ed Meyer, the Indianapolis men, last week, while Collier leads Meyer by 92 pins in the individual match and Blouin is 84 pins to the rear in his series with Prichett.

YACHT OWNERS HEAD PLANS FOR ACTIVE SUMMER

Atkin of C. Y. C. Books Season of Cruises—Will Keep Up Invitation Regattas.

BY JOHN DE LONG.

The 1917 season on Lake Michigan will be an active one, according to Godfrey H. Atkin, who has just been elected head of the Yacht Owners' association of the Chicago Yacht club. The association at its first meeting of the winter season at the Chicago Athletic association started plans for a busy summer.

A full schedule of races and cruises was outlined. Both sail and power boats came in for attention and committees were named to boom those branches of yachting.

Continue Invitation Regattas.

Following the custom inaugurated last summer, the popular invitation regattas will have prominent places on the 1917 program. These regattas were put on at various intervals by Commodore Harry H. Higinbotham's organization, which invited all boat owners of the Lincoln Park, Jackson Park, Columbia, and other sailing organizations of the city to compete.

The March dinner and meeting will have the "first hundred" members of the C. Y. C. as guests of honor. These members include Charles E. Kremer, No. 1, Fred W. Morgan, No. 2, and Charles H. Thorne, No. 3, all of whom will relate their experiences in the old days. In addition to Mr. Atkin, who was elected chairman, Ogden T. McClurg was made vice chairman and Bert C. Crowder was elected secretary.

To Hold Monthly Dinner.

All members of the club, whether boat owners or not, who enjoy dining together monthly and discussing their favorite pastime when the lake is frozen, will be invited to join the association and do their share in reviving a wider interest in yachting.

Two Games in Mission League.

Two games were played in the North Side Mission league at Senn High gymnasium. Humboldt Park defeated Ravenswood, 18 to 12, and Cuyler won from Lake View, 21 to 15.

Wisdom Leads to Individuality

"Individuality," says Professor Ross, one of the foremost of sociologists, "develops thru practice in choosing."

THAT is why men and women who are accustomed to things of excellence, whose judgment is soundest, invariably surround themselves with possessions distinctly individualistic and personally fitting. They know that houses, pictures, rugs, jewels, and motor cars which are most rare are most valuable.

These exceptional men and women find just what they value highly in the Winton Six. Designed to the personal taste of its individual owner, every Winton Six is exclusive: Yours is distinctly your own, and it is recognized at sight as superior, out of the ordinary, and good to behold. CROOKED RACING KILLS HARNESS GAME IN CHICAGO

Cary Tells of Last Days of the Sport at Old West Side Driving Club.

BY R. L. CARY JR. (HYDER ALI)

In these columns last Sunday I told of a killing made on the pacer Richball at the old West Side driving park in Chicago. Many other events which made sporting history took place in later years.

The season following the Richball race it rained a good portion of the time. When it rained the west side track, built of clay, was like glue and the going was sticky, to say the best of it. The feet of the horses as they were pulled out of the mud made a noise like the popping of champagne corks at a big banquet. While this was hard on some owners of fast horses, it was a good thing for those who could negotiate the heavy going, and that class of owners was numerous.

Misfortune a Great Mudder.

Among the latter was Henry Simons, who had a gray mare called Misfortune, almost invincible in the mud. This mare won race after race in the heavy going, causing John Splan, who was the wit of the track, to remark, "It's a Misfortune for Henry Simons when it does not rain, and a misfortune for the rest of us when it does."

Another horse that was a "bear" in the heavy going was the black stallion, Black Cloud, of the stable of Peter V. Johnston. Black Cloud and Misfortune never met in a race. When somebody asked Simons how it happened, he replied: "Well, it is this way. I am a little afraid of Black Cloud, and Peter is afraid that he will meet with Misfortune, and so we have concluded to keep out of each other's way." That is just what they did.

Crooked Races Kill Game.

All that summer the racing went merrily on. When the trotters and pacers were not there the thoroughbreds were. So questionable did the racing become that the attendance fell off perceptibly and a race trotted there in the fall signed the death knell of the light harness game, which never regained its popularity in Chicago.

In this race were Monroe Chief, Clemmie G., Wilson, and two or three others. Monroe Chief, driven by Bud Doble, had a record of 2:24 and a fraction, while Wilson, driven by Orrin Hickok, had just come on from Cleveland, where he made a record of 2:16. The others in the race were given no chance to win by the smart people. When the pool selling began Monroe Chief brought $100 and the field $25.

Wilson Doesn't Try for Heat.

When the first heat was trotted and Monroe Chief had won in slow time without Wilson's making a move for the heat, pools still sold at the same figure. Just before the third heat the judges called Hickok up before the stand and informed him that they should expect him to win the next heat with Wilson, to which he laughingly responded that he would if he could, but the pools still sold Monroe Chief $100 and the field $25, and there were few who wanted the field end.

The next heat Monroe Chief again won in slow time, and the judges, after a few moments' consultation, declared it "no heat," but this action did not seem to effect the conspirators in any way and the pools sold as before.

Threw Race to Doble's Horse.

Meeting Bud Doble on the quarter stretch, I asked him: "What are they trying to do with you, Bud?" to which he replied: "Well, it looks very much like they were trying to throw this race in my lap, and that without consulting me at all, but I guess that I shall have to take it. My horse cannot trot better than 2:27 today to save his life, but what am I going to do about it?"

There was nothing to do about it, evidently, but to take the race, and this he did, winning the next heat and the race, the time being the slowest of the day, and Wilson making no move to redeem himself. It was a disgusted crowd that left the track that afternoon. They came out with the expectation of seeing a trotting race.

Introduces Famous Jockeys.

That summer Fred Archer, the famous English jockey, visited America and, of course, took in Chicago in the course of his travels. Archer was taller than the average man, and looked to be just what he was, a race rider. As I passed through the Palmer house rotunda on my way to his room I met John Splan and told him who was there, asking if he would like to meet Archer. Asking Archer the same question, to which he also replied in the affirmative, I brought him downstairs and introduced him, saying, "Mr. Archer, this is Mr. Splan, the king of our American trotting horse drivers; and Mr. Archer, Mr. Splan, is the king of the English jockeys."

There was quite a crowd of horsemen sitting around, and in a very few minutes the talk became general. Finally Archer asked:

"Mr. Splan, what are the principal fixed events in America?" (meaning the principal stake events that were to be decided each season.)

Splan's Opinion of Races.

This was a poser for Splan, but he did not mean to display his ignorance, and, scratching his gray poll thoughtfully for a moment, he replied:

"Well, Mr. Archer, between you and me, they are pretty nearly all of them fixed."

The roar of laughter that went up from the crowd, most of whom had been in constant attendance at the west side track, told John that he had scored an unintentional bull's eye.

Archer went back to England that spring, and after riding Melton home a winner in the English Derby committed suicide by shooting himself in his own apartment, having become despondent through brooding over the death of his wife.

Woods and Waters by LARRY ST. JOHN

A LITTLE JOURNEY TO FISHLAND.

ALTHOUGH Chicago does not own a municipal aquarium, we are fortunate in possessing the finest private collection of live fishes in the country. This aquarium is owned by a State street department store, and no charge of any kind is made to those who wish to see this remarkable exhibit.

No matter how mildly interested you may be in fish and fishing, you will find it worth while. To the angler and the nature lover and to children it is a source of never ending delight.

14½ lb. Pickerel, alive and well.

We will not attempt to tell all the wonderful things to be seen, but just touch the "high spots" by pointing out some of the more interesting tanks. Let us first take a look at some of the specimens that may be overlooked because of their small size.

We suppose that just about the time some one told you that awful fib that "there ain't no Santa Claus," you were also told that dragons exist only in story books. Shucks! Why, any one with half an eye (and a reading glass) can look in the tank labeled "Fairy Shrimp" and see for himself that there are really sure 'nough dragons. There it is right before you; horns, and spikes, and long, hairlike boy and girl grabbers, n'everything, and he is so transparent that you can see right through him, so he must be one of those dragons that disappear into thin air when the brave knight draws his sword to slay him. Well, I should say there are dragons!

Of course, this is a wee tiny one. It came from Lake George, which is one of the two lakes you pass on your way to Hammond, Ind. Incidentally, this lake is remarkable for the variety of plant and fish life it possesses. You can do as you please, but I am going to find out first that Fairy Shrimps don't grow as big as horses before I go anywhere near Lake George—huh, well, I guess yes!

Then there is Johnny Darter—don't overlook him. He is only a li'l feller, but very interesting. He does not swim like other fishes, but just bumps along the bottom bumpety, bumb, bump, just like that. He ought to be called Henry Fliv instead of Johnny Darter. He, too, came from Lake George. It is considered by the superstitious an omen of good luck to catch one of these odd fishes.

Most of the foreign fishes, although labeled with big names, are small in size and some of them are gayly colored, being little living jewels that flash iridescent colors when the light strikes them at different angles. Most of these fishes have odd breeding habits. Take the Paradise fish, for example, which is only about three inches long. The mother fish blows a bubble of air in which she lays the eggs. After they are laid the male fish drives her away and takes charge, while the male Fighting fish makes the bubble nest himself. These fish get their names from their "scrappy" dispositions. They would rather fight than eat. No, they do not come from Ireland, but from China—gosh!

Another interesting tank is the mouth breeding fishes labeled Paratilopia. The female carries the eggs in her mouth until they are hatched. When the little ones are out playing and a bigger fish comes along and scares them, where do you suppose they hide? Why, the mother fish simply opens her mouth and in the little ones pop. When the danger has passed she opens up and they come out and play again. There are also fishes in this collection that do not lay eggs but are live bearing.

One of these little fishes you should not overlook is Hemichromus, for, in spite of the fact that he weighs only a pennyweight or so, he is the cave man among fishes. Beating up his wife and eating up his children is his idea of a good time. For this reason they keep him in solitary confinement, as Mrs. Hemichromus is now the mother of several dozens of little Hemis.

Our photographer wanted to take his picture, but he sulked in the back of the tank and wouldn't show himself. We believe he did it on purpose. Just as you have suspected right along, his full name is Hemichromus Bimaculatus.

Then there are the largest gold fishes in the world—great big gaudy ones—and in another tank are some of their babies that are so tiny that they can hardly be seen without a reading glass, which, by the way, is something you should take with you if possible when visiting this display. In the same tank with the big gold fish are some red fin dace, a specie that breeds only in the lake in Central park, New York City.

Altogether it is the finest collection of pet or fancy fishes in the world.

So far we have said nothing about game fishes, but are saving them for a "Fishermen's Special" next Sunday.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST By A. R. Metcalfe

CUBIST bidding usually attacks bridge players between the second and fourth years, and the average length of the affliction about equals that of measles.

Of all freak bids, the shift is the only one which has a decent chance to win, and that chance usually vanishes when the opponents are skillful players. But the worst of the lot is the delayed bid, born of the delusion that the opponents are more apt to double a bid deferred until the second round.

The following hand is a good instance of this bid:

THE HANDS.

S.—7, 4, 3.
H.—A, K, Q, 9, 8, 6, 4, 2.

S.—None.
H.—10, 7, 3.
C.—J, 10, 3, 2.
D.—A, K, Q, 9, 7, 4.

Score, 0-0. North dealt and passed.

East bid one spade, south two diamonds, west five spades, and the bidding closed. East made a small slam.

North was playing the delayed bid, expecting to go to hearts on the second round, find an opponent obliging or foolish enough to double, and so secure a big score.

The bidding should have been three hearts by north, pass by east, five hearts by south, and north would have made a grand slam.

Some idea of the inferences which real players deduce from the bidding may be gained from the following dialogue:

The first player, G, stated the situation as follows: "Playing in Pittsburgh Monday I held the following cards, sitting west: Diamonds, K, 10, 8, 7, 4; clubs, 8, 5, 3; spades, A, J, 7, 5, 4. North dealt and bid one diamond, my partner two hearts, south two spades. What should I do?"

M—"Pass."

G—"Well, I doubled, giving my partner this information: First, that I could not help hearts; second, that I held long and strong spades; third, that I held long and strong diamonds, as otherwise I could not double spades, knowing that north would probably go back to diamonds; fourth, that I had no strength in clubs or I would have gone to no-trump. Is anything wrong with that reasoning?"

M—"Nothing whatever, except that the information is probably of no use whatever to your partner. He probably held six or more hearts and some strength in clubs, unless his hearts were very strong. If you pass two spades north would probably go back to diamonds, in any case, and you could begin doubling at three, with the prospect of a good score. How did the deal come out?"

G—"We lost $80."

Below is a deal from the Chicago Whist club:

West secured eight tricks only.

West should have kept two clubs in order to reënter either hand. He could not win unless north held both ace of spades and king of diamonds, and should have planned accordingly.

North should have led the small diamond at trick seven, west would have taken ten tricks had he refused to win the diamond king.

Track and Baseball Chances of Purple Depend on Exams

BY EVAN STONE.

Athletics were forgotten at Northwestern last week, every student finding his mind filled with the great object of passing examinations. The faculty and athletes held several "meets," but the results will not be announced for some time. Pending the decisions of the faculty, who also act as referee and umpire, students and coaches will worry and hope.

Purple athletic prospects are hanging in the balance. A few flunks and Coach Omer's track team will be about as formidable as that of a grammar school. Likewise, Coach McGill is on edge for fear one or two of his best bets in baseball will be called out by the faculty. Football also may suffer, but as the unfortunate will have until next fall to make up his deficiency, the problem occasions less worry to Coach Murphy.

The basketball team will resume strenuous practice tomorrow with the hope of perfecting sufficient efficiency to win a few games. Lack of staying power apparently has handicapped Capt. Underhill's quintet thus far. After playing their opponents an even game for three-fourths of the contest, the Purple has weakened and permitted the enemy to pile up a lead. The Purple players are mostly small and light, and seem unable to stand a fast pace against heavier opponents. To offset this handicap of size and weight, more speed and accuracy will be developed.

Coach McGill is planning to increase the days of practice for the baseball candidates so that he may have finished much of the preliminary details of training before outdoor practice starts.

Chicago Roller Hockey Stars Play Muncie, Ind.

Roller hockey stars from both Riverview and Dreamland will join forces this afternoon, upholding Chicago's honors at the rink sport against a picked squad from Muncie, Ind. The fray will start at 4:30 o'clock at Riverview. The local skaters will have almost the same all star lineup as that which won from Racine, Wis., a few weeks ago.

BIKE TEAMS LEAVE GOTHAM TOMORROW FOR SIX DAY GRIND

Final preparations will be made this week for Chicago's annual six day bicycle race, which opens one week from tonight at Dexter Park pavilion. Twelve teams will compete in the 144 hour event.

Eleven of the teams will leave New York tomorrow morning in a special car. The other two riders, Lloyd Thomas and Martin Ryan of San Francisco and Boston, respectively, pedaled out of Newark last Wednesday, determined to ride to Chicago. Some anxiety has been shown by Manager Chapman, for he has received no word from the pair since they started.

Work on the ten-lap egg shaped track will be started day after tomorrow. Promoters and officials are determined to make the course the fastest ever employed here, so that the three hours a day of Berlin racing will bring a world's record without endangering the lives of the riders.

Several business places along Halsted street have opened books on the race. McNamara and Verri rule favorite, although other riders are being backed by fellow countrymen.

Sea Perils May Keep Star Swimmer in Maroon Tank

There is one man who hopes that all travel between the United States and Europe will be held up by the German ultimatum. Doc White, University of Chicago swimming coach, is wishing that passage will be impossible for Wyncoop Rubinkam and that he will return to Chicago to help the Maroons when they run up against Northwestern in the conference swimming meet.

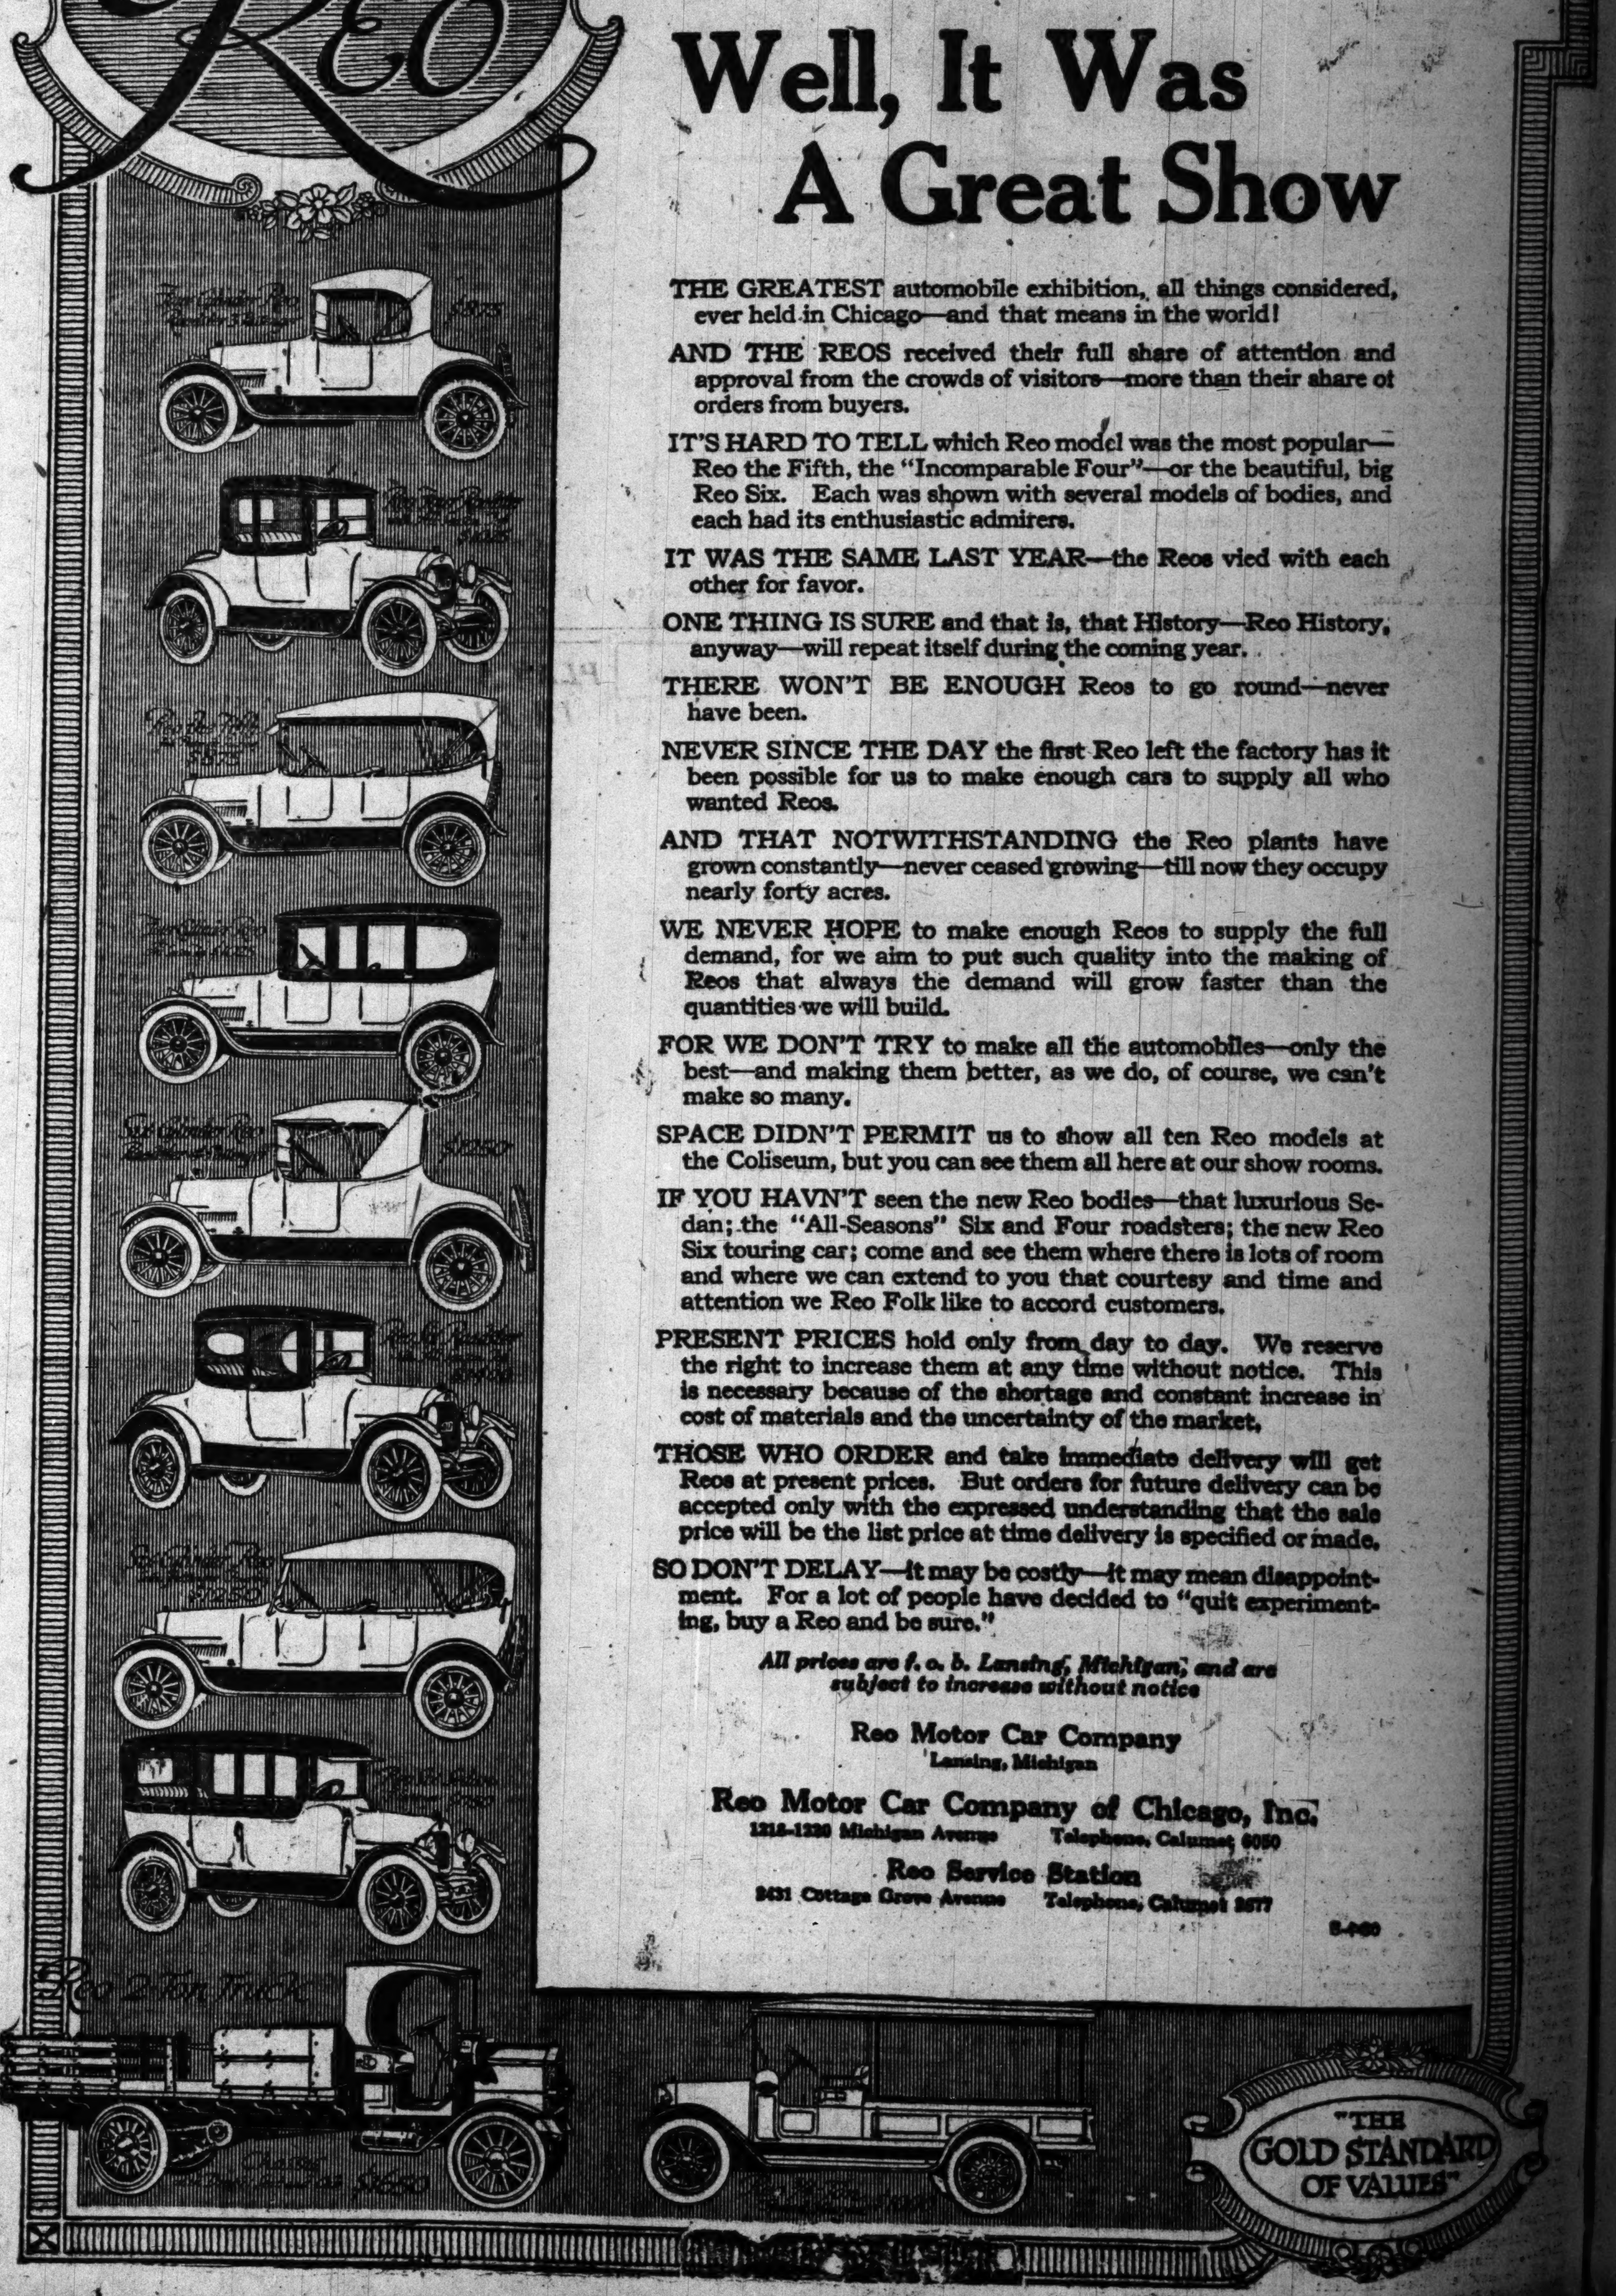
For several years Coach White has struggled against the lack of material for the aquatic team on the Midway and the failure of the students to take any interest in the swimming game. When things looked rosiest this year Rubinkam, star fancy diver of the conference, left for New York, where he expected to embark for France to engage in Red Cross work in a base hospital. Rubinkam is in the medical school and will receive special credit for his experience.

Last winter Rubinkam was second in the fancy diving event in the conference swim at Evanston, losing to Johns of Illinois by one point. The work of the men was so close that it was almost a tossup to choose the winner, and when Rubinkam was awarded second place the Maroons tied Northwestern for first place in the meet and had to split the honors. This winter Rubinkam has been practicing new stunts on the springboard and was in even better form than last year.

In spite of heavy losses from graduation, the Maroon team is one that will give Northwestern a real battle for the conference championship. Little competition is expected from Wisconsin and Illinois. Redmon, world's champion plunger; Capt. Pavlicek, conference record holder of the back stroke; Shirley, winner of second place in the breast stroke, graduated in June. O'Connor, the fourth man on the relay team and a good man in the sprint events, did not return to school.

In the sprints Coach White has Earle, who was the sensation of the conference last year, winning the 40 and 220 and placing second in the 100 yard event in his first year of competition.

In the breast stroke Vacin and Bowen, a pair of sophomores, are showing good time. Collins in the back stroke, Gorgas son in the plunge, and Crawford in the sprints, are doing well. Capt. Franklin Meine is one of the most valuable men on the squad and his general ability makes it hard for Coach White to choose his events until the pace of the other men is known.



Reo 2 Ton Truck

"THE GOLD STANDARD OF VALUES"

Well, It Was A Great Show

THE GREATEST automobile exhibition, all things considered, ever held in Chicago—and that means in the world!

AND THE REOS received their full share of attention and approval from the crowds of visitors—more than their share of orders from buyers.

IT'S HARD TO TELL which Reo model was the most popular—Reo the Fifth, the "Incomparable Four"—or the beautiful, big Reo Six. Each was shown with several models of bodies, and each had its enthusiastic admirers.

IT WAS THE SAME LAST YEAR—the Reos vied with each other for favor.

ONE THING IS SURE and that is, that History—Reo History, anyway—will repeat itself during the coming year.

THERE WON'T BE ENOUGH Reos to go round—never have been.

NEVER SINCE THE DAY the first Reo left the factory has it been possible for us to make enough cars to supply all who wanted Reos.

AND THAT NOTWITHSTANDING the Reo plants have grown constantly—never ceased growing—till now they occupy nearly forty acres.

WE NEVER HOPE to make enough Reos to supply the full demand, for we aim to put such quality into the making of Reos that always the demand will grow faster than the quantities we will build.

FOR WE DON'T TRY to make all the automobiles—only the best—and making them better, as we do, of course, we can't make so many.

SPACE DIDN'T PERMIT us to show all ten Reo models at the Coliseum, but you can see them all here at our show rooms.

IF YOU HAVN'T seen the new Reo bodies—that luxurious Sedan; the "All-Seasons" Six and Four roadsters; the new Reo Six touring car; come and see them where there is lots of room and where we can extend to you that courtesy and time and attention we Reo Folk like to accord customers.

PRESENT PRICES hold only from day to day. We reserve the right to increase them at any time without notice. This is necessary because of the shortage and constant increase in cost of materials and the uncertainty of the market.

THOSE WHO ORDER and take immediate delivery will get Reos at present prices. But orders for future delivery can be accepted only with the expressed understanding that the sale price will be the list price at time delivery is specified or made.

SO DON'T DELAY—It may be costly—it may mean disappointment. For a lot of people have decided to "quit experimenting, buy a Reo and be sure."

All prices are f. o. b. Lansing, Michigan, and are subject to increase without notice

LAST week's real estate market reflected the depressing influences of the severe cold weather and the serious complications which have arisen between this country and Germany, growing out of the latter's new naval policy.

The market has for some time been steadily slowing up as the result of the continued cold, and this was intensified by the German situation, which is said to have been responsible for halting several important transactions.

Many Small Deals.

The result was a comparatively poor showing, most of the week's business having been made up of commonplaces, with few exceptions. The transfer figures of the recorder's office show there was a good movement of the cheaper classes of property, but deals of any importance were conspicuous by their absence.

Nearly all classes of property suffered. Manufacturing property, which made such a fine showing during the previous week, and which has been the most conspicuous feature of the market's activities for several months, had only one important representation in the week's business. Outside business property made a fairly good showing, but there was little doing in acres.

Downtown Also Stagnant.

There was nothing doing in the downtown district in the way of sales, but it furnished probably the most important transaction of the week in the announcement of the lease by the Chicago real estate trustees to the Childs company, restaurateurs, of a new seven story building which they are to erect at 106-12 South Wabash avenue, on the west side of the street, 53 feet south of Monroe street.

The lot fronts 47 feet, with a depth of 85 feet, and is improved with a seven story and basement building, which will be wrecked to make way for the new building, which will be of the slow burning type. It will have a white tile front, will cost $100,000, and will be designed by J. C. Westervelt of New York City, while Holabird & Roche will supervise the construction.

The Childs company will occupy the ground floor with its restaurant and the second floor with its kitchen and will sublet the upper floors.

Annual Rent $15,000.

The lease is for a term of fifteen years at an annual net rent of $15,000 for the first five years, $17,000 for the next five, and $19,000 for the last five, or a total rent of $255,000. The lessee will pay all taxes, special assessments, insurance, charges of upkeep, etc. The Childs company is now operating restaurants at 165-67 West Madison, 55-57 West Washington, and 73-77 West Monroe street.

The property was purchased less than a year ago by the Chicago real estate trustees for $350,000. They were represented by Aldis & Co., while Dibblee & Manierre, who have represented the Childs company in all its other Chicago transactions, acted in its behalf and will have charge of the building.

Another important lease reported late in the week involves changing the name of the Fort Dearborn building at the southwest corner of Clark and Monroe streets to the Standard Trust and Savings Bank building, the bank having leased the banking quarters in the building for a period of years, the terms being withheld. The space leased will be improved with new fixtures and equipment, while the entrance will be rebuilt and a new marble stairway put in. Willis & Frankenstein were the brokers.

Plan to Promote Growth in City's Western Part

The West Side Bridge and Transportation association is the name of a new organization of business men and associations formed to promote the growth and development of the western part of Chicago, with special reference to the construction of bridges across the sanitary canal at Crawford, Cicero, and Harlem avenues, securing transportation facilities, and connecting the districts north and south of the sanitary canal.

The association will, it is said, work in harmony with the forest preserve commission in forming a connecting link over Harlem avenue between different parts of the preserve lands and will lend its aid in the suggested utilization of the old Illinois and Michigan canal for roadway or other public improvements.

Charles L. Hutchinson to Be Luncheon Speaker

The first weekly luncheon of the Chicago real estate board under the administration of President Surghnor promises to be of unusual interest as the luncheon committee has secured Charles L. Hutchinson as the speaker. It will be held at Hotel La Salle, as have all the luncheons since last fall.

LATE TRANSFERS OUTSIDE SAVE WEEK'S AVERAGE

Deals Slow at First, but Make Spurt at Finish.

Several transactions reported late in the week made the showing in outside business property much better than it promised in the early part of the week.

In one of these Edward E. and Anna B. Wendell sold to Samuel and Israel Lanski the Wendell block, a three story building at the southeast corner of Thirty-first street and Forest avenue containing six stores and twelve flats, for a reported consideration of $75,000, subject to an incumbrance of $36,000. The building has been owned by the Wendells since it was erected in 1880. In this connection the Lanskis conveyed the high grade six apartment building at 5030-32 Michigan avenue at a reported valuation of $50,000, subject to an incumbrance of $27,000, and the six apartment building at 5404-06 Michigan avenue at a reported valuation of $60,000, subject to an incumbrance of $29,000. Hempe sold to Leo Vogel the two stores and four flat building, lot 50x125 feet, at 5938-40 Broadway, forty feet north of Thorndale avenue, for a reported $37,000, subject to $15,000 at 5½ per cent. COOPER BUYS LELAND HOME

Sherman T. Cooper, the builder, has purchased from Charles W. Leland and Ralph L. Cobb, trustees of the estate of Isabelle C. Leland, the old Leland homestead at the northeast corner of Drexel boulevard and Forty-seventh street, one of the residential landmarks on that street. The lot fronts 131 feet on the boulevard and 331 feet on Forty-seventh street, the east 85 feet having a depth of 201 feet. The house has for several years been occupied by the Harvard School for Boys. The consideration is withheld, but is said to have been $100,000. The house will be razed and the property improved with a high grade store, office and flat building, similar to the one Mr. Cooper has built at the southeast corner of Forty-seventh street and the boulevard. Regelin, Jensen & Co. represented Mr. Cooper and Earl L. Herman the Leland estate.

Harry A. Hubbard Gets Highland Park Tract

A noteworthy north shore acre deal was the purchase by Harry A. Hubbard, a north shore operator, from the estate of Matilda Daggett of a tract of fifteen acres in Sheridan road in Highland Park, adjoining Ravinia park on the east. The property has a north frontage of about 800 feet on the road with a depth of nearly 600 feet and is a most attractive holding, having a heavy growth of fine timber.

The consideration is not disclosed, but it is said that acres in that vicinity are held at about $4,000. Mr. Hubbard is said to have purchased the property for speculation and plans to divide it into smaller tracts for immediate sale. Murray & Terry represented the seller and F. M. Lowe the purchaser.

Consumers Company Deal No Nearer Consummation

The published report that the Consumers company is about to close the purchase from Jacob L. Kesner of the Consumers building at the northwest corner of State and Quincy streets was declared by Fred W. Upham, president of the Consumers company, to be decidedly premature.

"The deal is just where it was six months ago," said Mr. Upham. "I have offered to trade for Mr. Kesner's equity in the building several parcels of land which the company owns, and while there has been some talk nothing approaching an agreement has been reached."

PLAN ADVANCE IN FLAT AND STORE RENTS

Move to End Rebates and Improve Market Conditions.

Much general interest has been aroused by the announcement of the proposed organization of a new association of renting agents, made up of local associations in all parts of Chicago, which has for its purpose a general advance of flat and store rents of from 10 to 15 per cent, the elimination of concessions or rebates in rents, the elimination of saloons in residence districts, uncompromising hostility against leasing property for immoral purposes and war on coal companies which are charged with violating every agreement and contract made with property owners and rental agents.

These purposes were announced at a called meeting, held at the rooms of the Chicago real estate board on Tuesday, which was attended by representatives of the Chicago and Cook county real estate boards and a number of north, south and west side organizations representing, it is said, 30,000 apartments.

A committee consisting of Ivan O. Ackley of Ackley Bros., representing the South Side Renting Agents' association; Edward E. Clasen of Lamont & Clasen, north side, and Roy D. Westervelt of Westervelt & Co., west side, were appointed to report a plan of organization at a meeting to be held tomorrow at the same place. It also is said the new organization will endeavor to put into effect some plan for the segregation of colored residence districts and will lend its aid to the zone plan now under consideration.

Paschen Brothers Buy Up Castleton Holdings

Paschen Bros., contractors, have purchased from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, the last of the Castleton syndicate holdings, 1,050 feet east of Sheridan road, fronting 389 feet on Castlewood terrace, 203 feet in Lafayette parkway, with 330 feet front on the lake. The land is submerged and the purchasers will construct a sea wall to reclaim it. While the consideration is withheld, it is said to have been around $45,000. Thomas E. Sullivan & Co. and Baird & Warner were the brokers. This is the second large purchase by the Paschens in this district.

Two New Firms Formed by Brokers in Realty

James E. Bistor, for the past ten years with the firm of W. K. Young & Co., has opened an office on the bank floor of the Conway building, 111 West Washington street, under the firm name of J. E. Bistor & Co., which will conduct a general real estate and brokerage business. A. B. Casey and W. S. Bell, who have been associated with McGuire & Orr as managers of suburban offices, have formed a partnership for the purpose of specializing in north shore property and will open offices in the Otis building.

APARTMENTS ON THE NORTH SIDE TRADING CENTER

Inland Steel Company Official Purchases Property in Sheridan Road.

Despite the general dullness, apartment property made a fairly good showing, with the north side monopolizing the most important transactions.

The most notable of these was the purchase by Ross J. Beatty, an official of the Inland Steel company, from Jacob Vihon of the property at the southwest corner of Sheridan road and Pine Grove avenue. The lot has a frontage of 157½ feet on the road by 150 feet on Pine Grove avenue, and is improved with a high grade building containing thirty apartments of seven rooms and two baths and six stores.

A consideration of $10 is given in the deed, the transfer being subject to an incumbrance of $116,000, but the actual price is said to have been $200,000. In part payment the purchaser conveyed the property at 4420-26 Michigan avenue, lot 89x161 feet, improved with a high grade nine apartment building. It was conveyed at a reported valuation of $75,000, subject to an incumbrance of $34,500. S. Richardson represented both parties and will have charge of the building.

Another Large Transaction.

Another big deal was the purchase by Alexander Hannah from Fred C. Ehman of the property at the northeast corner of Sheridan road and Windsor avenue. The lot is 94x125 feet and is improved with a high grade fifteen apartment building. A nominal consideration is given, subject to an incumbrance of $66,000, but the actual price is said to have been $115,000.

Mr. Ehman took in part payment 50x150 feet of vacant in Delaware place, near De Witt court, at a reported valuation of $25,000, and the store and flat property at the southwest corner of Chicago and California avenues, lot 50x125 feet, also valued at $25,000. It is said Mr. Hannah contemplates remodeling the north side building into high grade shops. S. S. Berry represented both parties to the transaction.

Record has been made of the sale by C. L. Lundstrom to William W. Collins of the eighteen apartment building of four and five rooms on 88x124 feet of ground at the northeast corner of Oakley avenue and Argyle street, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $35,000.

In Lexington Street.

The property at the southwest corner of Lexington street and Central Park avenue, lot 63½x123 feet, with flat improvements, has been conveyed by J. O. Fischer to Robert B. Clark, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $17,500.

Record was made of the transfer by Edward Paulson to Joseph A. Goodman of the apartment property at the southeast corner of Sangamon and Seventieth streets, with 58x124 feet of ground, the consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $31,600.

An interesting deal in Evanston apartment property, made a matter of record, was the sale by Peter J. Bassett to Emma Knudsen of the fifteen apartment building, with 50x150 feet of ground, at the southeast corner of Seward and Elmwood avenues, for a reported consideration of $45,000, subject to an incumbrance of $34,000.

Winnipeg Man Buyer.

A nonresident, H. C. Webb of Winnipeg, Man., has purchased from Milford H. Lyon the nine flat building at 4932-36 Calumet avenue, lot 75x125 feet, for a reported consideration of $38,000, subject to $12,000, the purchaser conveying in exchange a clear farm near Winnipeg. Holton, Seelye & Co. were the brokers.

The six apartment building at 926-28 Crescent place, east of Sheridan road, lot 55x125 feet, has been sold by Samuel Schallman to Adolph Biskup for a reported consideration of $25,000.

Leases and Loans

THERE was a good showing made again last week in the way of leases of business space in the downtown district. The most notable, of course, were the lease to the Childs company of the new seven story building to be erected at 108-112 South Wabash avenue, and the lease by the Standard Trust and Savings bank of the bank floor in the Fort Dearborn building, at the southwest corner of Clark and Monroe streets, the details of which are given elsewhere on this page.

There were a number of other important transactions, however. One of them, which was negotiated by G. V. & J. M. Cleary, covers 6,700 square feet of space on the eleventh floor of the Continental and Commercial Bank building, which has been leased for the Illinois Steel company to the Bermingham & Seaman company, paper manufacturers, for a term of seven years from May 1, at a term rental of $84,420, which is at the rate of $1.80 a square foot.

In an interesting lease of store space in the Tower building, northwest corner of Michigan avenue and Madison street, Francis A. Hardy leased to H. Stanley Korshak the store at 10 North Michigan avenue for a reported term rent of $75,000. The store is to be extensively remodeled and the lease is said to dispose of the last available Michigan avenue store space in the building. Benjamin Rosenberg & Co. represented Mr. Korshak and Gilbert Scribner Mr. Hardy.

The second floor front in the Lake View building, at 116 Michigan avenue, between Adams and Monroe streets, has been leased by J. L. Kesner to Elmer E. Marden for a reported term rent of $40,000. The space will be occupied as a clothing store for young men.

Otto H. Suchler, with the Central Realty and Investment company, has leased for the Chas. Kiper estate to the Chicago Lamp and Fixture company the entire third floor of the Kiper building, 411-417 South Sangamon street, for a term rent of $18,000. He also leased for A. C. Honoré the Prismolite corporation the store at 2130 South Michigan avenue for a term rent of $12,600; also for Stumer, Rosenthal & Eckstein to Joseph Grossman & Co. space on the thirteenth floor of the North American building for a term rent of $11,000.

The Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance company has made a loan of $200,000, ten years, at 5 per cent, to Mercy Hospital and Orphan asylum on the new addition of the hospital in Calumet avenue, 100 feet north of Twenty-sixth street.

S. W. Straus & Co. have made a loan of $60,000, two to six years, at 6 per cent, to Jeannette L. O'Hara on the Dorchester apartments, to be erected at 5415-25 Dorchester avenue and to contain twenty-four apartments of four and five rooms.

Tour by Stereopticon Through the Southland

Tuesday's weekly luncheon of the Cook county real estate board will be held at the Fort Dearborn hotel and will be featured by a "Trip through the Southland" by way of stereopticon route, the lecturer being J. A. Clairmonte. It will be held in the main banquet hall of the hotel.

Minor Deals of Week in Apartment Property

The following are some of the minor flat transactions of the week:

The eight flat building at the northwest corner of North Sawyer and Wrightwood avenues, lot 37x128 feet, has been sold by O. O. Krabol to Benjamin F. Otley for a reported consideration of $22,000, the purchaser conveying in part payment 50 feet of vacant in Milwaukee avenue near Crawford avenue and 27 feet on Fullerton avenue 25 feet east of Lawndale avenue. Charles A. Johnson represented both parties.

The property at the southeast corner of Fullerton and Spaulding avenues, lot 50x150 feet, with flat improvements, has been conveyed by Freda Ritter to Louis Heinemann, a consideration of $10 being given, subject to an incumbrance of $14,500. Heinemann conveyed in part payment property in Thorne avenue 256 feet east of Perry avenue, subject to $10,500.

The six flat building with 60x134 feet of ground, north front, at 1359-61 East Fifty-fifth place has been conveyed by Lennus Swan to Herbert A. Andisa, the consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $15,900.

The property at the northwest corner of Western and Pensacola avenues, 83x125 feet, with improvements, has been conveyed by Joseph Warb to Louis Kahn, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $11,800.

Record has been made of the transfer by Richard Heagany to James B. Reid of the property in Lake Park avenue 129 feet southeast of Fortieth street, lot 65x295 feet, southwest front, a nominal consideration being given.

J. C. NIELSEN ACQUIRES TRACT AS PLANT SITE

Unit Buildings Planned in the Southwest Part of City—To Cost $575,000.

While manufacturing property did not cut the figure in the week's business it did the previous week, it furnished one of the most interesting transactions of the week covering property in the southwest part of the city, which involves extensive improvements. It was the purchase by J. C. Nielsen from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee for a syndicate headed by H. E. Poronto, industrial agent of the Central Manufacturing district, of a tract of 106,027 square feet of vacant with a west frontage of 256 feet on Western avenue boulevard, 740 feet south of Forty-third street.

The property is served by a grade switch track connecting with the Chicago River and Indiana railroad and the Panhandle road, and while a nominal consideration is given, it is understood the sale was at the rate of 50 cents a square foot, or a total of a little over $53,000.

Mr. Nielsen is president of the Acme Packing company and of the Ervin A. Rice company, mincemeat, but it is said the purchase was not made in the interest of either of the companies named. It is stated that Mr. Nielsen will erect a two story and basement mill building on the boulevard containing 78,000 square feet of floor space, with foundations and walls strong enough to carry two additional stories. Later, and as required, there will be erected six units, 75x115 feet ground dimensions, each four stories and basement high, in the rear of the first building, with private grade switch track between. The cost of the entire completed plant, which will contain a total of 383,750 square feet of floor space, will be about $575,000, independent of the cost of the ground.

W. H. Lichty of J. H. Van Vlissingen & Co. represented all parties, while the legal details were attended to by John A. Brown and Fred A. Hack.

G. A. Carpenter Sells Residence.

The residence property in Bellevue place 362 feet west of Lake Shore drive, lot 50x129 feet, south front, has been conveyed by George A. Carpenter to Frances K. Bradley, a consideration of $10 being given.

GMC GENERAL MOTORS COMPANY TRUCKS

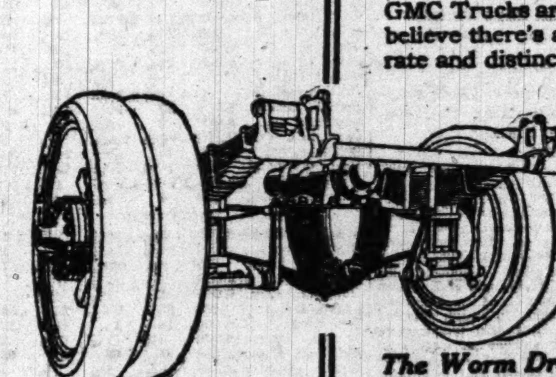
TRUCK TALK
No. 4



NOWHERE is the high standard of GMC construction better emphasized than in the rear axle.

And in no other part of the truck does the value of the GMC standard come to the surface more visibly or mean more to the truck owner in actual service.

It is vitally important that the rear axle, carrying as it does an enormous load, be right in construction and of sufficient size and strength to stand the force and strain of use and abuse.

GMC Trucks are built in both Chain and Worm Drive, for we believe there's a place for each type; this necessitates two separate and distinct types of rear axles.

Although they differ materially in construction, the same basic standards are adhered to in their building. The same care enters into the selection of the materials; the same precision governs their construction.

Both, we believe, are the most practical, simplest and the best in their class. As a guide to what you may expect in GMC construction consider the WORM DRIVE AXLE.

The Worm Drive Axle. After a most thorough investigation covering every known type of drive and axle construction, the present GMC Worm Drive was devised. It is the result of the combined efforts of our engineers and the engineering staff of the Timken-Detroit Axle Co. Timken bearings are used throughout.

All GMC axles are ample in size and strength to carry the load, and are warranted to render satisfactory service.

The entire construction is simple and practical—can readily be understood and cared for when attention is needed, which (with the exception of oiling) should not be during the first year.

The shafts are chrome nickel steel, heat-treated and tested, and are of the full floating type. They are entirely free from load or strain of any description and are not handicapped in any way, but remain free to do their one important work—transmit the power to turn the wheels.

Worm and gear are mounted with differential in a separate carrier. The carrier as a unit is removable from the top of the axle, after the axle shafts are withdrawn, and without disturbing the adjustment of the worm or its bearings.

The gears run in oil—the worm gear acts as a pump, circulating the oil over the worm and thru all bearings. This system is simple and positive, and requires no attention for a long time.

When you buy a GMC Truck—whether it is a Worm or Chain Drive—you buy it with the assurance that the axle construction, as well as all other parts, are the best that can be made. As a result, you get the maximum value in long consistent truck service, low upkeep and low operating cost.

All GMC Axles carry the unqualified guarantee of this company and of the Timken company, and are warranted to be free from defects in material and workmanship.

Political news turned the wheat trade topsy-turvy yesterday, and the action of the market was the most violent seen in many years. May wheat rallied 14c from the early low point and closed within a fraction of the top, showing a net gain of 7⅛@⅝ for the day. New crop months rallied 7½@7⅝c and finished 3½@4⅝c higher than previous resting spots. Extreme nervousness prevailed throughout the session and jumps of ½c in prices between trades were frequent. News that the United States had severed diplomatic relations with Germany did not break prices as badly as many expected, although the May dropped 6c within a few minutes' time. This move had been generaly anticipated and its effect as a market factor was largely discounted.

The rally which followed when heavy and general short covering was attempted was exceedingly rapid. It came at a time when the market was almost bare of offerings and was hastened by rumors that Germany had made some concessions to the United States.

Watch Only Political News.

News other than that of a political nature was ignored, although liberal buying of July wheat against sales of May indicated that some concern was being shown over the impaired winter wheat crop prospects as a result of the cold weather. Advices from the southwest were pessimistic, with the ground cracked wide open in many sections because of moisture deficiency and high winds increasing the danger to the plant. No mention was made of export business, and demand will probably be limited until the political situation clears up. Clearances of wheat and flour for the day were 294,000 bu, against 1,144,000 bu a year ago.

Receipts continue to be small and primary markets had a total of 407,000 bu wheat yesterday, against 1,104,000 bu a year ago. Local receipts for the week were 1,136,000 bu, while shipments were 873,000 bu. Winnipeg had 2,438 cars this week, compared with 814 a year ago.

Erratic Corn Market.

Price movements in corn were also erratic, following the action of wheat and also affected by the political news. The market rallied sharply from early low points and closed 1⅜@1⅝c higher. Selling was general at the outset, while later shorts bought freely—in fact there was little demand outside of that coming from the short interest. Little was heard about export demand, and no sales were reported. Cash corn here was steady to 1c lower, with local shipping sales 15,000 bu. Clearances of corn from the seaboard were 820,000 bu.

Further rains fell in Argentina and the weather continues unsettled there. Broomhall's agent says crop prospects have improved, but that generally the rain was too late to be of material benefit. Primary receipts were 726,000 bu, against 1,045,000 bu a year ago. Local receipts of corn this week were 2,813,000 bu, while shipments were 922,000 bu.

Oats Follow Other Grains.

Oats followed the other grains in their ups and downs and finished with advances of ⅝@1c. Leading commission houses sold oats freely at the start, while later there was heavy short covering. Cash oats were steady to 2c lower, with local shipping sales 50,000 bu. Clearances from the seaboard were 685,000 bu. Local receipts of oats this week were 2,216,000 bu, with 959,000 bu shipped. London oats were 6d higher. Primary receipts totaled 563,000 bu, against 782,000 bu a year ago.

Provisions also scored a late rally, with pork closing a little higher and lard and ribs steady to a fraction lower. Political news and free selling of ribs by one of the smaller packers caused the early weakness. The big packers were credited with buying on the dip, and the late strength in grains also aided the market. Hog prices at the yards were higher. Western markets received 654,700 hogs for the week, against 737,000 last week and 743,600 a year ago. Liverpool spot lard and hams were 1s 6d higher, with bacon 1@2s higher. Local shipments of meats this week were 19,816,000 lbs, against 17,696,00 lbs a year ago, with lard shipments 8,383,00 lbs, against 8,758,000 lbs last year.

Rye Cent Lower.

Rye was 1c lower with No 2 selling at $1.40. Receipts were 2 cars.

Barley ruled firm. Malting was quoted $1.08@1.27 and sold $1.08@1.24; feed and mixing quotable, $1.00@1.05 and screenings 40c@$1.00, with latter selling at 50c @1.00; skimmings quotable 70@75c with a sale at former figure. Receipts, 24 cars.

Timothy seed was quiet. March, $5.60 bid and $5.75 asked; cash lots sold $4.55 @4.75. Clover seed was firm; cash lots quoted $12.00@17.50 and spot prime, $18.40.

Flaxseed closed unchanged. Cash quoted $2.77@2.83 nominal. Minneapolis was unchanged; Duluth steady to 4c lower and Winnipeg 3c off.

COTTON.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—The definite announcement of a break in diplomatic relations with Germany was followed by a very excited advance of over $5 a bale in the cotton market here this morning. Immediately after the first news reached the trade from Washington May contracts sold off to 13.93c, or about 36 points from the opening price, but offerings were comparatively light and the market soon developed sensational strength, with that delivery advancing to 15.20c. This made an advance of $6.35 per bale from the low level of the morning and $5.60 per bale from last night's closing figures. May closed at 15.10c, with the general list closing excited at a net gain of 90 to 108 points. Futures:

Hog receipts of 8,000 at Chicago yesterday met with a brisk demand from smaller packers and shippers at an advance of 10@15c over Friday's average prices. Big packers had hogs direct and bought scarcely any here, but their support was not needed and the market closed in a strong position. Top sales were made at $12.05 and the bulk at $11.75@11.95.

Final prices made hogs 25@35c higher than a week ago and as high as at any time since the civil war. The average price for the week was advanced to $11.70, against $11.30 last week, the previous high mark for the last fifty years. Receipts for the week decreased 17,000 and shipments fell off about the same proportion.

Hog purchases for the day: Armour & Co., 2,500; Swift & Co., 1,500; Wilson & Co., 800; Morris & Co., 200; Hammond, 1,000; Western Packing Co., 1,700; Miller & Hart, 300; butchers, 1,500; shippers, 5,000; Brennan Packing Co., 400; total, 15,600; left over, 2,500.

CATTLE.

Beef steer values at Chicago this week underwent general revision, selling 15c to 25c lower than last week for cheap and intermediate grades of steers, while the good to choice fat beeves advanced 10@15c to the highest level of the year. The best made $12.10. Cows and heifers closed 25@35c lower, while canning grades lost 15@25c and bulls dropped 10@25c. Calves sold and closed 25@50c lower for the week. It is expected the cold weather will result in much smaller marketings next week, but the trade does not expect the cheaper grades of cattle to recover much in value, as they are already bringing unusually high prices and prospects for the shipping outlet is not promising.

Cattle at seven western markets for the week, 181,900, against 175,700 the previous week, 122,000 a year ago, and 136,300 two years ago. Total for 1917 to date, 949,000, against 786,000 the same period in 1916.

SHEEP.

Sheep and lamb values at Chicago this week continued to advance into previously unknown territory, closing 25c to 35c higher than a week ago, and higher than at any previous time in the history of the trade here. Lambs topped at $14.65, while yearlings made $13.50 and wethers sold up to $11.75, all record marks. A decrease of nearly 22,000 head in receipts facilitated the work of advancing value, but the chief factor was the broad demand, there being urgent orders filled by packers, independent butchers, and shippers. The market closed at the high point, with outlook favorable for further upturns, as only limited supplies are in sight for the next week.

STOCK PRICES REBOUND.

New York, Feb. 3.—The stock market's response to the breaking off of relations with Germany was a sudden uprush of prices, many shares comprising the war class recovering from early declines of 2 to 5 points and finishing at net gains of 3 to 10, while Bethlehem Steel, heavy at the outset, closed at a gain of 30 points, with 10½ for the new (nonvoting) stock.

United States Steel opened at a maximum gain of 1¼ points, forfeiting more than 2 points on receipt of the news from Washington and carrying the balance of the active list down with it. On the rebound, however, the stock was absorbed with such ease and in such round amounts as to inspire confidence and bring about a general readjustment.

Alcohol Goes Up.

Industrial Alcohol advanced to 123¼ after declining to 111⅛, Central Leather made an extreme gain of 8¼. General Motors 8, Republic Iron 9, Texas company 10, Crucible Steel 6, and Air Brake 5. Coppers rose 2 to 3 points, Utah showing marked firmness, even when other stocks were manifesting irregularity.

Relatively rails were less prominent in the buying and covering movements, displaying some of yesterday's heaviness, but Reading, New York Central, Atchison, and Northern Pacific finished the day at substantial advances. Bonds failed to keep pace with the stock list, all international issues, except American foreign securities, falling to lowest quotations yet reported. Railway convertibles and industrials eased 1 to 2 points. United States bonds were unchanged on call during the week.

STRONG
Where Other Truck Units are Weak

Let this fact sink in: The Ford-Dearborn One-Ton Truck is sturdier and better built than any similar truck.

Other manufacturers, anxious to make quick sales, designed and constructed their attachments hurriedly and without regard to the lasting strength of their product. But the Dearborn Motor Truck Company was content to go slow and build right. Consequently the Dearborn Unit is strong where others are weak.

A FORD New or Old and $350 MAKES A FORD-DEARBORN
One Ton Truck

You can double your delivery and haulage and cut the cost in two with the Ford-Dearborn One-Ton Truck. With a Ford car, new or old, you can make a one-ton truck that is without a superior in its field.

The Ford-Dearborn is the most economical and most efficient truck made.

This truck does all the work that any one-ton truck will do yet costs only one-third as much to buy and operate.

Examine a Ford-Dearborn One-Ton Truck and you'll be convinced. We can supply any kind of body to fit your needs. Call, write or phone for demonstration.

Make Promoters Give Written Data.

About half of the states have enacted "blue sky" laws to prevent the sale of worthless promotion stocks within their borders. The others, including Illinois, have not undertaken anything in this line and investors must protect themselves. It really requires less acumen to avoid pitfalls in buying promotion stock than in buying a horse. The reason many people fall victims to the clever promoter is that they take his oral statement for everything instead of insisting on complete written or printed data that can be verified.

As has been stated heretofore, the balance sheet of a promotion makes a full showing of what has been done. The promoter may prefer not to show it because he wants to talk about the enormous profits which some established concern in the same field has made and thus intimate to his "prospect" that the new company will similarly make its stockholders rich. Let the prospective investor turn a deaf ear to irrelevant suggestions and insist on knowing all about the matter in hand. Definite information as to just how much money has been paid in and what has been done with it is far more illuminating than an hour of indefinite talk about what may be accomplished at some time in the future.

A small amount of promotion expense is legitimate and necessary. However, when 20 to 30 per cent commission is allowed for selling the stock and "overhead" expense in proportion, far too large a part of the money paid in is dissipated, and when the company reaches the point of actual operations there will be far too much water in its capitalization.

Middle West Utilities.

C. J. H.—The Middle West Utilities company has just placed its $9,050,300 of common stock on a 2 per cent cash and 2 per cent stock dividend basis. The first quarterly payment of ½ per cent cash and a semi-annual payment of 1 per cent in stock will be made on April 2. Six per cent dividends on the $10,032,100 of preferred stock have been paid to date. The company issues annual reports only, its fiscal year ending April 30. The last annual report showed $[illegible]091,149 combined gross earnings of subsidiaries and $3,077,761 net. Interest on subsidiary bonds and dividends on subsidiary stocks paid to outside holders amounted to $1,570,147 and $1,515,[illegible] accrued to the holding company. This worked out at slightly more than [illegible] per cent on preferred stock. Earnings in the current year are larger, but no definite figures are available yet.

American Hide and Leather.

P. B. F., Champaign, Ill.—The American Hide and Leather company has been making phenomenal earnings recently because of the great advance in the price of leather. Hides that it bought some time ago have doubled in value and have yielded enormous profits. In the three months ended Dec. 31 earnings were at the rate of 33 per cent a year on the $13,000,000 of preferred stock. In the preceding quarter they were small. In the year ended June 30 12⅛ per cent was earned. Dividends on the preferred stock were resumed last September with a payment of 5 per cent. This reduced the amount of accrued unpaid dividends to 110 per cent. Recently a dividend of 2½ per cent was declared payable Feb. 15. Plans to adjust the back dividends by reorganization have been dropped and probably will not be taken up again till the company's bonds mature in [illegible]. There are now only $3,640,000 of bonds out and the sinking fund is reducing them rapidly.

Brief Answers.

F. C. G., Baraboo, Wis.—The Fajardo Sugar company has plantations in Porto Rico. Dividends on its $3,337,200 of one class stock have varied. In 1916 20 per cent was paid following three no dividend years. In the fiscal year ended July 31 last net earnings were $1,7[illegible]439, about four times those of the year before.

P. B., Princeton, Ill.—Rock Island preferred has not yet been issued and no one knows how many months will elapse before it is ready. In the meantime earnings may not keep up to their present level. Thus the stock is rather a speculation than an investment.

O. H. E., La Salle, Ill.—First and consolidated collateral trust bonds of the International Salt company are dealt in over the counter. The present quotation is 78 bid, 80 asked.

NEWS OF BREAK WITH GERMANY RULES MARKET

First Effect Demoralizing, but Later It Is Made Plain the Event Was Foreseen.

All of the news of the day was sidetracked and completely overshadowed by the Washington advices of the rupture with Germany. While the first effect was demoralizing, it was soon made plain that the effect, as in most important developments, had been anticipated and discounted.

United States Steel was the natural leader of the market and was closely watched. Its break below par brought in a vast amount of buying, partly on resting orders previously placed at this and lower levels, and it soon became evident that the demand exceeded the supply. The balance of the market took its cue from Steel and it was not long before the street began to see the effect on the industries of the country which would be called to supply the nation's needs.

At the close United States Steel was up to 104 after having sold early as low as 99⅝. Values of other properties that would logically be benefited by stimulated industrial activity also regained much lost ground.

In the Local Field.

Further material declines in important local stocks were made during the height of the excitement over the developments in the controversy with Germany, but declines were not lasting. At the close nearly all of the lost ground had been recovered and values were up nearly to the starting point.

Presto-O-Lite started at 118, sold down to 100—with reports of a sale as low as 99 on the curb—and rallied to 108 at the finish. Union Carbide started at 177, sold down to 169, and closed at 175. Stewart-Warner started at 82, sold to 78½ and closed at 83, which latter was the highest of the day. Swift & Co. sold from 136 at the opening to 132¼ and closed at 135. Diamond Match sold at 120½ and at 119 and closed at 120.

The amount of business done on the local exchange was the largest that has been seen at any week end in some time. Quite an aggregate of scattered small lots of stock went overboard during the early decline.

In local financial circles there was the same opinion expressed as was announced by a high official of one of the New York trust companies, who said: "We have been expecting the break for several days. The banks are ready to meet the situation and we expect no financial difficulties."

Stimulation and Inflation.

Experts of investment institutions have been buying securities of the most approved sort in a persistent way ever since it became evident that a break with Germany was inevitable. They hold, along with leading banking interests, that the rupture with Germany means a further stimulation of American industries and that unless peace soon results it will also mean greatly inflated values. The latter has almost invariably been the effect in times of important wars and there is no reason that is visible from any rule of logic to expect any other course in the United States.

Money and Exchange.

Money rates in Chicago steady at 3½@4 per cent on collateral, 3½ per cent on commercial paper, and 4@4½ per cent over the counter. New York exchange, 20c discount. Chicago bank clearings, $73,671,237.

Local Curb Stocks Irregular.

Local unlisted securities have been rather erratic in sympathy with the listed markets. American Fork and Hoe common remains steady at 126 bid, offered at 130; the preferred was wanted at 128. Automatic Electric declined about 5 points, closing at 45 bid, offered at 50.

Butler Brothers changed hands as high as 281, but reacted to offerings at 275 with 272 bid, closing 274@279. Consumers common was offered at 27 with little interest on the buying side. The preferred was steady at 82½ bid, offered at 83½. Northwestern Yeast was steady at 308 bid, offered at 316. Otis Elevator common was unchanged at 59@61, with the preferred 88 bid, offered at 91. NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—COPPER—A very unsettled situation has prevailed in the market since the German blockade announcement of Thursday, and dealers refused to name quotations toward the end of the week, except for some of the larger producers, who said they would sell their regular trade electrolytic for third quarter delivery at 32.50c. At the moment, however, an entire absence of demand was reported with buyers holding off for fresh developments. IRON—unchanged.

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

Rallies shown yesterday in all of the industrial properties dealt in extensively in open market show the belief now beginning that the country will enter on an industrial era beside which the recent stimulation caused by the war in Europe is but a respectable opening. It is believed that the war means extension and construction such as has never before been seen in the United States, even during the beginning of the industrial expansion that the country has seen in the last six decades. Current and future construction will, of course, be on the highest possible type of modern expansion calculated to bring about the highest volume of production in the most rapid and economical manner.

Crucible Steel interests are anticipating large domestic orders in connection with the latest political developments and the new impetus given preparedness in the United States. Large banking affiliations have been buying this property heavily during declines during the last few months. It is claimed that the water has all been squeezed out of the stock.

Application has been filed with the railroad commission of California by the Western States Gas and Electric company for authority to create a ten year 6 per cent note issue for $5,000,000. This is to secure the payment of the indebtedness by trust indenture and to sell of this issue notes of a par value of $1,239,000.

The Standard Trust and Savings bank has leased for a term of years the banking quarters in the building located at the southwest corner of Monroe and Clark streets. The conditions of the lease provide for a change in the name from the Fort Dearborn to the Standard Trust and Savings Bank building.

Increase in export rates on iron and steel of about 50 per cent over present rates between Pittsburgh and Atlantic coast points on carriers operating in this section have been allowed by the interstate commerce commission.

Business in the copper market at New York was practically suspended. One seller said he had received bids of 34½ cents for February copper, 34 for March, and 32½ for April-May.

Net revenues of $40,982,526 on eighty-two railroads were shown in December.

We summarize from official statements the following important facts regarding this issue:

The Texas Electric Railway owns and operates 266 miles (single track equivalent) of well equipped standard constructed electric railway, consisting principally of the interurban line north from Dallas to Denison and southwest from Dallas to Waco, and southeast from Dallas to Corsicana, Texas, and including the street railway lines within the cities of Denison, Sherman, McKinney, Waco, Waxahachie and Corsicana, Texas.

The territory served by the Texas Electric Railway constitutes the most prosperous and thickly settled section of Texas, extending through seven counties. Approximately 260,000 people are served directly, and the territory has a population of over 500,000.

According to competent engineers' reports the replacement value is in excess of the bonds and the first preferred stock now to be issued. Moreover, this preferred stock is followed by $3,000,000 7% Second Preferred and $6,000,000 Common Stock.

Earnings for the year ending December 31, 1916, were over six and one-half times the first preferred dividend requirements.

The franchise situation as affecting the company's operations in the cities is very satisfactory.

The company agrees to expend a liberal percentage of gross earnings for maintenance and repairs or for renewals and replacements of its property.

From

"The Car of the Hour"

To prove that the Elgin Six is the greatest car value in the world at $985, as so often expressed at the Big Chicago Show, where for the past week hundreds of Motor Thoroughbreds have stood in the limelight of the most critical public inspection, we make the following challenge:

We offer to donate $1,000 to any worthy charity, if a car now on the market can be found, at $1,000 or less, which is the equal of the Elgin Six in value

The decision to rest with a jury of five, composed of—

1—A well-known artist to pass on the style and beauty,

2—A successful manufacturer of quality automobile parts.

3—A technical expert in automobile engineering.

4—A high-class automobile dealer, selling cars priced at $2,000 or more.

5—A representative Chicago business man.

The Beautiful Elgin Six was called by critical New Yorkers, at their big show four weeks ago,

"The Millionaire's Value at Popular Price"

Special Elgin Features:

The beautiful Elgin Six is the only car selling within $200.00 of its price having these high-priced quality features:

1. Extreme yacht style body with fashionable European center cowl.
2. "V"-type radiator, with lines blending artistically into the body.
3. Borg & Beck improved velvet-acting clutch, which you find only on high-priced cars.

This feature enables the car to be started on high gear, under all ordinary conditions, and practically eliminates gear shifting, thus removing the last barrier to the safe and easy driving of cars by timid women.

No other car but the Elgin Six has—

4. Elgin Improved Cantilever Rear Spring Suspension, which has set a new standard of motoring ease when running over rough roads at high speed, and gives luxurious riding comfort on ordinary roads not surpassed by any car at any price.

You can with perfect safety and comfort, and without damaging your car, drive an Elgin Six at 35 to 50 miles per hour over roads so rough that the average car would not only be dangerous and uncomfortable to ride in at more than 15 to 20 miles per hour, but would soon be a candidate for the automobile graveyard.

The story of "Elgin Winnings" which will be sent to you on request, contains a message of vital interest to every intending purchaser who prizes motor car stamina and endurance.

Can you afford to buy a small "cheap six," when for a slight additional cost you can drive this Capable Six—this big, roomy, impressive quality car, of superior beauty and comfort?

Can you afford to pay more than the Elgin Six price when this "Beauty of the Road" embodies everything that the most discriminating motorist desires?

Write us today for beautiful catalog "E" and specifications.

ROYAL MOURNERS AT FRANZ JOSEF'S FUNERAL—Immediately behind the bier of the late emperor of Austria and king of Hungary walked (1) the new Emperor Karl Franz, (2) his son and heir, Crown Prince Franz Josef Otto, and (3) the new Empress Zita. Behind them in the picture are: (4) Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria, (5) King Ludwig of Bavaria, (6) the king of Saxony, (7) Prince Vahid Eddin, younger brother of Sultan Mohammed V. and heir apparent to the throne of Turkey, (8) Crown Prince Frederick William of Germany, and (9) Prince Luitpold of Bavaria, who led the victorious Teuton armies into Warsaw and who may become the ruler of the new Polish state.

AT 150 YARDS HIGH—The photograph taken by a French army aviator shows French soldiers leaving their various trenches all along the foreground in an advance upon the German trenches, which may be seen near the top of the picture. A small group of Germans may be seen evacuating their trench near the top center. A shell has exploded in the French trenches to the right center, and the smoke is spreading over the terrain.

Germany wants the grand duchess to marry a German princeling. Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide has said she will enter a convent before she will marry a German; Charlotte has said the same. IN THE LIMELIGHT

CROWN PRINCE HIROHITO of Japan has been decorated with the cross of the Legion of Honor by the president of France, through the French ambassador at Tokio. The celebration of the formal recognition of the prince as "Kotaishi" (the emperor's son who is heir apparent to the imperial throne) took place last November. The present emperor was the son of Princess Yanigawara, one of the concubines who became members of the household of Musuhito when the Empress Haruko failed to produce an heir. Concubinage is now frowned on in Japan. Hirohito is the eldest son of the emperor and of empress Sadako, the emperor's cousin.

Prince Ernest of Schaumburg-Lippe, it seems, was lax in his courtship; Prince Ernst of Saxe-Meiningen, the duke of Anhalt, the hereditary Prince Henries of Reuss, and Prince Luitpold of Bavaria have been elected to court the Luxembourg princesses, and all but Luitpold already have begun their courtships. Germany does not care which one of the princesses marries a German princeling, so long as one does.

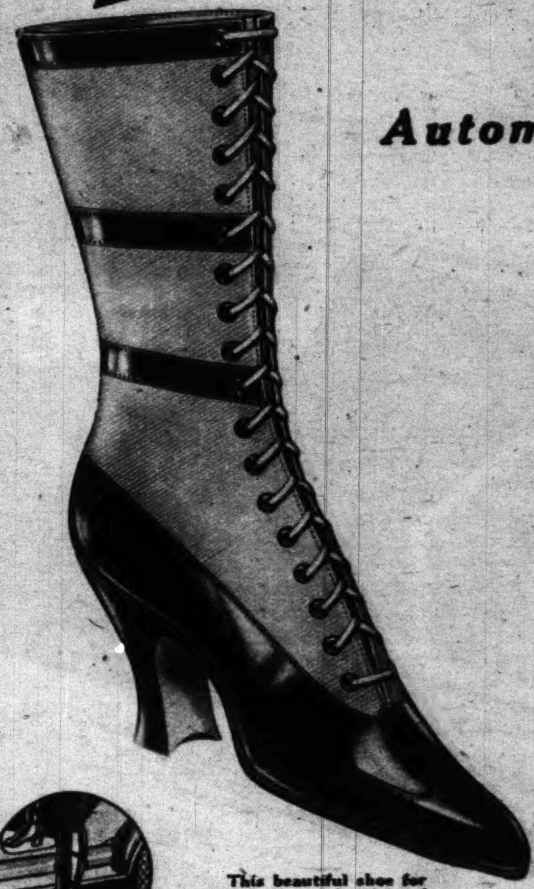
MARTIN LARSON

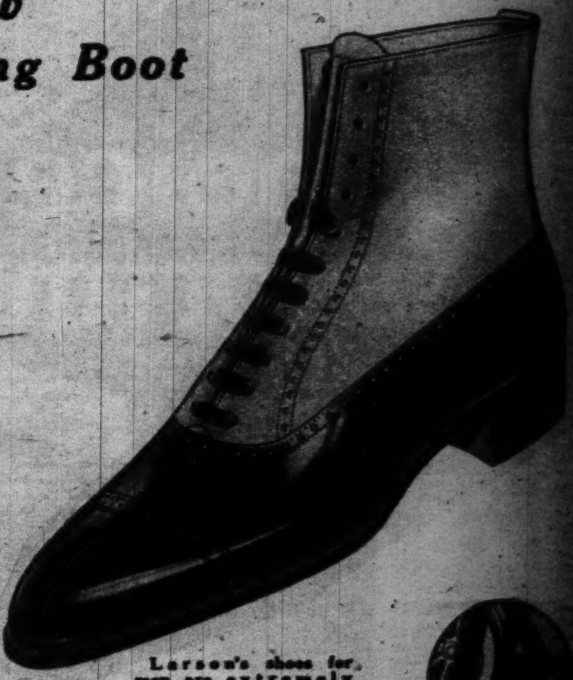
The Inventor of a New Automobile, Polo and Riding Boot



This beautiful shoe for women is indicative of the fine style in all Larson shoes.

"My experience has taught me that a great many of the usual cases of so-called rheumatism, nervous prostration and other ailments are due solely to improperly fitted shoes.

MARTIN LARSON."



Larson's shoes for men are extremely smart and comfortable.

The Man Who Overthrows All Footwear Obstacles

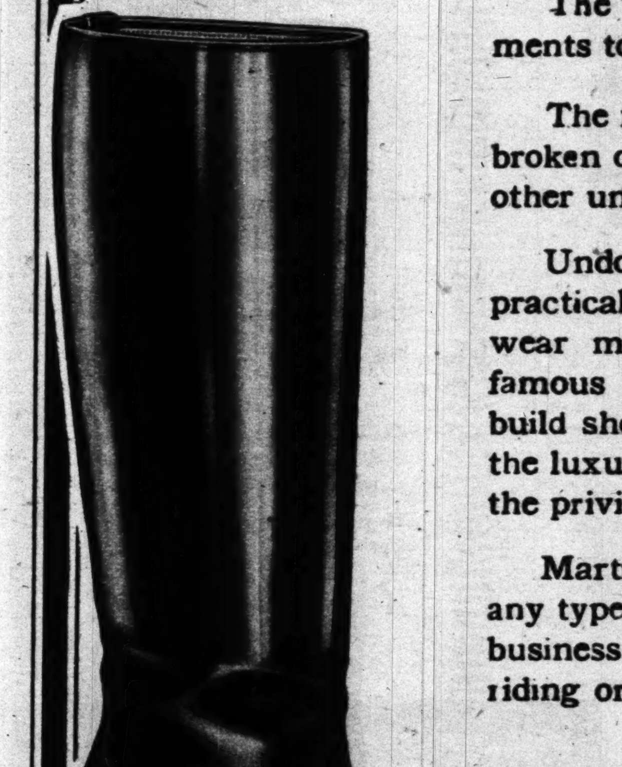
The master of all foot problems and the maker of comfortable, stylish shoes for all feet.

The friend of well feet untroubled by the many ailments to which modern feet are frequently subjected.

The friend of feet haunted with agonizing ills such as broken down arches, torn ligaments, bunions, corns and other unpleasant, nerve-racking conditions.

Undoubtedly a genius in unraveling and putting into practical operation the principles on which correct footwear must be designed, Martin Larson evolved his famous plaster paris cast system, making it possible to build shoes to fit all feet—normal and abnormal—with the luxurious comfort which hitherto has been considered the privilege of only those blessed with normal feet.

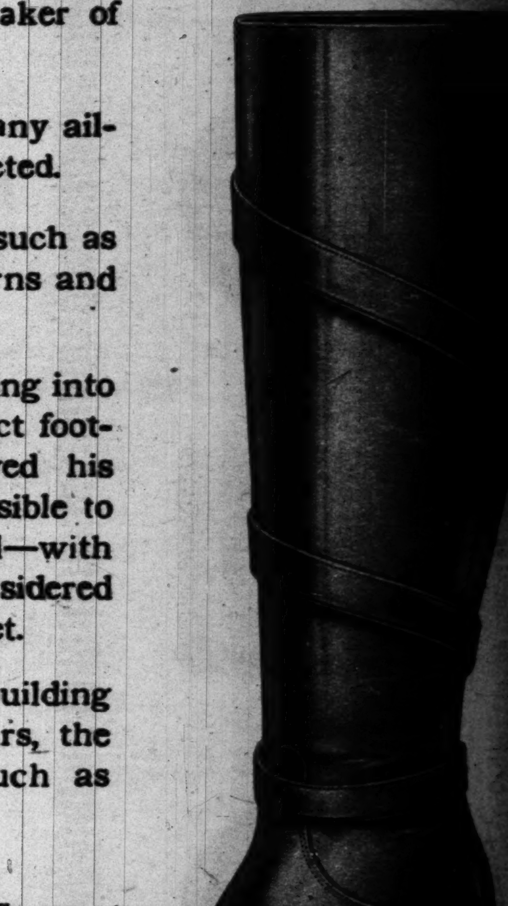
Martin Larson's skill may be called upon for building any type of shoe or boot—for Milady's social hours, the business man's days, for the sports devotee, such as riding or golfing, hiking or motoring.



A representative of Martin Larson Polo boots. The aristocrats of the bridle path.

Martin Larson

His Studio Is at 369 West Madison Street, at the Bridge



The new automobile and riding boot—patent applied for—fits like a glove; ideal for motor drivers.

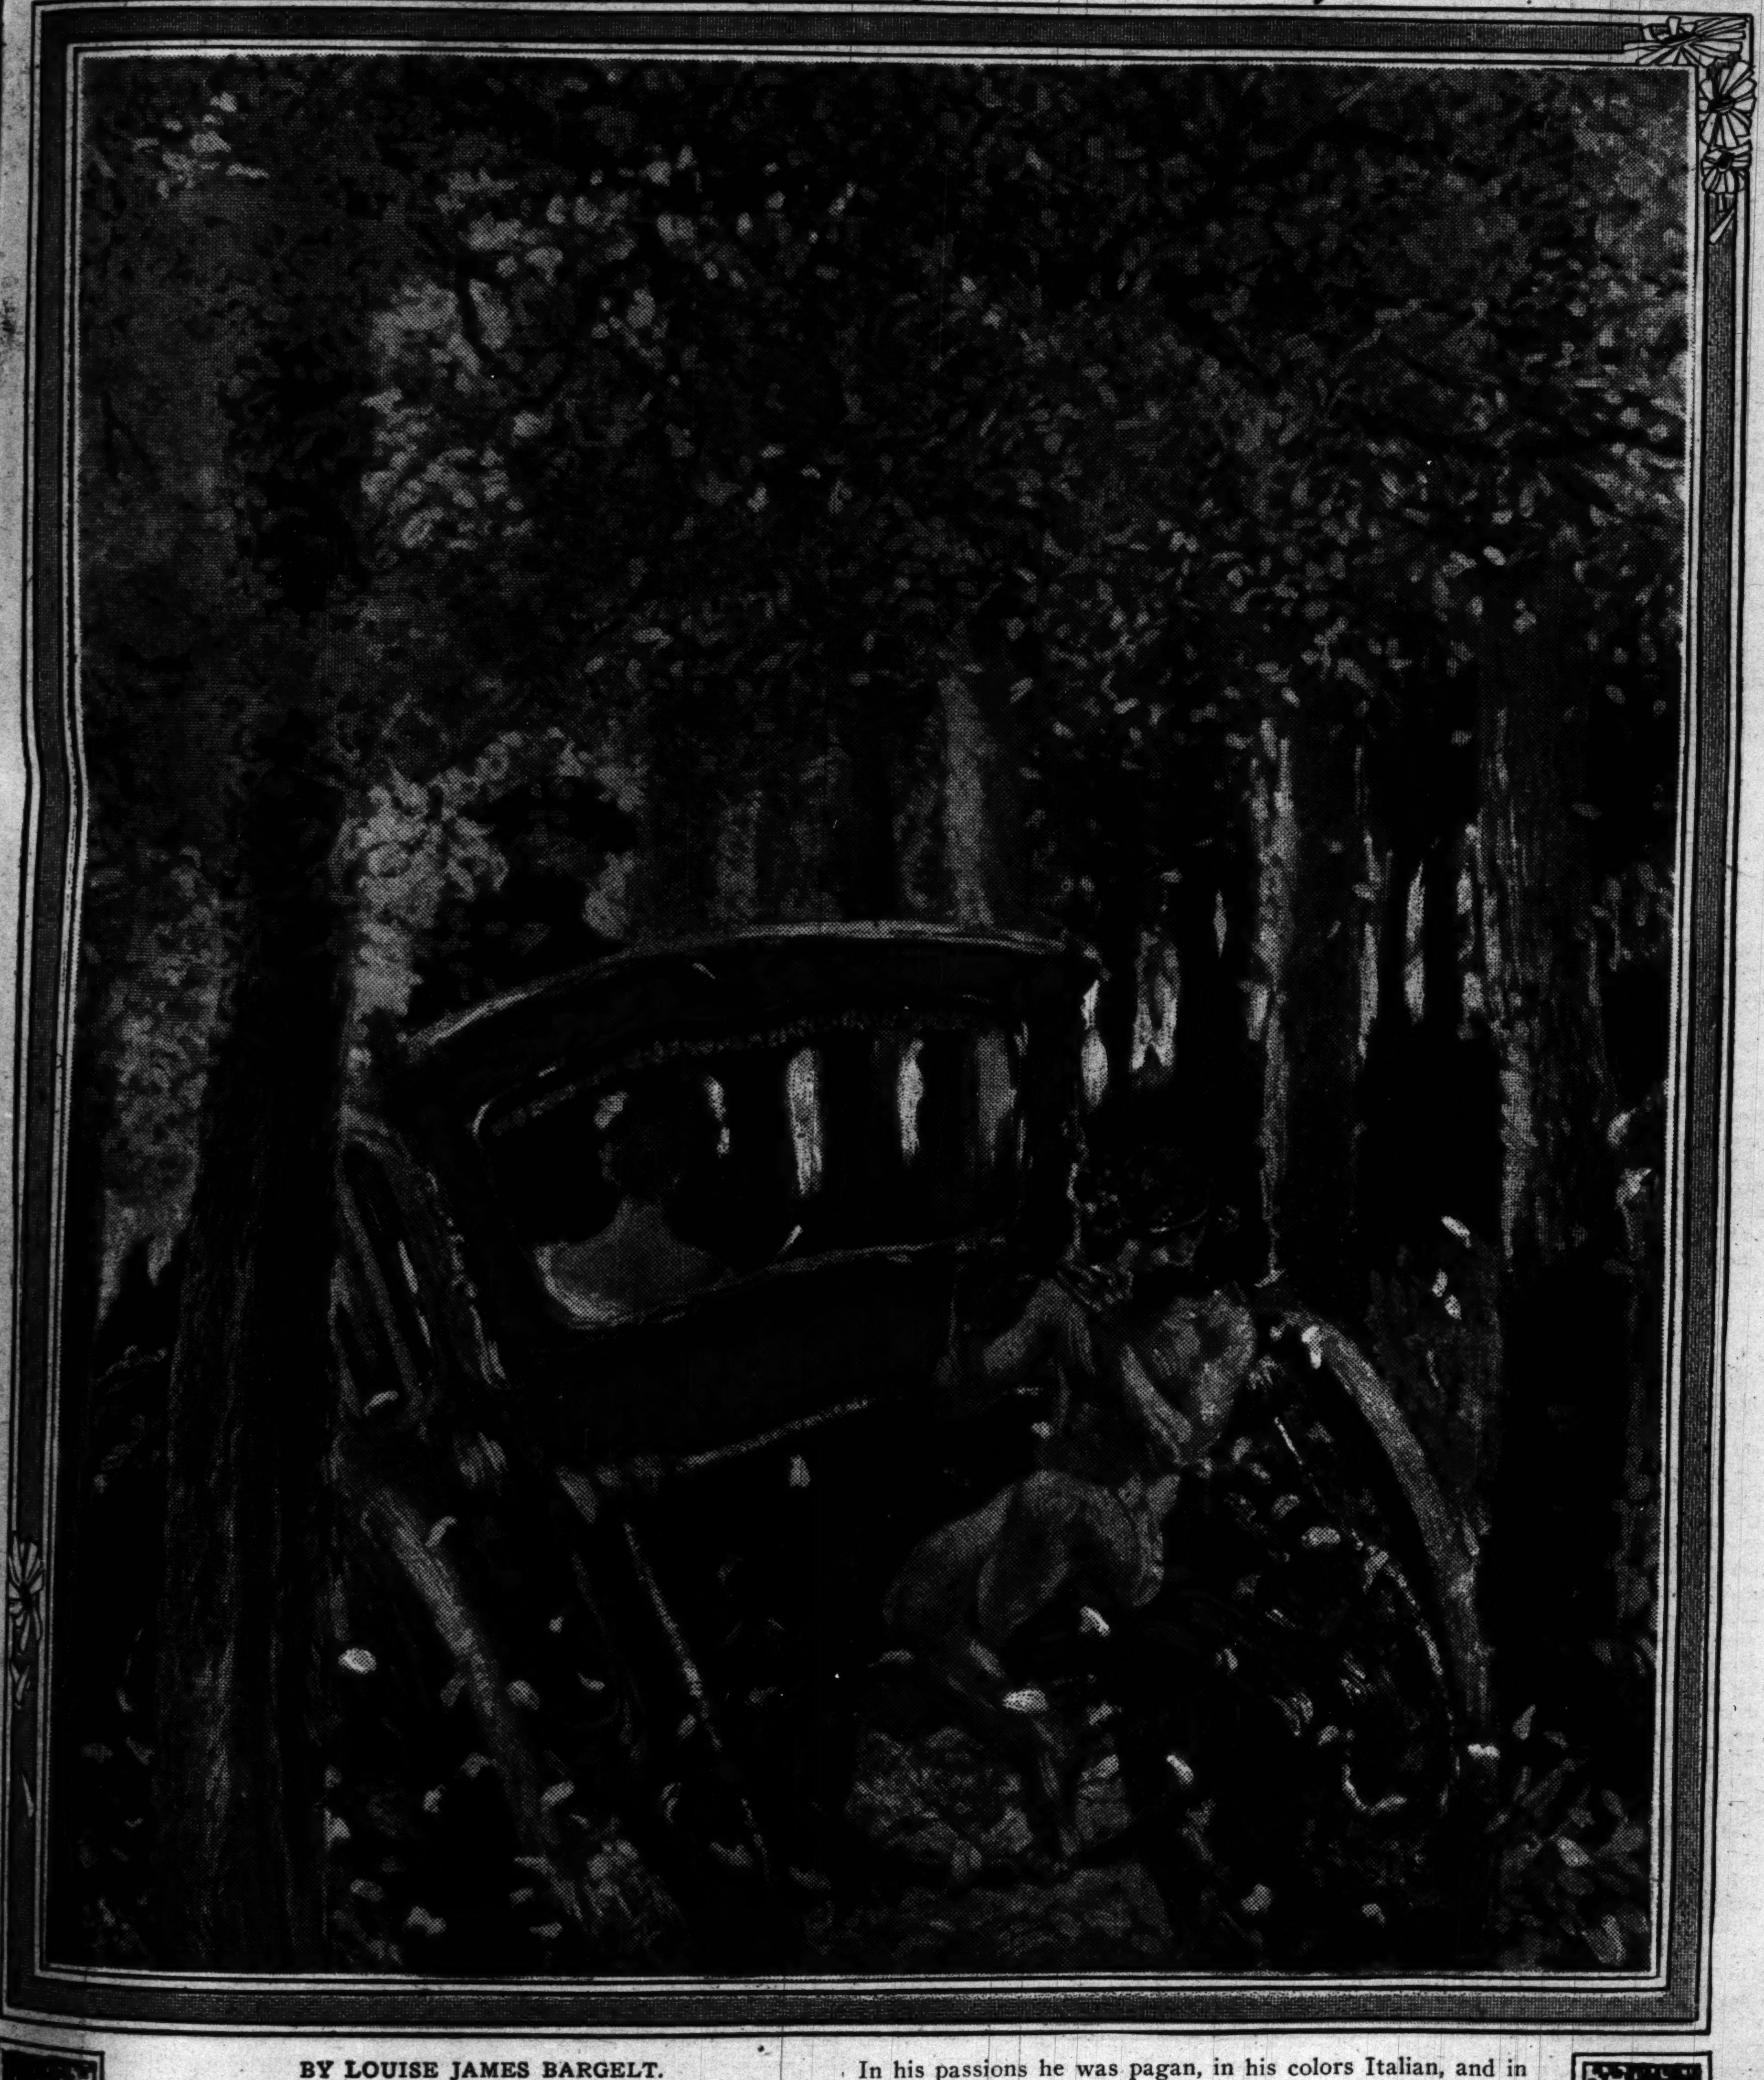
The Wedding Journey ♥ ♥ by La Touche



BY LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

"The Wedding Journey," by Gaston La Touche, St. Cloud. (1854-1913.)

IT WAS through a magic casement that La Touche saw life and therein let his winged fancy roam at will. Delighting in glowing lights, his reds and golds fairly sing to us from the fancied world of his creations, and he peopled the woods of Versailles with the charmed shadows that haunted his dreams.

In a chariot led by Cupids his two lovers are carried along on their wedding night. A faun accompanies them, playing on a flute ineffable melodies of happiness. Ecstasy is in the air. Their path is strewn with autumn leaves gold touched. Charmed branches hover about them, caressing them fondly in protection. They are driven fast, but in their joy time is not, nor distance, nor place.

In his heart La Touche held romance far above reality. In his passions he was pagan, in his colors Italian, and in the perfection of his grace he gave birth again to the vanished delights of the eighteenth century. In all of his work beauty was the god he frankly worshiped, but it was before the sun that he prostrated his genius in utter adoration. To him it was the source of love and life and art, and in his paintings he reflected all that he absorbed of its glory.

La Touche excelled in many lines of art. He did some fine portrait work, his portrait of Rodin being especially distinguished. He also ventured into historic art and into the field of allegories. His chief mediums were oils, water colors, and pastels. But wherever his imagination roamed there joy was, and rapture, too. With few exceptions his paintings are distilled bits of pure and unalloyed happiness.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.

The WHITE SILENCE

by JACK LONDON

The late Jack London is considered by many critics the greatest writer of tales of sea and frontier life that this country has produced. His stories of Alaskan mining camps, lumber jacks, and hardy seamen are classics. The Tribune begins today a new series of short stories by Jack London, one story appearing every Sunday. The series comprise the best stories London ever wrote; they are virile, red-blooded tales with the tang of sea salt in them, the icy breath of the Yukon about them, and living men and women as part and parcel of them.

"CARMEN won't last more than a couple of days." Mason spat out a chunk of ice and surveyed the poor animal ruefully, then put her foot in his mouth and proceeded to bite out the ice which clustered cruelly between the toes.

"I never saw a dog with a highfalutin' name that ever was worth a rap," he said, as he concluded his task and shoved her aside. "They just fade away and die under the responsibility. Did ye ever see one go wrong with a sensible name like Cassiar, Siwash, or Husky? No, sir! Take a look at Shookum here; he'e——"

Snap! The lean brute flashed up, the white teeth just missing Mason's throat.

"Ye will, will ye?" A shrewd clout behind the ear with the butt of the dogwhip stretched the animal in the snow, quivering softly, a yellow slaver dripping from its fangs.

"As I was saying, just look at Shookum, here—he's got the spirit. Bet ye he eats Carmen before the week's out."

"I'll bank another proposition against that," replied Malemute Kid, reversing the frozen bread placed before the fire to thaw. "We'll eat Shookum before the trip is over. What d'ye say, Ruth?"

The Indian woman settled the coffee with a piece of ice, glanced from Malemute Kid to her husband, then at the dogs, but vouchsafed no reply. It was such a palpable truism that none was necessary. Two hundred miles of unbroken trail in prospect, with a scant six days' grub for themselves and none for the dogs, could admit no other alternative. The two men and the woman grouped about the fire and began their meager meal. The dogs lay in their harnesses, for it was a midday halt, and watched each mouthful enviously.

"No more lunches after today," said Malemute Kid. "And we've got to keep a close eye on the dogs—they're getting vicious. They'd just as soon pull a fellow down as not if they get a chance."

"Yes, Ruth," continued her husband, having recourse to the macaronic jargon in which it was alone possible for them to understand each other "wait till we clean up and pull for the outside. We'll take the white man's canoe and go to the salt water. Yes, bad water, rough water—great mountains dance up and down all the time. And so big, so far, so far away—you travel ten sleep, twenty sleep, forty sleep" (he graphically enumerated the days on his fingers), "all the time water, bad water. Then you come to great village, plenty people, just the same mosquitoes next summer. Wigwams, O, so high—ten, twenty pines. Hi-yu skookum!"

"And I was president of an Epworth once and taught in the Sunday school." Having irrelevantly delivered himself of this, Mason fell into a dreamy contemplation of his steaming moccasins, but was aroused by Ruth filling his cup. "Thank God, we've got slathers of tea! I've seen it growing down in Tennessee. What wouldn't I give for a hot corn pone just now! Never mind, Ruth, you won't starve much longer, and wear moccasins either."

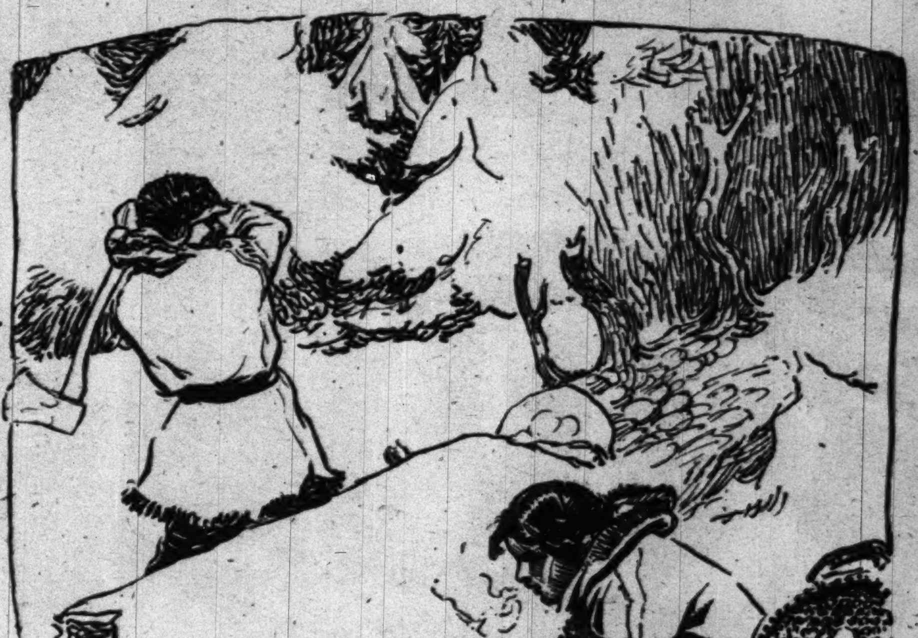
The woman threw off her gloom at this, and in her eyes welled up a great love for her white lord—the first white man she had ever seen—the first man whom she had known to treat a woman as something better than a mere animal or beast of burden.

He paused impotently, cast an appealing glance at Malemute Kid, then laboriously placed the twenty pines, end on end, by sign language. Malemute Kid smiled with cheery cynicism, but Ruth's eyes were wide with wonder, and with pleasure, for she half believed he was joking, and such condescension pleased her poor woman's heart.

"And then you step into a—a box, and pouf! up you go." He tossed his empty cup in the air by way of illustration, and as he deftly caught it cried: "And biff! down you come. O, great medicine men! You go Fort Yukon, I go Arctic City—twenty-five sleep—big string, all the time—I catch him string—I say, 'Hello, Ruth! How are ye?'—and you say, 'Is that my good husband?'—and I say 'Yes,'—and you say, 'No can bake good bread, no more soda'—then I say, 'Look in cache, under flour; good-by.' You look and catch plenty soda. All the time you Fort Yukon, me Arctic City. Hi-yu medicine man!"

Ruth smiled so ingenuously at the fairy story that both men burst into laughter. A row among the dogs cut short the wonders of the outside, and by the time the snarling combatants were separated she had lashed the sleds and all was ready for the trail.

"Mush! Baldy! Hi! Mush on!" Mason worked his whip smartly, and as the dogs whined low in the traces broke out the sled with the gee pole. Ruth followed with the second team, leaving Malemute Kid, who had helped her start, to bring up the rear. Strong man, brute that he was, capable of felling an ox at a blow, he could not bear to beat the poor animals, but humored them as a dog driver rarely does—nay, almost wept with them in their misery.



"Come, mush on there, you poor sore footed brutes!" he murmured after several ineffectual attempts to start the load. But his patience was at last rewarded, and, though whimpering with pain, they hastened to join their fellows.

No more conversation; the toil of the trail will not permit such extravagance. And of all deadening labors that of the northland trail is the worst. Happy is the man who can weather a day's travel at the price of silence, and that on a beaten track.

And of all heart breaking labors that of breaking trail is the worst. At every step the great webbed shoe sinks till the snow is level with the knee. Then up, straight up, the deviation of a fraction of an inch being a certain precursor of disaster, the snowshoe must be lifted till the surface is cleared; then forward, down, and the other foot is raised perpendicularly for the matter of half a yard. He who tries this for the first time, if haply he avoids bringing his shoes in dangerous propinquity and measures not his length on the treacherous footing, will give up exhausted at the end of a hundred yards; he who can keep out of the way of the dogs for a whole day may well crawl into his sleeping bag with a clear conscience and a pride which passeth all understanding; and he who travels twenty sleeps on the long trail is a man whom the gods may envy.

The afternoon wore on, and with the awe, born of the white silence, the voiceless travelers bent to their work. Nature has many tricks wherewith she convinces man of his finity—the ceaseless flow of the tides, the fury of the storm, the shock of the earthquake, the long roll of heaven's artillery—but the most tremendous, the most stupefying of all, is the passive phase of the white silence. All movement ceases, the sky clears, the heavens are as brass; the slightest whisper seems sacrilege and man becomes timid, affrighted at the sound of his own voice. Sole speck of life journeying across the ghostly wastes of a dead world, he trembles at his audacity, realizes that his is a maggot's life, nothing more. Strange thoughts arise unsummoned, and the mystery of all things strives for utterance. And the fear of death, of God, of the universe comes over him—the hope of the resurrection and the life, the yearning for immortality, the vain striving of the imprisoned essence—it is then, if ever, man walks alone with God.

So wore the day away. The river took a great bend, and Mason headed his team for the cutoff across the narrow neck of land. But the dogs balked at the high bank. Again and again, though Ruth and Malemute Kid were shoving on the sled, they slipped back. Then came the concerted effort. The miserable creatures, weak from hunger, exerted their last strength. Up—up—the sled poised on the top of the bank, but the leader swung the string of dogs behind him to the right, fouling Mason's snowshoes. The result was grievous. Mason was whipped off his feet; one of the dogs fell in the traces, and the sled toppled back, dragging everything to the bottom again.

Slash! the whip fell among the dogs savagely, especially upon the one which had fallen.

"Don't, Mason," entreated Malemute Kid; "the poor devil's on its last legs. Wait and we'll put my team on."

Mason deliberately withheld the whip till the last word had fallen, then out flashed the long lash, completely curling about the offending creature's body. Carmen—for it was Carmen—cowered in the snow, cried piteously, then rolled over on her side.

It was a tragic moment, a pitiful incident of the trail—a dying dog, two comrades in anger. Ruth glanced solicitously from man to man. But Malemute Kid restrained himself, though there was a world of reproach in his eyes, and, bending over the dog, cut the traces. No word was spoken. The teams were double spanned and the difficulty overcome; the sleds were under way again, the dying dog dragging herself along in the rear. As long as an animal can travel it is not shot, and this last chance is accorded it—the crawling into camp, if it can, in the hope of a moose being killed.

Already penitent for his angry action, but too stubborn to make amends, Mason toiled on at the head of the cavalcade, little dreaming that danger hovered in the air. The timber clustered thick in the sheltered bottom, and through this they threaded their way. Fifty feet or more from the trail towered a lofty pine. For generations it had stood there, and for generations destiny had had this one end in view—perhaps the same had been decreed of Mason.

He stooped to fasten the loosened thong of his moccasin. The sleds came to a halt and the dogs lay down in the snow without a whimper. The stillness was weird; not a breath rustled the frost encrusted forest; the cold and silence of outer space had chilled the heart and smote the trembling lips of nature. A sigh pulsed through the air—they did not seem to actually hear it, but rather felt it, like the premonition of movement in a motionless void. Then the great tree, burdened with its weight of years and snow, played its last part in the tragedy of life. He heard the warning crash and attempted to spring up, but, almost erect, caught the blow squarely on the shoulder.

The sudden danger, the quick death—how often had Malemute Kid faced it! The pine needles were still quivering as he gave his commands and sprang into action. Nor did the Indian girl faint or raise her voice in idle wailing, as might many of her white sisters. At his order she threw her weight on the end of a quickly extemporized handspike, easing the pressure and listening to her husband's groans, while Malemute Kid attacked the tree with his ax. The steel rang merrily as it bit into the frozen trunk, each stroke being accompanied by a forced, audible respiration, the "Huh!" "Huh!" of the woodsman.

At last the Kid laid the pitiable thing that was once a man in the snow. But worse than his comrade's pain was the dumb anguish in the woman's face, the blended look of hopeful, hopeless query. Little was said; those of the northland are early taught the futility of words and the inestimable value of deeds. With the temperature at 65 below zero a man cannot lie many minutes in the snow and live. So the sled lashings were cut and the sufferer, rolled in furs, laid on a couch of boughs. Before him roared a fire, built of the very wood which wrought the mishap. Behind and partially over him was stretched the primitive fly—a piece of canvas, which caught the radiating heat and threw it back and down upon him—a trick which men may know who study physics at the fount.

And men who have shared their bed with death know when the call is sounded. Mason was terribly crushed. The most cursory examination revealed it. His right arm, leg, and back were broken; his limbs were paralyzed from the hips, and the likelihood of internal injuries was large. An occasional moan was his only sign of life.

No hope; nothing to be done. The pitiless night crept slowly by—Ruth's portion, the despairing stoicism of her race, and Malemute Kid adding new lines to his face of bronze. In fact, Mason suffered least of all, for he spent his time in eastern Tennessee, in the Great Smoky mountains, living over the scenes of his childhood. And most pathetic was the melody of his long forgotten southern vernacular, as he raved of swimming holes and coon hunts and watermelon raids. It was as Greek to Ruth, but the Kid understood and felt—felt as only one can feel who has been shut out for years from all that civilization means.

Morning brought consciousness to the stricken man, and Malemute Kid bent closer to catch his whispers.

"You remember when we foregathered on the Tanana, four years come next ice run? I didn't care so much for her then. It was more like she was pretty, and there was a smack of excitement about it, I think. But, d'ye know, I've come to think a heap of her. She's been a good wife to me, always at my shoulder in the pinch. And when it comes to trading, you know there isn't her equal. D'ye recollect the time she shot the Moosehorn rapids to pull you and me off that rock, the bullets whipping the water like hailstones?—and the time of the famine at Nuklukyeto?—or when she raced the ice run to bring the news? Yes, she's been a good wife to me, better'n that other one. Didn't know I'd been there? Never told you, eh? Well, I tried it once, down in the states. That's why I'm here. Been raised together, too. I came away to give her a chance for divorce. She got it.

"But that's got nothing to do with Ruth. I had thought of cleaning up and pulling for the outside next year—her and I—but it's too late. Don't send her back to her people, Kid. It's beastly hard for a woman to go back. Think of it!—nearly four years on our bacon and beans and flour and dried fruit, and then to go back to her fish and cariboo. It's not good for her to have tried our ways, to come to know they're better'n her people's, and then return to them. Take care of her, Kid—why don't you?—but no, you always fought shy of them—and you never told me why you came to this country. Be kind to her, and send her back to the states as soon as you can. But fix it so as she can come back—liable to get homesick, you know.

"And the youngster—it's drawn us closer, Kid. I only hope it is a boy. Think of it!—flesh of my flesh, Kid. He mustn't stop in this country. And if it's a girl, why she can't. Sell my furs; they'll fetch at least five thousand, and I've got as much more with the company. And handle my interests with yours. I think that bench claim will show up. See that he gets a good schooling, and, Kid, above all, don't let him come back. This country was not made for white men.

"I'm a gone man, Kid. Three or four sleeps at the best. You've got to go on. You must go on! Remember, it's my wife, it's my boy—O, God! I hope it's a boy! You can't stay by me—and I charge you, a dying man, to pull on."

"Give me three days," pleaded Malemute Kid. "You may change for the better; something may turn up."

"No."

"Just three days."

"You must pull on."

"Two days."

"It's my wife and my boy, Kid. You would not ask it."

"One day."

"No, no! I charge——"

"Only one day. We can shave it through on the grub, and I might knock over a moose."

"No—all right; one day, but not a minute more. And, Kid, don't—don't leave me to face it alone. Just a shot, one pull on the trigger. You understand. Think of it! Think of it! Flesh of my flesh, and I'll never live to see him!

"Send Ruth here. I want to say good-by and tell her that she must think of the boy and not wait till I'm dead. She might refuse to go with you if I didn't. Good-by, old man; good-by.

"Kid! I say—a—sink a hole above the pup, next to the slide. I panned out 40 cents on my shovel there.

"And, Kid!" He stooped lower to catch the last faint words, the dying man's surrender of his pride. "I'm sorry—for—you know—Carmen."

Leaving the girl crying softly over her man, Malemute Kid slipped into his parka and snowshoes, tucked his rifle under his arm, and crept away into the forest. He was no tyro in the stern sorrows of the northland, but never had he faced so stiff a problem as this. In the abstract, it was a plain, mathematical proposition—three possible lives as against one doomed one. But now he hesitated. For five years, shoulder to shoulder, on the rivers and trails, in the camps and mines, facing death by field and flood and famine, had they knitted the bonds of their comradeship. So close was the tie that he had often been conscious of a vague jealousy of Ruth from the first time she had come between. And now it must be severed by his own hand.

Though he prayed for a moose, just one moose, all game seemed to have deserted the land, and nightfall found the exhausted man crawling into camp, light handed, heavy hearted. An uproar from the dogs and shrill cries from Ruth hastened him.

Bursting into the camp, he saw the girl in the midst of the snarling pack, laying about her with an ax. The dogs had broken the iron rule of their masters and were rushing the grub. He joined the issue with his rifle reversed, and the hoary game of natural selection was played out with all the ruthlessness of its primeval environment. Rifle and ax went up and down, hit or missed with monotonous regularity; lithe bodies flashed, with wild eyes and dripping fangs, and man and beast fought for supremacy to the bitterest conclusion. Then the beaten brutes crept to the edge of the firelight, licking their wounds, voicing their misery to the stars.

The whole stock of dried salmon had been devoured, and perhaps five pounds of flour remained to tide them over 200 miles of wilderness. Ruth returned to her husband, while Malemute Kid cut up the warm body of one of the dogs, the skull of which had been crushed by the ax. Every portion was carefully put away, save the hide and offal, which were cast to his fellows of the moment before.

Morning brought fresh trouble. The animals were turning on each other. Carmen, who still clung to her slender thread of life, was downed by the pack. The lash fell among them unheeded. They cringed and cried under the blows, but refused to scatter till the last wretched bit had disappeared—bones, hide, hair, everything.

Malemute Kid went about his work, listening to Mason, who was back in Tennessee, delivering tangled discourses and wild exhortations to his brethren of other days.

Taking advantage of neighboring pines, he worked rapidly, and Ruth watched him make a cache similar to those sometimes used by hunters to preserve their meat from the wolverines and dogs. One after the other he bent the tops of two small pines toward each other and nearly to the ground, making them fast with thongs of moosehide. Then he beat the dogs into submission and harnessed them to two of the sleds, loading the same with everything but the furs which enveloped Mason. These he wrapped and lashed tightly about him, fastening either end of the robes to the bent pines. A single stroke of his hunting knife would release them and send the body high in the air.

Ruth had received her husband's last wishes and made no struggle. Poor girl, she had learned the lesson of obedience well. From a child she had bowed and seen all women bow to the lords of creation and it did not seem in the nature of things for woman to resist. The Kid permitted her one outburst of grief, as she kissed her husband—her own people had no such custom—then led her to the foremost sled and helped her into her snowshoes. Blindly, instinctively, she took the gee pole and whip and "mushed" the dogs out on the trail. Then he returned to Mason, who had fallen into a coma, and, long after she was out of sight, crouched by the fire, waiting, hoping, praying for his comrade to die.

It is not pleasant to be alone with painful thoughts in the white silence. The silence of gloom is merciful, shrouding one as with protection and breathing a thousand intangible sympathies, but the bright white silence, clear and cold, under steely skies, is pitiless.

An hour passed—two hours—but the man would not die. At high noon the sun, without raising its rim above the southern horizon, threw a suggestion of fire athwart the heavens, then quickly drew it back. Malemute Kid roused and dragged himself to his comrade's side. He cast one glance about him. The white silence seemed to sneer and a great fear came upon him. There was a sharp report, Mason swung into his aerial sepulcher, and Malemute Kid lashed the dogs into a wild gallop as he fled across the snow.

CAPTIVATING MA

by Henry Sydnor

Herewith is presented the first installment of an absorbingly interesting new serial by Henry Sydnor Harrison, one of the most popular of the living writers of fiction. Mr. Harrison is the author of "Queed" and "V. V.'s Eyes," two novels which sprang into the lead of the best sellers at the time of their publication and held that lead for a long period. It has a more ingenuous plot than any of his other novels; it is written with that easy grace which has made the author famous; and it will hold your attention to the end of the last installment.

CHAPTER I.

IN a rear room of a quaint little house uptown a great bronze faced man sat at a piano, a dead pipe between his teeth, and absently played the most difficult of Beethoven's sonatas. Though he played it divinely, the three men who sat smoking and talking in a nearby corner paid not the least attention to him. The player, it seemed, did not expect them to; he paid very little attention himself.

Next to the selection of members that is, no doubt, the most highly prized thing about the Curzon club: you are not expected to pay attention unless you want to. It is a sanctuary where no one can bore you except yourself. The members have been chosen with this in mind, and not chosen carelessly.

Lord Pembroke, who married a Philadelphian, is quoted as saying that the Curzon is the most democratic club in a too confoundedly democratic country. M. Arly, the editor, has told Paris that it is the most exclusive club in the world. Probably both were right. The electing board is the whole club, and a candidate is stone dead at the first blackball; but no stigma attaches to him for that. Of course, it is a small club. Also, though money is the least of all passports there, it is a wealthy club. No stretch of the imagination could describe its dues as low. But through its sons of plutocracy, and their never ending elation at finding themselves in, has arisen the fund, by which poor but honest men can join, and do join, with never a thought of ways and means. Of these Herbert Horning, possibly the best liked man in the club, who supported a large family off the funny department of a magazine, was one. He had spurned the suggestion when it was first made to him, and had reluctantly foregone his election; whereon Peter Maginnis had taken him aside, a dash of red in his ordinarily composed eye.

"How much?" he demanded brutally.

"How much for what?"

"How much for you?" roared Peter. "How much must the club pay you to get you in?"

Horning stared, pained.

"God meant no man to be a self-conscious ass," said Peter more mildly. "The club pays you a high compliment, and you have the nerve to reply that you don't take charity. I suppose if congress voted you a medal for writing the funniest joke in America, you'd have it assayed and remit the cash. Chuck it, will you? Once in a year we find a man we want, and then we go ahead and take him. We don't think much of money here, but—as I say, how much?"

The "but" implied that Horning did, and hurt as it was meant to. He came into the club, took cheerfully what they offered him that way, and felt grateful ever afterwards that Maginnis had steered him to the light.

The big man, Maginnis himself, sat on at the piano, his great fingers rambling deftly over the keys. He was playing Brahms now and doing it magnificently. He was fifteen stone, all bone and muscle, and looked thirty pounds heavier, because you imagined, mistakenly, that he carried a little fat. He was the richest man in the club, at least so far as prospects went, but he wore ready made clothes, and one inferred, correctly, that a suit of them lasted him a long time. He looked capable of everything, but the fact was that he had done nothing. But for his money and a past consisting of thirty years of idleness, he might have been the happiest dog alive.

"The best government," said one of the three men who were not listening to the piano, "is simply the surest method for putting public opinion into power."

The sentence drifted over the player's shoulder and Brahms ended with a crash.

"Balzac said that," he cried, rising abruptly, "and said it better! But, good heavens, how you both miss the point! Why, let me tell you."

But this they stoutly declined to do. Amid laughter and protests—for the big man's hobbies were well known to the club—two of them sprang up in mock terror and headed for the door. They indicated that they had promised each other to play billiards and dared not break the engagement.

"I couldn't stay to the end, anyway, Peter," explained one, from the door. "My wife sits up when I'm out after midnight. Meet me here for breakfast some bank holiday, and we'll give the day to it."

Maginnis, who never got over feeling disappointed when he saw his audience slipping away from him, sighed, searched through his frowzy pockets for a match, lit his pipe, and fell upon a lounge near to all the society that was left him.

"Why weren't you up?" said this society presently.

"The idea of dinner was repellent to me."

"To you, Peter—the famous trencherman of song and story? Why this unwonted daintiness?"

"Lassitude. Too weary to climb the stairs. Besides, I wasn't hungry."

"Ah," said Reggie Townes, "you have the cave-man's idea of dinner, I see. It strikes you as purely an occasion for purveying provender to man's interior. The social feature eludes you. You know what I think, Peter? You ought to go to work."

"Work!"

"That's the word. What of it?"

"Not a thing. The idea was new to me; that's all."

"Persiflage and all that aside, why don't you take a stab at politics?"

"Politics! Here in New York! I'd sooner go into Avernus of the easy descent. If you had a town to run all by yourself now, there might be something in it. That idea of yours as to going to work, while unquestionably novel, strikes me as rather clever."

"No credit belongs to me," said Townes, "if I happened to be born brilliant instead of good looking."

"I'll ponder it," said Peter; and stretching out his great hand with a gesture which banished the subject, he pushed a service button and begged Townes to be so kind as to name his poison.

Outside in the hall a voice just then called his name, and Maginnis answered.

A young man in evening dress strolled through the doorway, a tallish, lithe young man with a pleasant, clean cut face and light hair. It was evident enough that he patronized a good tailor. He glanced at the two men, nodded absently, and dropped without speech into a chair near the door. Townes eyed him somewhat quizzically.

"Evening, Larry. A little introspective tonight, yes?"

Peter said: "By bull luck you have stumbled into a company of gentlemen about to place an order. Go ahead. Mention a preference."

The young man, unseeing eyes on Peter, did not answer. Instead, he sprang up as though struck by a thought of marked interest and bolted out the door. They saw him vanish into the telephone booth across the hall and bang the glass door shut behind him.

"Forgot an engagement."

"You mean remembered one," said Peter.

"It all figures out to the same answer," said Townes; and glancing presently at his watch, he announced that he must be trotting on.

"But I've ordered something for you, man."

"Varney can use it, can't he?"

The door opened and the tallish young man stood on the threshold again, this time social and affable. His distraitness, oddly enough, had all gone. He greeted the two in the smoking room as though he had seen them for the first time that evening; expressed his pleasure at being in their company; inquired after their healths and late pursuits; pressed cigarets upon them.

They rallied him upon his furtive movements and fickle demeanor, but drew only badinage in kind, and no explanations; and, Townes, laughing, turned to the door.

"Dally with us yet a little while, Reggie."

"No, gentles, no! I'm starting abroad tonight and have already dallied too long."

"Abroad!"

"My sister," said Townes, "as perhaps you don't know, wedded a foreigner—Willy Harcourt, born and raised in Brooklyn. Therefore, I am now leaving to go to a party in Brooklyn. Say that to yourself slowly—'a party in Brooklyn!' Sounds sort of ominous, doesn't it? If the worst happens, I look to you fellows to break it to my mother. Please mention that I was smiling to the last."

He waved a farewell and disappeared into the hall. Varney dropped into the chair Townes had left empty, and elevated his feet to the lounge where sprawled the length of Peter Maginnis. Peter looked up and the eyes of the two men met.

"Well, Laurence? What is the proposition?"

"Proposition? What do you mean?"

"An ass," replied Maginnis, pumping seltzer into a tall glass, "could see that yo have something on your mind."

Varney pulled a match from the little meta boxholder and looked at him with relucta admiration. "Sherlock Holmes Maginnis! I have something on my mind. A friend dropped it there half a hour ago, and he I've come to drop it on yours." He glanced

"To sum it all up in a word," said Varney, "there's a job of kidnaping on and I happened to get the contract. That's all there is to the little trifle."

Peter swung his feet around to the floor and sat up. His conviction that Varney was trying to be funny died hard.

Varney laughed. "I need a pal," he added. "Five minutes ago I telephoned and got permission to offer the place to you."

"Stop being so confounded mysterious," Peter broke out, "and go ahead!"

Varney blew smoke thoughtfully and said, "I will. In fact, that's what I came for. It's a devil of a delicate little matter to talk about to anybody, as it happens. Of course, what I tell you must never go an inch further, whether you come along or not."

"Naturally."

"You know my Uncle Elbert?"

"Old Carstairs?"

Varney nodded. "He wouldn't thank you for the adjective, though. I got the contract from him. By the way, he's not my uncle, of course; he was simply a great friend of my mother's. I inherited the friendship, and in these last five years he and I have somehow managed to get mighty close together. Eight years or so ago," he continued, "as you may or may not know, Uncle Elbert and his wife parted. There wasn't a thing the matter, I believe, except that they weren't hitting it off particularly well. They simply agreed to disagree. Nouveau riche, and all that, wasn't it? Mrs. Carstairs has some money of her own. She picked up, packed up, walked out, bought a place up the river near Hunston, and has lived there ever since."

Peter lookd up quickly. "Hunston? Ha! But fire away."

"She and Uncle Elbert have stayed pretty good friends all through it. They exchange letters now and then, and once or twice when she has been in the city, I believe they have met—though not in recent years. My private suspicion is that she has never entirely got over being in love with him. Anyhow, there's their general relationship in a nutshell—parted but friendly. It might have stayed just like that till they were both in their graves but for one accidental complication. There is a child."

"I seem to remember," said Peter. "A little boy."

"On the contrary, a little girl. Uncle Elbert," said Varney, "is a bit of a social butterfly. Mrs. Carstairs is an earnest domestic character. As I gather, that was what they clashed on—the idea of what a home ought to be. When the split came, Mrs. Carstairs took the child and Uncle Elbert was willing enough to have her do it. That was natural enough, Peter. He had his friends and his club and his little dinners, and he was no more competent to raise a girl baby than you are, which is certainly going some for a comparison. I suppose the fact was that he was glad to be free of the responsibility. But it's mighty different now.

"You see," said Varney, lighting one cigaret from another and throwing the old one away, "he must be pretty lonely all by himself in that big house of his. On top of that he's getting old and isn't in very good health. Explain it any way you like. The simple fact is that within this last year or so it's gradually gotten to be a kind of obsession with him, an out and out, down and out monomania, to know that kid—to have her come and spend part of every year with him. That's natural, too, I should say."

"H'm. Mrs. Carstairs sticks to her like flypaper, I suppose?"

"Not at all. She admits Uncle Elbert's rights and is entirely willing to let him have Mary—for such is our little heroine's name—for part of the time. It is the child who is doing the flypaper business. The painful fact is that she declines to have anything whatever to do with her father. Invitations, commands, entreaties—she spurns them all. Yes, I asked him if they had tried spanking, but he didn't answer—seemed rather miffed, in fact. The child simply will not come, and that is point number one. Now, of course, Uncle Elbert realizes that he has not been what the world would call a good father. And he has figured it out that Mary, evidently a young precocity, has judged him, found him guilty, and sentenced him to banishment from her affections. That hurts, you know. Well, he is certain that if he could once see her and be thrown with her for a few days, she would take him back as a father, as we might say, and that after that everything would be plain sailing. That's his theory. The point is how to see her and be thrown with her for the necessary few days."

"Why doesn't he get on the train and go to Hunston? Or, if Mrs. Carstairs is really so decent about the thing, why doesn't she get on the train and bring Mary down here?"

"Good. I put both of those up to him, and they seemed to embarrass him a little. I gathered that he had suggested them both to Mrs. Carstairs, and that she had turned them down hard. The ground seemed delicate. You see, we must allow for the personal equation in all this. No matter where they met, he couldn't hang around the house getting acquainted with Mary without coming into a sort of intimate contact with Mrs. Carstairs and giving a kind of domestic touch to their relations. You see how that is. She wants to be fair and generous about it, but if she is in love with him, that would be a little more than flesh and blood could bear, I suppose. Then, as I say, there is the pig-headedness of the child. Anyway, Uncle Elbert assures me that both those plans are simply out of the question. So there is the situation. Mary won't come to see him by herself. Mrs. Carstairs won't bring Mary to see him, and she won't let him come to see Mary. Well, what remains?"

Peter said nothing. In a room overhead a manifestly improvised quartet struck up "Should Auld Acquaintance Be Forgot" with great enthusiasm.

"You see, there is only one thing. The old gentleman," said Varney, "has brooded over the matter till it's broken him all up. He was in bed when I was there just now. He asked me to go to Hunston and bring his daughter to him. I told him that kidnaping was a little out of my line. 'Kidnaping is rather a harsh word,' he said. 'Yes,' said I, 'it's a criminal word, I believe.' But——"

Peter looked up, interrupting. "Is this all straight? Is that really what he wants you to do?"

"Naturally, Peter. Why not? You cling to the theory that such heroic measures are entirely unnecessary? So did I till I had thrashed the whole thing up and down with Uncle Elbert for an hour and a half, trying to suggest some alternative that didn't look so silly. Kindly get the facts well into your head, will you? The man must pursue Mary's affection either there or here, mustn't he? He can't do it there because his wife won't let him. In order to do it here, one would say offhand that Mary would have to be here, and since her mother declines to bring her, it does look to me as if the job would have to be done by somebody else. However, if my logic is wrong, kindly let your powerful——"

"I don't say it's wrong. I merely say that it sounds like a cross between a modern pork king's divorce suit and a seventeenth century peccadillo."

"And I reply that I don't care a hoot how it sounds. The only question of any interest to me, Peter, is whether or not Uncle Elbert has a moral right to a share in his own child. I say that he has such a right, and I say further that this is the only way in the world that he can assert his right. O, hang how it sounds! I'm the nearest thing to a son that he has in this world, and I mean for him to have his rights. So——"

"Very fine," said Peter dryly. "But what's the matter with Carstairs getting his rights for himself? Why doesn't he sneak up there and pull the thing off on his own hook?"

Varney laughed. "Evidently you don't know Uncle Elbert, after all. He's as temperamentally unfit to carry through a job of this sort as a hysterical old lady. Besides, even though they haven't met for so long, I suppose his own daughter would recognize him, wouldn't she? I never gave that idea a thought. Like his wife, he says he wants to have nothing whatever to do with it. In fact, I made him put that in the form of a promise—he's to give me an absolutely free hand, subject to the conditions, and not interfere in any way. In return I ended by swearing a great ironclad oath not only to go but to bring the child back with me. The swear was Uncle Elbert's idea, and I didn't mind. Confound it!—this is getting rather intimate, but here is Mrs. Carstairs' letter giving a partial consent to the thing. It just got in this afternoon; he sent for me the minute he'd read it, I believe, and I never saw a man more excited."

He pulled a scrawled and crossed note sheet from his pocket and read in a guarded and slightly embarrassed voice:

> Hunston, 25th of September.
> My Dear Elbert: I hardly know how to answer you, though I have been over and over the whole subject on my knees. As you know, if I could send Mary to you, I would, sadly as I should miss her, for the wish lies close to my heart to have her know her father. But she will not hear of leaving me and there is an end of that. What you suggest is so new and so dreadful in many ways that it is very hard to consent to it. Of course, I realize that it is not right for me to have her always. But the utmost I can bring myself to say is that if you can succeed in what you propose I will do nothing to interfere with you, and will see that there is no scandal here afterwards. Of course, I am to have no part in it, and no force is to be used, and everything is to be made as agreeable for her as is possible under the circumstances. O, I am miserable and doubtful about the whole thing, but pray and trust that it is for the best, and that she will find some way to forgive me for it afterwards.
> A. E. C.

"H'm. No force is to be used," said Peter. "May I ask just how you expect to get Mary on the choo-choo?"

"Now we are getting to the meat of the matter," said Varney. "We shall not have to get Mary on the choo-choo at all. We are going to use a yacht, which will be far more private and pleasant, and also far easier to get people on. Uncle Elbert's Cypriani lies in the harbor at this moment, ready to start anywhere at half a day's notice. It will start for Hunston tomorrow afternoon, with me on board. I'll need another man to put the thing through right, and I'd rather trust a friend than a servant. So would Uncle Elbert. When I came in here just now I was at once taken with your looks for the part, and I have been authorized by phone to give you first refusal on this great chance."

Peter said nothing. Varney feared that he looked rather bored.

"At first," he went on promptly, "I'll confess that I didn't see so much in the thing. But the more I've thought of it the more its unique charm has appealed to me. It is nothing more nor less than a novel, piquant little adventure. Exactly the sort of thing to attract a man who likes to take a sporting chance. Look at the difficulties of it. Go to a strange town where there are thousands and millions of strange children, locate Mary, isolate her, make friends with her, coax her to the yacht—captivate her, capture her! How are we to do all that, you ask? I reply, the Lord knows. That is where the sport comes in. We are forbidden to use force. We are forbidden to use Mrs. Carstairs or bring her into it in any way. We are forbidden, of course, to let the child know who we are. Everything must be done by almost diabolical craft, while dodging suspicion at every step. Can you beat it for a fascinating little expedition?"

Peter relit his pipe and meditatively dropped the match on the floor. "How old is Mary?"

"Old?" said Varney, surprised at the question, "O, I don't know. The separation took place—h'm—say eight years ago, and my guess is that she was about 4 at the time. From this and the way Uncle Elbert spoke of her, I daresay 12 would hit it fair and square. A grand age for kidnaping, what?"

"On the contrary," said Peter, "it makes it mere baby work. Turn it over as you will, it all boils down to spanking a naughty child."

at the room's two doors and saw that both were shut. "Time is short. The outfit upstairs may drift in any minute. Listen. Do you recall telling me the other day, with tears in your eyes, that you were slowly dying for something new and interesting to do?"

Peter nodded.

"I think of your pleasure," said Varney, "always. By looking about me and keeping my eyes and ears open at all hours, I have found you just the thing?"

"New and interesting?"

"There are men in this town who would run themselves to death trying to get in it on the ground floor."

Maginnis shook his head.

"I have done everything in this world," he said almost sadly, "except, I may say, the felonies."

"But this," said Varney, "is a felony."

Struck by his tone, Peter glanced up. "Mean it?"

"Sure thing."

"As I remarked before, what is the proposition?"

Q.E.D. by Berton Braley

A FIFTY-FIFTY PROPOSITION.

"COME on home with me to dinner tonight," invited Stanley Bliss. "I'll guarantee you a feed that all your hotel existence can't equal."

"I know you, you little rascal," responded his friend laughingly; "you're planning to get me to meet that wonderful sister of yours and thus inveigle me into matrimony. At that it's queer I never met her in all these years."

"Queer, rot!" exclaimed Bliss. "You've dodged it, that's all. Just as you dodge meeting any of 'em except some of your actress friends that you take out to lunch and supper."

"Strange as it may seem to you," Mason explained, "I never take one of them out except as a matter of insurance—to smooth down their ruffled temperaments. A theatrical manager has to keep on good terms with his stars, you know."

"Oh, I believe you, but I wish you would come out to the house tonight. My sister is going to have roast chicken and baked potatoes, than which there is nothing whicher, and here's your chance to get acquainted with a brand of culinary art that has no equal. Sister is a good looker and some cook. And if you get matrimonial inclinations from the combination, well, either of you might do a lot worse. Besides, who knows, Sis might not like you. Then you wouldn't have to marry her."

"That decides me," smiled Mason. "I'll come. I don't like to have it suggested that I wouldn't get by with your sister. But it is her looks and her intellectual qualities that appeal to me from your various descriptions, not her cooking, for in a hotel I can command the best chefs the world knows. Lead on."

"These be very marvelous viands," said Mason at dinner, passing his plate for the third time on the chicken, "and all your brother has said about them is true. I have always sworn that the professional chef was far, far superior to the home cook, but I find you his equal."

"Equal!" exclaimed Mr. Bliss Sr., who had arrived when the meal was half finished. "No chef can begin to cook with daughter, or with any good home cook."

"I can't agree with you there," said Mason. "It stands to reason that a man who gets $10,000 a year for his knowledge of food values and of cookery is better equipped to feed the human animal than even a good home cook, who has not made a scientific study of it and who, however much experience she has, is distracted from exact knowledge by a hundred other interests. That home cooking tradition is only a tradition, just as the superiority of a home over a hotel is largely fiction."

"You think hotel life is better than home life?" asked Miss Bliss, in astonishment.

"Well, figure it for yourself," said Mason. "I'm assuming a man has money enough to afford a comfortable suite in a hotel. Married or not, he has no servant problems to bother him, no furnace to tend, or to hire tended, and he and his family, if he has one, can have more liberty than any one in a home—and yet just as much privacy. If you want a meal late in a hotel, you get it—with no reproaches because you are half an hour late. If you want your clothes pressed at midnight, they'll be pressed; if you want your supper at 2 a. m., you phone down for it. There are servants hired to look after you at such hours, and you don't have to rout out a sleepy maid and have her give notice the next morning. If there is any kind of food in the wide, wide world you want, you can get it. And the finest home in the world cannot give you the service you get in a hotel. If you get tired of eating in your suite, you can eat in any of a half dozen dining rooms; if you prefer to go out, you don't disturb anybody. Home? Who wants a home?"

"Huh!" said the elder Bliss. "Wait till you get married, and you'll want a home fast enough. My wife made one for me twenty years, and now Irma has kept as fine a one for five years more. It isn't convenience and leisure and all those things that matter; it's your own place and your own things, and the—the atmosphere of home. And that's what you hotel livers miss—and what you never really understand until the marriage bug bites you. Or you bluff that you don't."

"I'm afraid the discussion is getting a bit acrid," suggested Miss Bliss. "But I must say it seems to me that people who live in hotels appear to have it very easy. However," she modified it, "they are mostly women who are childless and who also have no interest in making a real home. When a girl's traits are domestic, largely, as mine are, I think she would be lost in a hotel. It's much nicer playing around with your own things and cooking or directing the cooking for a nice man—or two nice men," indicating her father and her brother.

"Am I not a nice man?" queried Mason.

"Guests don't count when you're discussing general terms," she replied, "but if you'll come out to dinner oftener I'll include you."

"And will you give me some instructions in the desirability of home life?" asked Mason, boldly.

"I'll do what I can," said Miss Bliss, dimpling adorably.

"That's settled, then," declared Mason. "But it isn't fair unless I can teach you something of the joys of hotel life. So I'm going to have a supper party for you next week Saturday, if you'll come. Father and brother are, of course, invited, and I'll have some nice actresses, too. Will you come?"

"I think that would be lovely," cried Miss Bliss, and it was settled.

Mason found that Miss Bliss could be as witty and clever, as joyously and wholesomely bohemian in the gay environment of the hotels and restaurants as she could be charming and womanly and domestic in her own home. And it amused him to see how consciously, or unconsciously, she sought to prove the superiority of domesticity as he sought to prove the refinements and betterments of existence en suite.

And as the exponents of these two philosophies of living demonstrated their theories, a young gentleman who is ordinarily depicted as garbed insufficiently for these northern winters, which would, if he were human, make his hands too stiff to shoot arrows—this young gentleman was busy demonstrating a philosophy several million years older than either Miss Bliss' or Mr. Mason's. And since this young gentleman has been making the same sort of demonstration since chaos was running around exceeding the speed limit, he succeeded in proving his philosophy for the ten billionth time.

In other words, he brought Mason in six weeks to that state of mind where he said, as he lingered on the porch of the Bliss home: "It has been very wonderful to have you with me tonight, Irma. To dance with you and have everybody wonder who the 'queen with the blue gown' might be, and to—well, just to make me happy that you're with me. Only—it isn't enough. I want you always. A man wanders about from hotel to hotel and club to club, and he thinks he's having a lovely time and talks about his bachelor freedom, and all the time he's restless, dissatisfied, and lonely. He wants a home, that's what he wants, and only a woman can make a home for him. And you're the woman for me. I want to have you greet me when I come——"

"But I thought you said," Miss Bliss protested, "that hotel life was the best life; that you didn't care about a home; that you could have freedom and privacy in a hotel, with none of the bothersome responsibilities of your own place, and——"

"I was bluffing, my dear," said Mason; "just talking loud to cover up the fact that I was tired of being a selfish, homeless bachelor. And when I found you, with your homey ways and your wholesome domestic nature, and your sweetness, and when I saw the wonderful way you cared for your brother and father, I said: 'Mason, here's the right girl, if she'll have you.'"

His eyes glowed and his voice had a queer little break and catch in it as he added: "Irma, if you'll marry me, we'll get a comfortable, cozy little house somewhere in the suburbs, and we'll plan the details of the place and of the furniture and everything together, and you'll joy in planning and working for me at home as I am planning and working for you downtown, and——"

"No, not me." Miss Bliss withdrew her hands from her eager lover's and spoke sharply, "for I've been bluffing, too, Arnold. I've kept house for father and brother for five years, but I never liked it. I hate suburbs, too. I want to live in the heart of the city, near where the bright lights sizzle. I've always wanted to live in hotels, and since you've been taking me around to them I've wanted it more than ever. I've been tied to a house and three meals for five years. I hate it. I do it well because it was my job. But I'm through. I've scarcely been able to go to bridge teas or the dansants or matinees all that time, and when I got to a party it was sheer good luck. And if I marry you we'll live in a hotel as you've been doing, with no worry and care about r meals except to order them, and I'll run around town as I've wanted to do for five years, and I'll have breakfast in bed and dinner at a different place every night, and we'll be so happy!"

"No, ma'am," said Mason. "I've lived that hotel life for five years, and I'm sick of it. I want a home. The food in hotels all tastes the same, the waiters all look alike, the rooms all smell like hotel rooms, no matter how much they redecorate them. The married people you meet at hotels—the men are half of them rounders and the women are two-thirds of them parasites—I love you, my dear, but nix on the hotel life. Let's have a home."

"No," said Miss Bliss. "One of my reasons for marrying is to get out of a home."

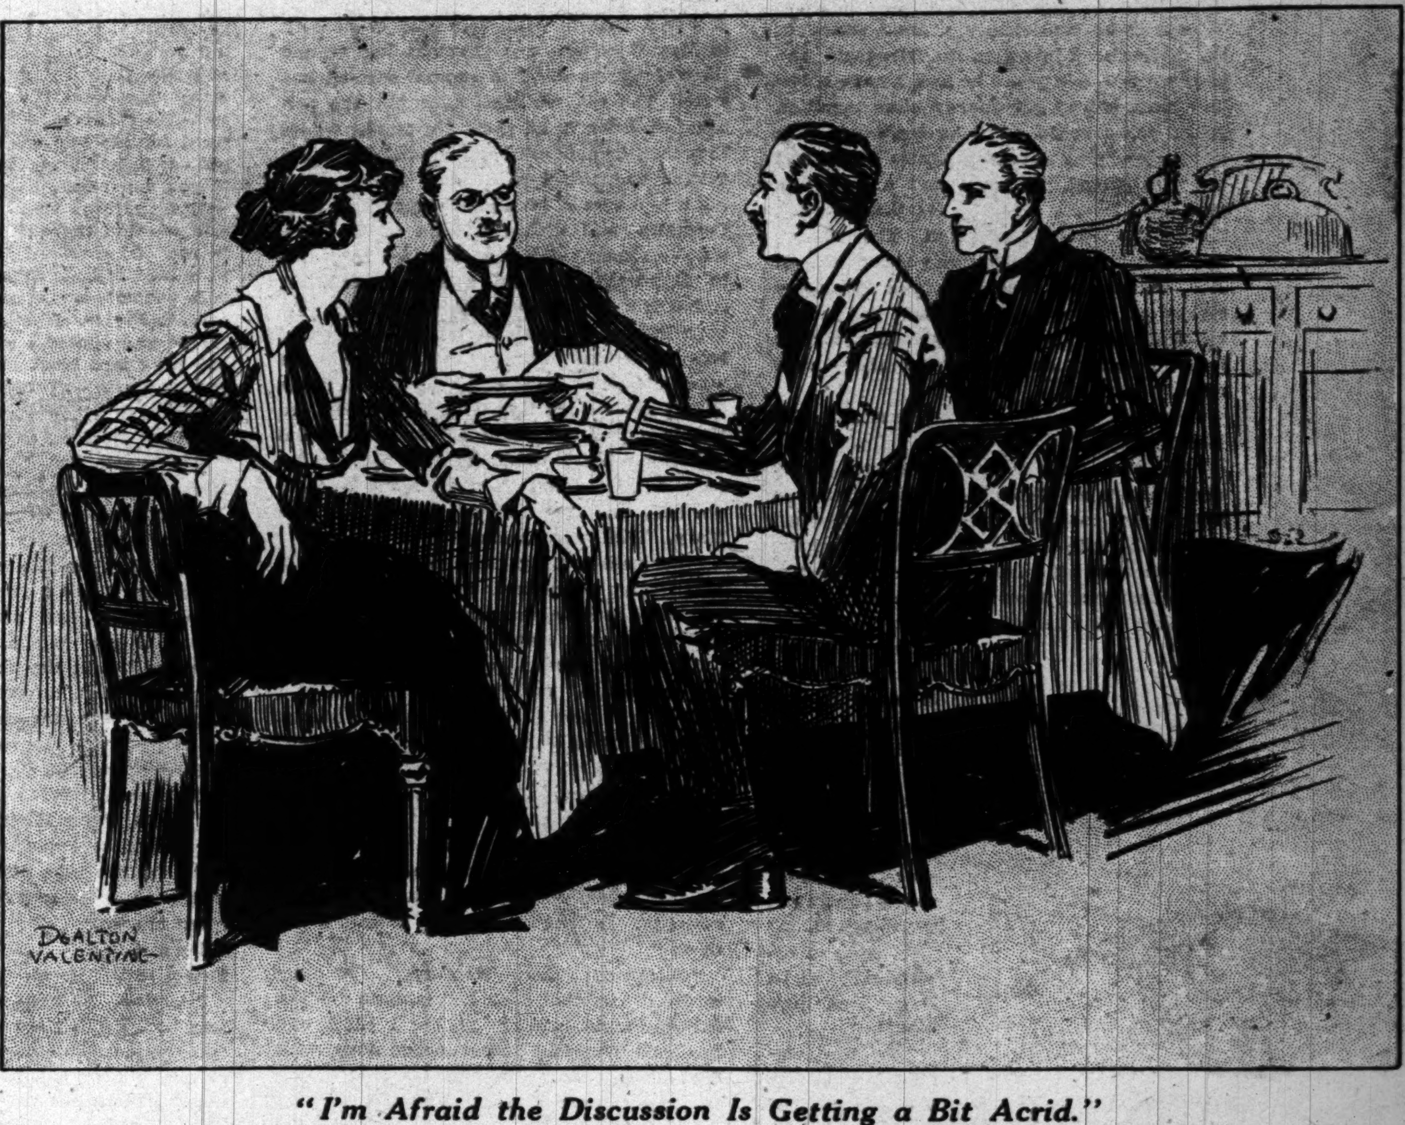
"And mine," said Mason, "is to get a home. I won't change my mind."

"Nor I mine," Miss Bliss stoutly insisted.

"Then it's all off, I suppose," said Mason, and when she nodded with tear wet eyes he turned and rambled sadly away.

Whereupon the aforementioned young gentleman with the philosophy older than chaos decided that this demonstration was more or less of a flivver, and, packing up his arrows, slumped dispiritedly away, too. But he hadn't gone far when he had what might be called, if he were not a god, a hunch. At any rate he decided that this was not necessarily a hopeless job—that there might be an opportunity for a mediator.

And that is how it came about that Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Mason and the children live in a house from November until May and in a hotel from May to November. For all life is a series of compromises, and marriage is most successful when the partners go fifty-fifty.



"I'm Afraid the Discussion Is Getting a Bit Acrid."

Holding Perfectly Still for an Hour

by Oney Fred Sweet

He Was a Toreador for 35c an Hour for the Budding Artists.

THERE was plenty of time to think as I stood there on the platform before the big class, following the teacher's instructions not to make a move until he should call "time." Upstairs I had stood before the wonderful paintings and the inspiring statuary and they had seemed to me things that had not been done by human hands; I had thought of them as finished products which must have dropped down out of the clouds. Yet earthly fingers had used just the right colors in just the right place and earthly fingers had so accurately wrought with a chisel.

During my rest between poses, when the girls in their bedaubed smocks and the young men in their linen gowns ceased squinting and leveling their pencils at me, I asked the dean of the Art institute school a lot of questions.

"How many of these students are geniuses?" I asked. "How can they know if they have been gifted; how can you know?"

"The designation 'genius' is a very much abused term," answered Mr. Keane. "I have seen thousands of students here, but I have not seen one genius. I have seen glimmerings of genius, but no one who exemplified it in the extreme sense of the term. A genius is born full fledged with all his faculties developed. Genius is a rare thing."

"Then a genius doesn't have to study?"

"Show me a genius," corrected Mr. Keane, "and I will show you a person who works with unrelenting energy and takes advantage of every opportunity to develop the thing that is in him."

"Dropping the genius idea, then," I went on, "how many of these students will succeed as artists—will do fairly well financially, which means success these days? Can the instructors tell which ones will succeed?"

"We can approximate. Sometimes the ability does not appear in the classroom, but all the time the worker is going through a process of assimilation and the ability will assert itself later."

"You have some dawdlers here," I remarked; "some posers."

"Unfortunately, yes," admitted the dean, "but they soon drop out. It is rare, indeed, that a dawdler ever does anything, although the few examples are always remembered."

"Who are your art students? How did they happen to become art students? What is their ambition?"

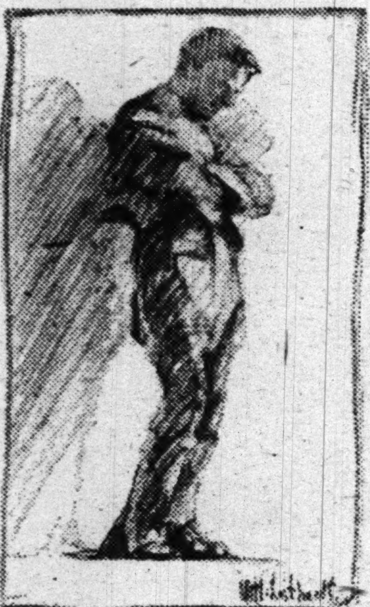
"I can answer as to the average student," replied the dean. "Young men and women from forty-three out of our forty-eight states come to Chicago to study art. They were not originally inspired by the 'old masters.' They were inspired by the comic supplement."

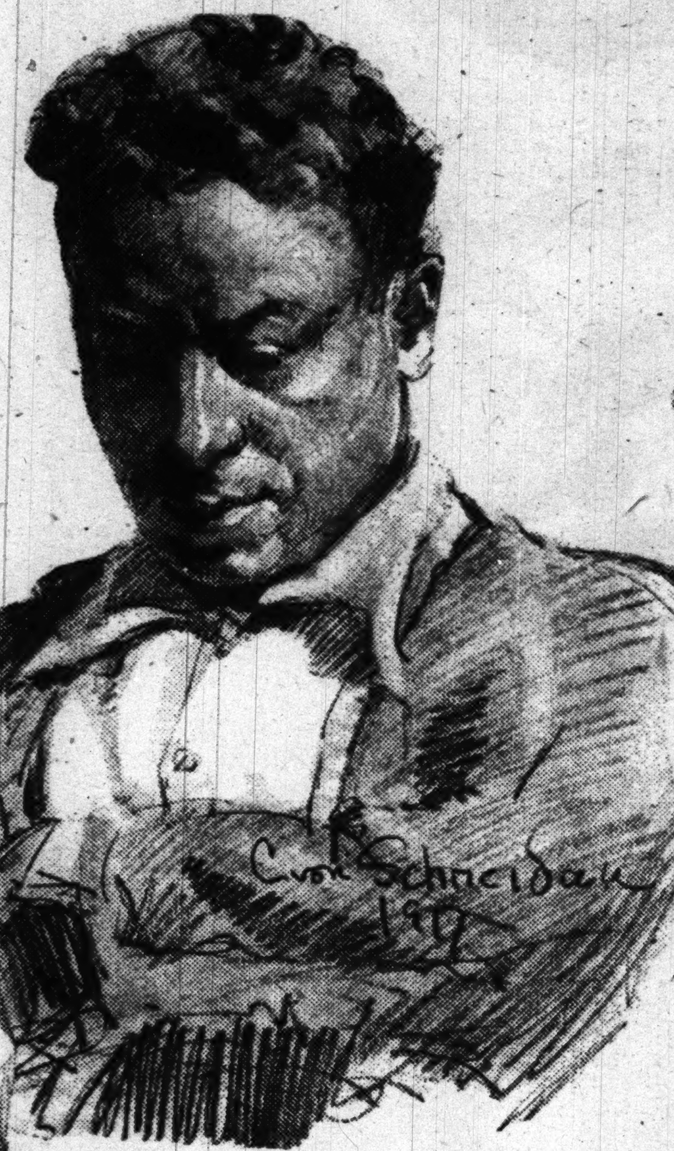
"By the comic supplement? How unromantic!"

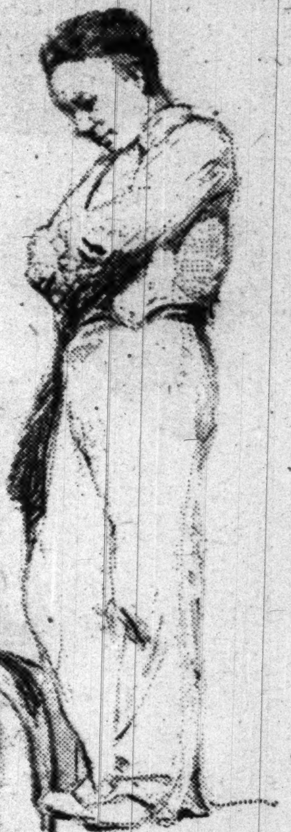
"By the comic supplement. Down in Texas and out in Kansas they have read of the wonderful salaries these comic artists draw. They have made copies of these comics and their relatives and friends have praised them. On coming here some of these aspirants become discouraged when they find we have no simple formula for turning them out in a few months in a position to command big salaries. Others readjust their ideas, understand that achievement is only to be had at the end of a long road, and buckle down to the game. In the atmosphere here they discover what art means. Those who have the stuff in them work the thing out. Chicago has become a great art center."

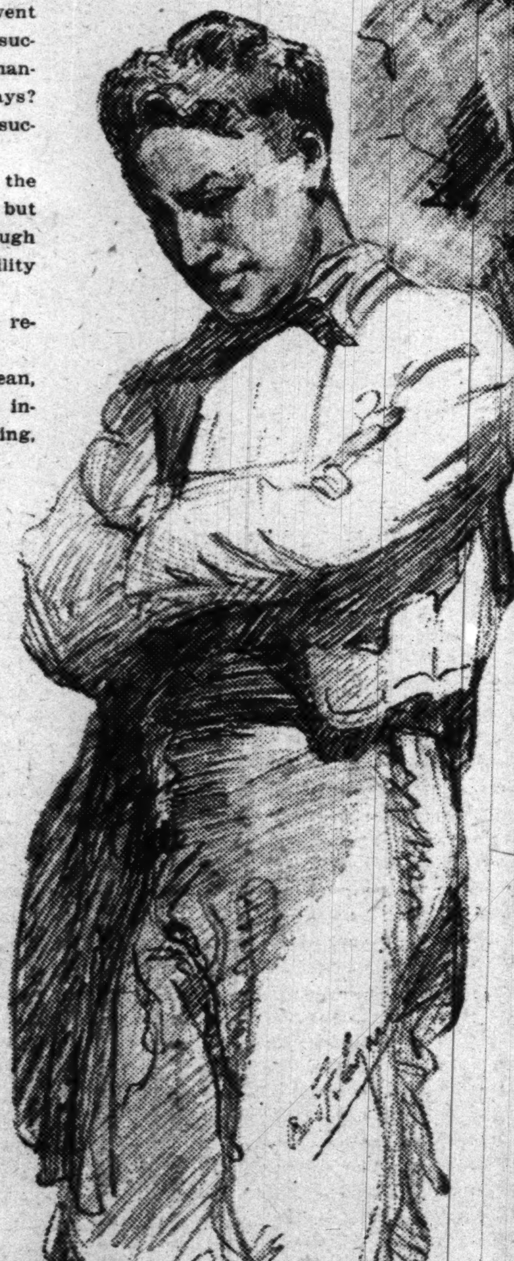
"And the parents back home who expected quick results?"

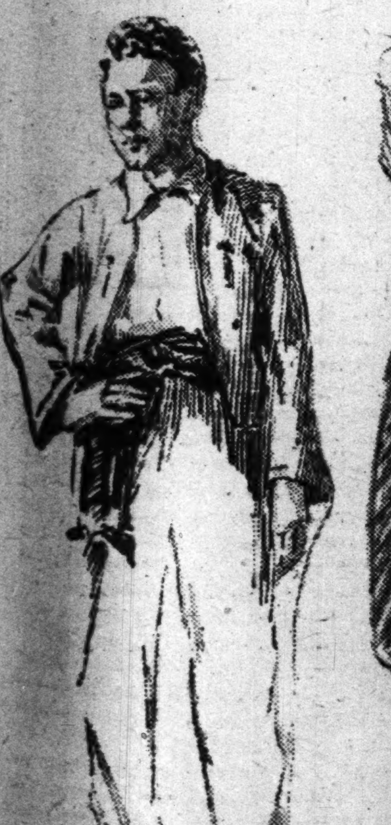
"It is a common occurrence to have parents write or ask me what the institute can guarantee by way of position at the end of a few months. I am sure the same is not asked of a law or medical school; from these schools the graduate is supposed to go forth and begin his battle. And there must be a great many law and medical school graduates who fall out of line in the professions they elected to follow."











"Then most of your students live away from Chicago?"

"Only about a fourth of our students are Chicago born. About 50 per cent of the students are paying their own tuition. Do you know how they do it? Among other things they carry out dishes in cafeterias, they usher in theaters, act as "L" guards, work in express offices."

"Do you think every one has some artistic ability?"

"I think any one can be taught to draw."

"Time!" called the teacher, and I climbed back to the platform.

Having gone through one hour of standing perfectly still, I hoped the teacher would not give me too hard a pose for the second batch of students. Certain of my muscles had ached, my eyes had blurred, and I had felt wabbly before the first hour was up. An hour is a long time under certain conditions. But I was wearing the costume of a toreador, and I figured a toreador ought to be able to stand considerable strain. Anyhow I was being paid 35 cents an hour for not flickering an eyelash and I was duty bound to pretend that I was Apollo or one of the other statues up in the corridors. If I hadn't worn any costume at all my pay would have been 15 cents more an hour, but I didn't want to be too commercial. For an extra 15 cents an hour I might have imitated "The Sower," I suppose, but what is it, after all, that drives the artistic appreciation out of people's lives but the question: "How much is there in it for me?"

Being an artist's model is not so trying outside of having parts of yourself go to sleep. The bunch down in front seem to be just staring at you at first, but pretty soon you discover from the remarks that float up that they are merely trying to locate where the lights and shadows fall on your nose. "If you will notice," you hear the teacher saying to some pupil in low tones, "if you will notice the left foot is directly on a line with the left shoulder. By all rules of anatomy that left shoulder should fall lower, but he has consistently kept it sticking up so you will have to draw it that way."

From where I stood I could see some of the pictures that were materializing. Some of them were not flattering, but I suppose their creators were painting what they saw. Others were complimentary. Those who were making the latter would no doubt meet with great success as portrait painters. And some were putting into their stuff a certain quality that was their own. Mr. Keane had said no student geniuses had come under his gaze, but he had added that he had known many students who possessed glimmerings of genius.

Is there anything finer than the sight of a human being seriously plugging away to accomplish something worth while? There were a good many such pluggers at work on me. You could tell they would get somewhere as had just such students before them. They had passed the stage where they had but a vague idea of what they were trying to do; they were making the minutes count. They no longer cherished false ideas about art. They had gotten over their impatience and wasteful haste; they were digging and digging hard.

They were young, most of these students before me. Their average age was 21. They were young enough so that life was still rose hued and gold tinted. They were full of the emotional impulse crying for intellectual expression. They were preparing themselves for the world and the world was waiting for them.

And the drawings they made of me while I held perfectly still for an hour? Well, here are some of them on this page.

A MOUSE GETS HURT AND The TEENIE WEENIES CARRY HIM HOME.

By Wm. DONAHEY.

THE mouse who had fallen into a fruit jar was rescued by the Teenie Weenies and when the little people had pulled him out they found that he was badly injured. Both of his front legs were sprained and it was quite impossible for the poor fellow to walk.

"He will never be able to walk home on these legs," said the Doctor after he had examined the injured mouse. "In fact, he won't be able to walk for several weeks."

"Oh, dear me!" exclaimed Mrs. Mouse, who sat on the floor holding her husband's head in her lap, "I can't leave him here, for the old cat that lives in this house might come down here almost any moment and then—why, it makes me shudder to think of what might happen."

"We will not desert you, madam," said the General kindly, "we will take your husband home just as soon as we can get a wagon into this cellar."

"A wagon will not do," cried the Doctor. "We could never take Mr. Mouse home in a wagon. Why, it would jar the poor fellow's injured legs until he couldn't stand the pain."

"Great guns!" gasped the General, "How in the name of goodness are w going to move him?"

"Very simple matter, General," said the Doctor. We can make a hammock out of one of our table cloths and hang it to a long pole, which we can carry on our shoulders."

"I know where there's a pole that will be just the thing," shouted the Turk. "Come on, Gogo, and we'll get it."

The two Teenie Weenies hurried off across the cellar floor towards the coal bin and presently they returned carrying a long handled paint brush on their shoulders.

The injured mouse was soon put into the table cloth and the ends were made fast to the brush handle.

Six of the strongest Teenie Weenies were chosen to carry the mouse and they gently lifted the brush handle to their shoulders. The Teenie Weenies moved off carefully towards the mouse's home, which lay at the far end of the cellar, while the Dunce walked at the side of the hammock and carried the mouse's long tail over his shoulder in order to keep it from dragging on the floor.

The mouse was carried through a hole in a brick wall, which was the entrance to his home, and laid gently on a bed of soft cotton. The Lady of Fashion helped Mrs. Mouse nurse her husband back to health and the Doctor called almost every day, while the Cook made all sorts of dainty dishes for the invalid.

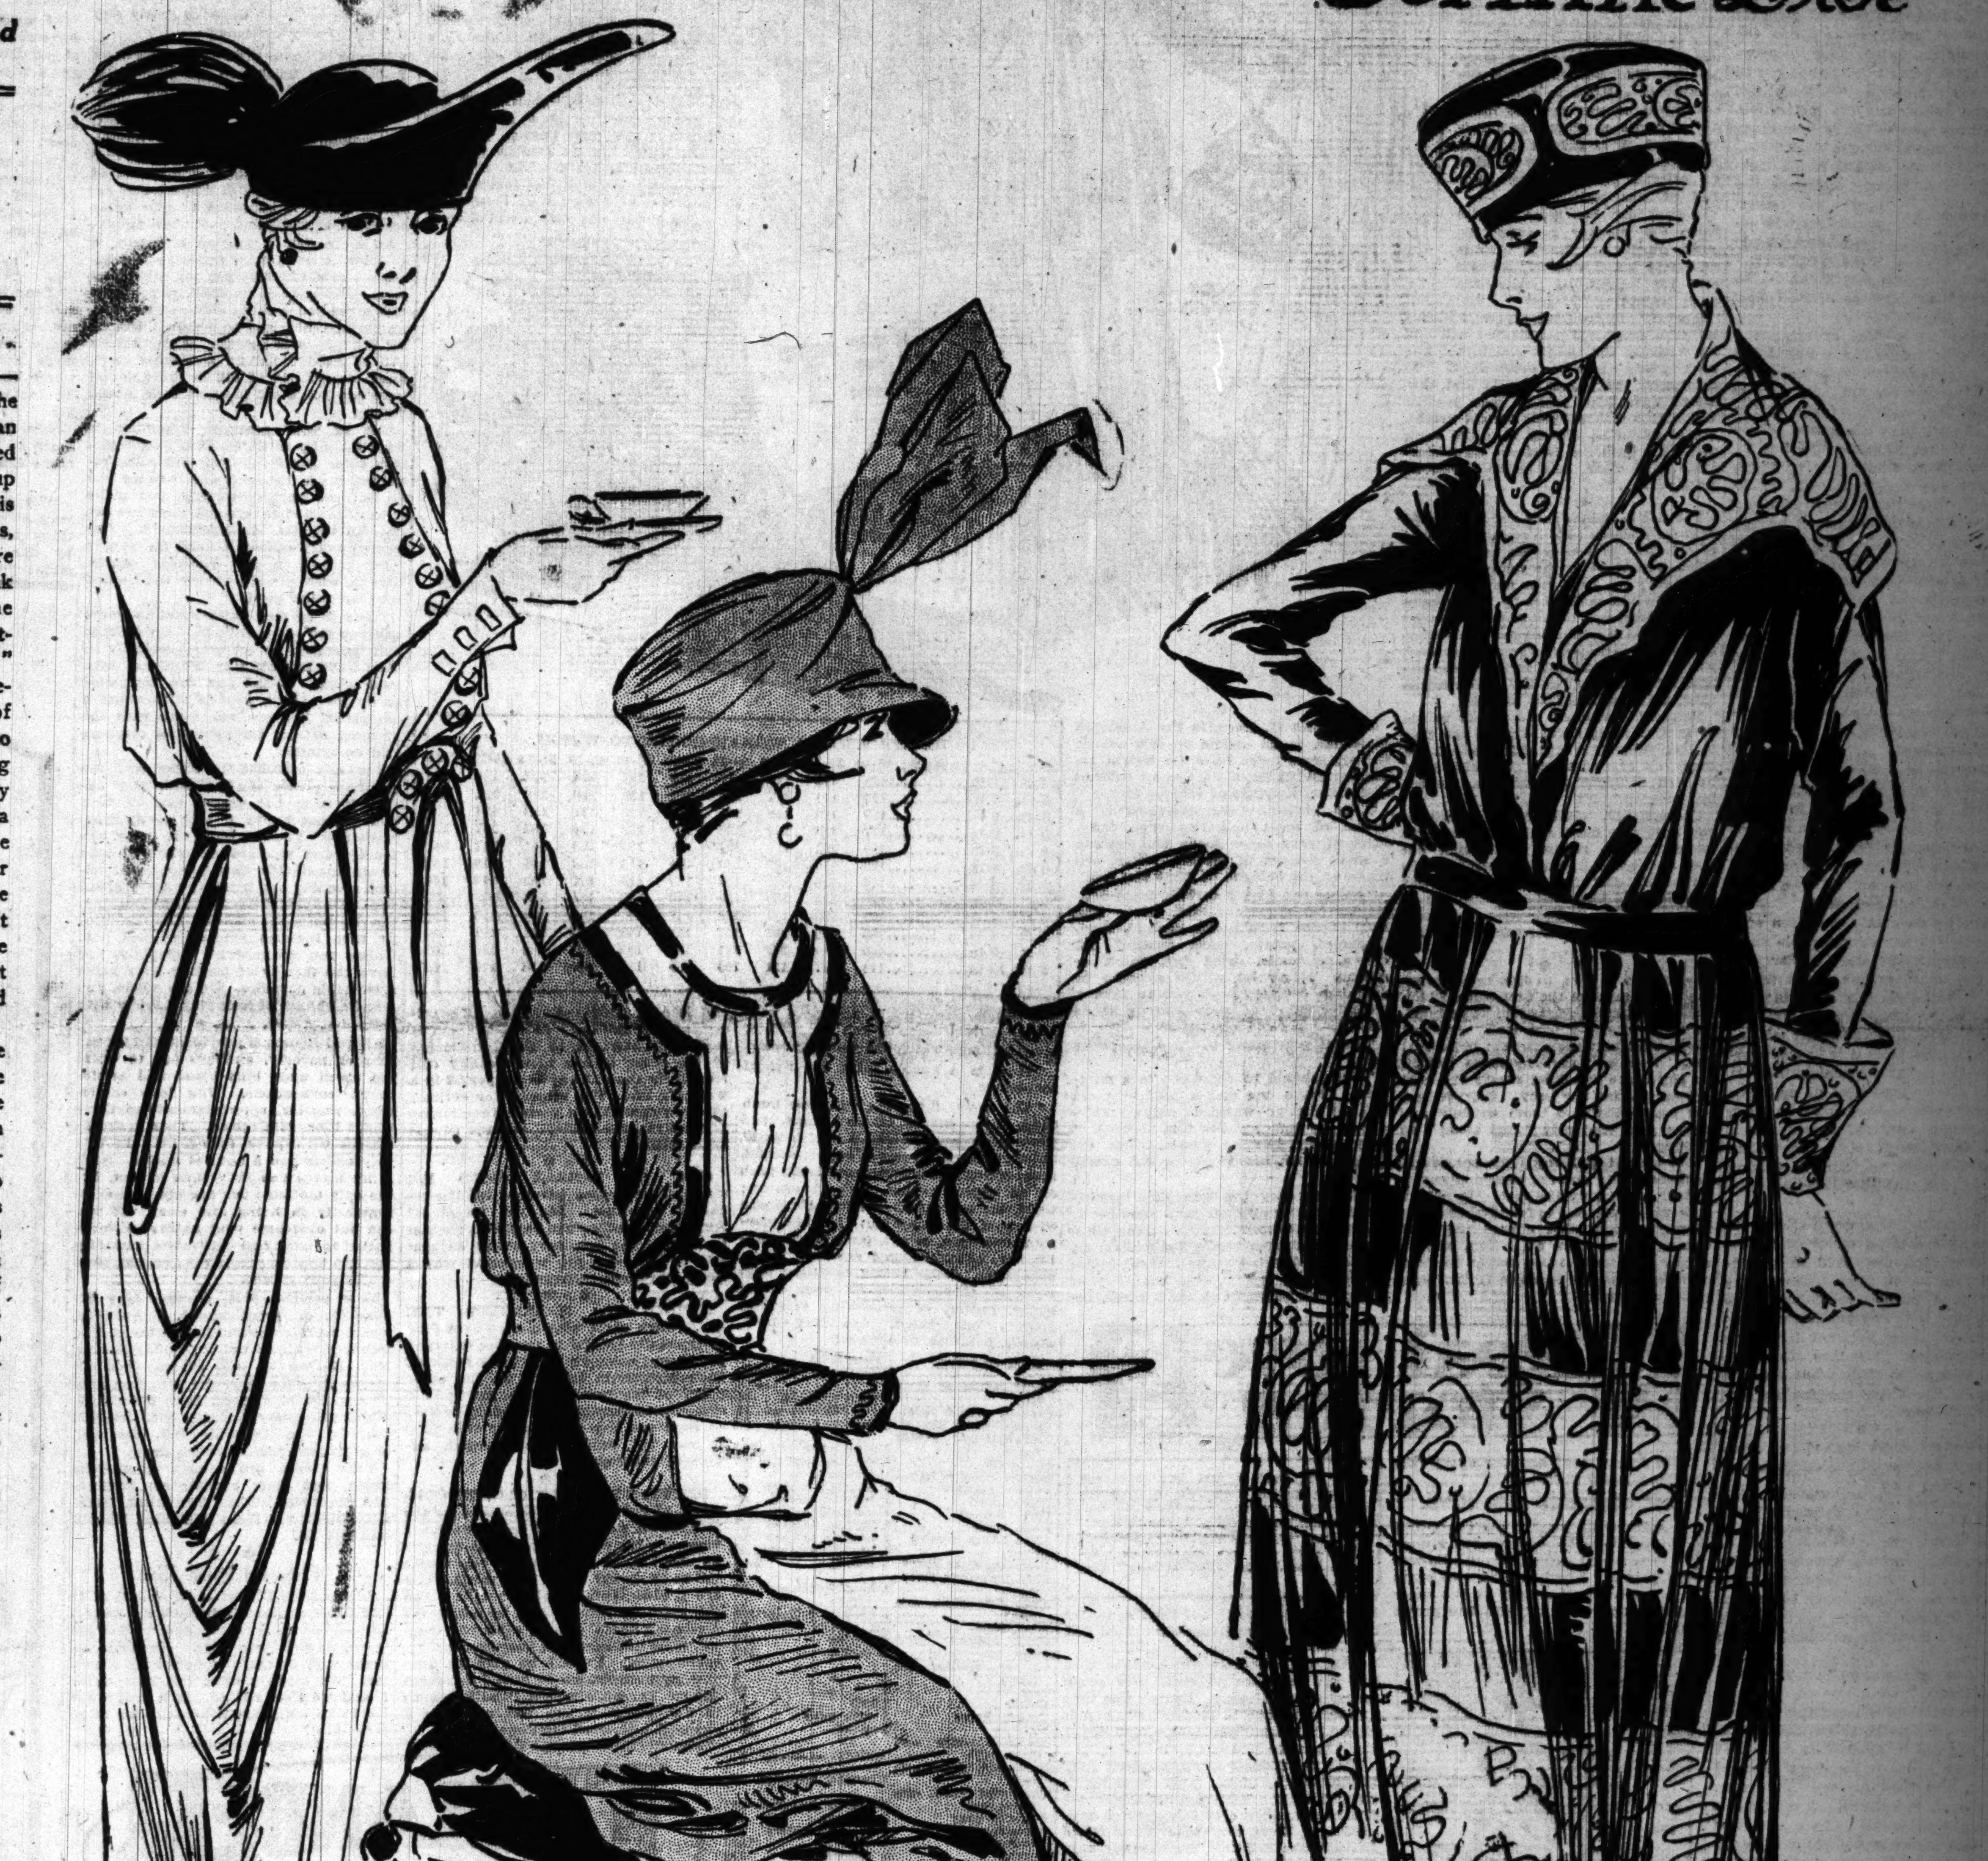
THIS IS THE WINTER OF THE ONE PIECE FROCKS

says Corinne Lowe

Russian, Chinese Zouave, and Directoire—All Are Conciliated in Late Models.



1. Simple frock of tan gabardine with barrel draped skirt and aluminum buttons.

2. Directoire in faith is this slim, straight gown of ashes and flame. The girdle is of gold.

3. Russian coat dress of heavy black satin bound with gold embroidered bands.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—What is a mere map to the designer of the present year? This gifted gentleman seems, in fact, to be in possession of the fabled wishing carpet. When he wants to make up something new he gives a masterful wave of his scissors, evokes the traveling carpet and says, "Here, old rug, set me down in Mandalay, where the bells tinkle from the pagodas," or, "I think it would be nice to take a little run along the banks of the frozen Neva," or, "How about setting me back to the times of dear old Napoleon?"

Geography and time being nothing to the designer, he has given us a bewildering range of one piece frocks. And it makes it hard for us to choose. How do we know whether we are going to look our best in a rich tunic like that worn by Boris Godunuff, or in the simple neck fixin' of a Chinese coolie, or in the skimpy landscape of the Empress Josephine's best dress? Whichever we do choose, too, we shall probably always be haunted by the thought of the thing we didn't take—just as when we finally select a chocolate eclair from the tray of French pastry we regret the raspberry tart that we might have had and didn't.

Be that as it may, the one piece frock of some sort is becoming more and more a necessity to the wardrobe. This was not always so. There used to be women who dressed well on the twin possessions of a good looking suit and one handsome evening frock. Now, however, she who goes to an afternoon reception in a mere suit is bound to feel conscious of her deficiencies. As the man standing beside her turns to her with the searching question, "What do you think of the new art?" she can't give anything like a serene mind to the conversation. She is too ruffled by the sight of that covey of smart, charming, one piece frocks over there in the corner. Why isn't she dressed like that? Really, the handicap is too overwhelming. It's all she can do to keep a firm hold on her teacup.

This has been, indeed, a winter of one piece frocks. Suit you must have, of course. But frock you must-er. This being admitted, the only question is, What kind?

In looking over the latest models of this type of gown sent us by the French dressmakers one is impressed by the number of Chinese adaptations. Really, you know, we are getting fanatical about this oriental touch! There is hardly a thing—wrap, blouse, gown, or hat—that hasn't got some little sneeze, at least, of Chinese embroidery or cut. For instance, one of the frocks sent over is of white crepe embroidered richly in a twig pattern of blue and gold. Its bodice fastens with gay little gold buttons and it ends—with such quaint directness—in mere little bands or collar and cuffs.

This pajama collar, as it is called, is, in fact, noted on a variety of apparel. Charming it may be, too, on the woman whose throat is round and full, and young as that of a Burne-Jones superwoman. If, however, one's throat is just a little bit of a thermometer of age—if there are tendons that look like ropes—then [illegible] is better to let the pajama collar light you to bed and not to the glaring afternoon party.

For today's drawings the artist has selected modes more universally becoming than the ubiquitous coolie and mandarin modes. At the left, for instance, the simple dress from Paris points the way to a general serviceability. Of tan colored gabardine, its skirt is draped to give the barrel effect. We hesitate, however, at this label. It sounds a little too bald to say that slight confinement at the ankles is barrel. No, we shall call it rather a zouave effect, and let it go at that. For the rest, there is a graceful arrangement of the girdle set off with the aluminum buttons which appear down the front of the waist and one of those extremely becoming white batiste collars.

The center model is one which may be adapted in any number of materials. Falling in perfectly straight, rather narrow lines, it is decidedly Directoire in faith—altogether a good example of the way that a Parisian artiste can take some foundling of material, hang it slim and narrow, and still keep it from looking kind of skimpy and underfed. The present example of this art is made of a smooth, fine gray cloth, falling over a front of white silk crepe.

Take white and dove gray and light them with a touch of crimson. Can anything be more lovely than this combination of ashes and flame? This is what the designer has done here in this center model, for the band of velvet about the collar and facing the edges of the gray cloth is of geranium red velvet. The girdle is of gold embroidery and there is a stitching of this same gold accompanying the velvet band about the bodice. Note, too, the side pockets defined by the triangular pieces of red velvet—only another evidence of the fact that this year you are bound to wear a pocket, no matter how or where you wear it.

The last model—the one to the right—is one of the popular coat dresses made up in the even more popular Russian style. There is a sumptuousness about this heavy black satin with its rich embroidery of gold bands, its gauntlet cuffs, and deep collar of the same metallic ornamentation that gives it a decided portrait charm. Best of all, too, this frock is one which may be worn equally well by the girl of 20 or the woman of 40. And to find a point of compromise between youth and middle age is, after all, a difficult matter.

MEN AND WOMEN

"SHE pulled all that stuff so she could put the burden on everybody but herself." Thus a Chicago woman of the underworld who knows the game from years of living it summarizes the march of the San Francisco underworld brigade, its leader-spokesman and the vice problem itself.

"She says," continues the Chicagoan, "that a prostitute has to be guaranteed $20 a week to reform. That's raw. A straight girl can keep straight on 30 cents a year. An easy going girl can't keep straight on $30 a day. The reason why most girls hit the gutter is because they are too lazy to stand the grind. She discovers her one asset. She knows that it will buy for her the clothes she longs for, the bright lights, and the gay times. And without work—that's what appeals to her most, without work."

Wages Vs. Vice.

This from "one on the inside looking out" hits directly between the eyes the sentimentalists who exclaim sympathetically with prostitutes that they are not so much to blame for their manner of life after all.

It strikes us a deal of sympathy that might better be converted to the use of more deserving unfortunates is wasted whenever the publicity light is turned on the women of the underworld. There may be cases where girls are forced into the life, but investigators have found few of them. There are the feeble minded, to be sure, and those who may honestly claim hereditary influence as having stamped them for the scarlet letter. For these no sympathy is withheld. But they are in the minority.

The majority of girls and women whose lives and means of living contribute the open sore on the social body politic are lazy, weak, and foolish. And an arraignment against the sloppy sentiment which haloes these women as hard working victims of economic conditions is not out of place as a subsidiary cause.

It is not the hard working girls who turn in at the scarlet sign in the road. It is cruel and unjust to insinuate that girls and women of any one class, such as store employés, domestics, factory workers, and so on, because of low wages, are immoral. Virtue is not a matter of dollars and cents.

The precise economic condition of a girl does not in any considerable number of cases fix the state of her morality. One consideration which makes such a hypothesis untenable is that there is no class of any civilized country in which the morality of the women is higher than it is in the poorest classes. Another consideration is that there is a good deal of evidence to show that there is at least as large a proportion of immoral women among the moderately well to do, the well to do, and the rich as there is among those who are just able to make a decent living.

Low wages or other occupational influences as a leading cause of immorality have been disproved by prostitutes themselves to investigators time and again. Even as a subsidiary cause it is not used with any particular stress as an excuse. Want does not drive girls into wrongdoing. The lure of clothes, gayety, and no work is what beckons the weak, the vain, the foolish, unfortunate women.

Co-eds and Fussing.

Since college doors opened to women feminine influence on the education of the male has been accused of more or less deleterious effect. So that Maurice Dunne's warning to the Michigan men that "fussing" with co-eds causes college decay is not an exactly original theory. (Fussing is the student term for associating with girls.)

"A few years ago," says Hugo Munsterberg, "when one of the leading universities discussed the problem of opening its doors to women the decisive argument against it was that the college ought to remain a place of culture, and that culture for men means a virile culture. A man's college ought above all to be a school of manly character and a place of training in manly attitude toward problems of thought and life—not simply a school factory. This is the thing that has so far excluded women from those colleges which stand most earnestly for the cultural character of their studies—Harvard, Yale, Columbia, and Princeton."

The disturbance, however, seems due to sex attraction rather than to the cultural character of the studies. The Michigan protest would appear to indicate biological grounds against coeducation which no arbitrary opening of college doors to men and women has overcome. Testimony is so convincing that there is no doubt in some co-educational institutions harmful consequences result because of an influx of young women whose real object is not education so much as popularity, based on their ability to make themselves centers of masculine admiration. Naturally, distraction overtakes the young man who otherwise would be taking his studies seriously. Falling in love, becoming engaged, attending social functions, all of which involve a still deeper distraction to the average male student—financial adjustment and readjustment—usurp much of this most valuable time when all his energies should be spent in preparation. And it is claimed that these disturbing influences are not the intellectual leaders among the students but the social butterflies.

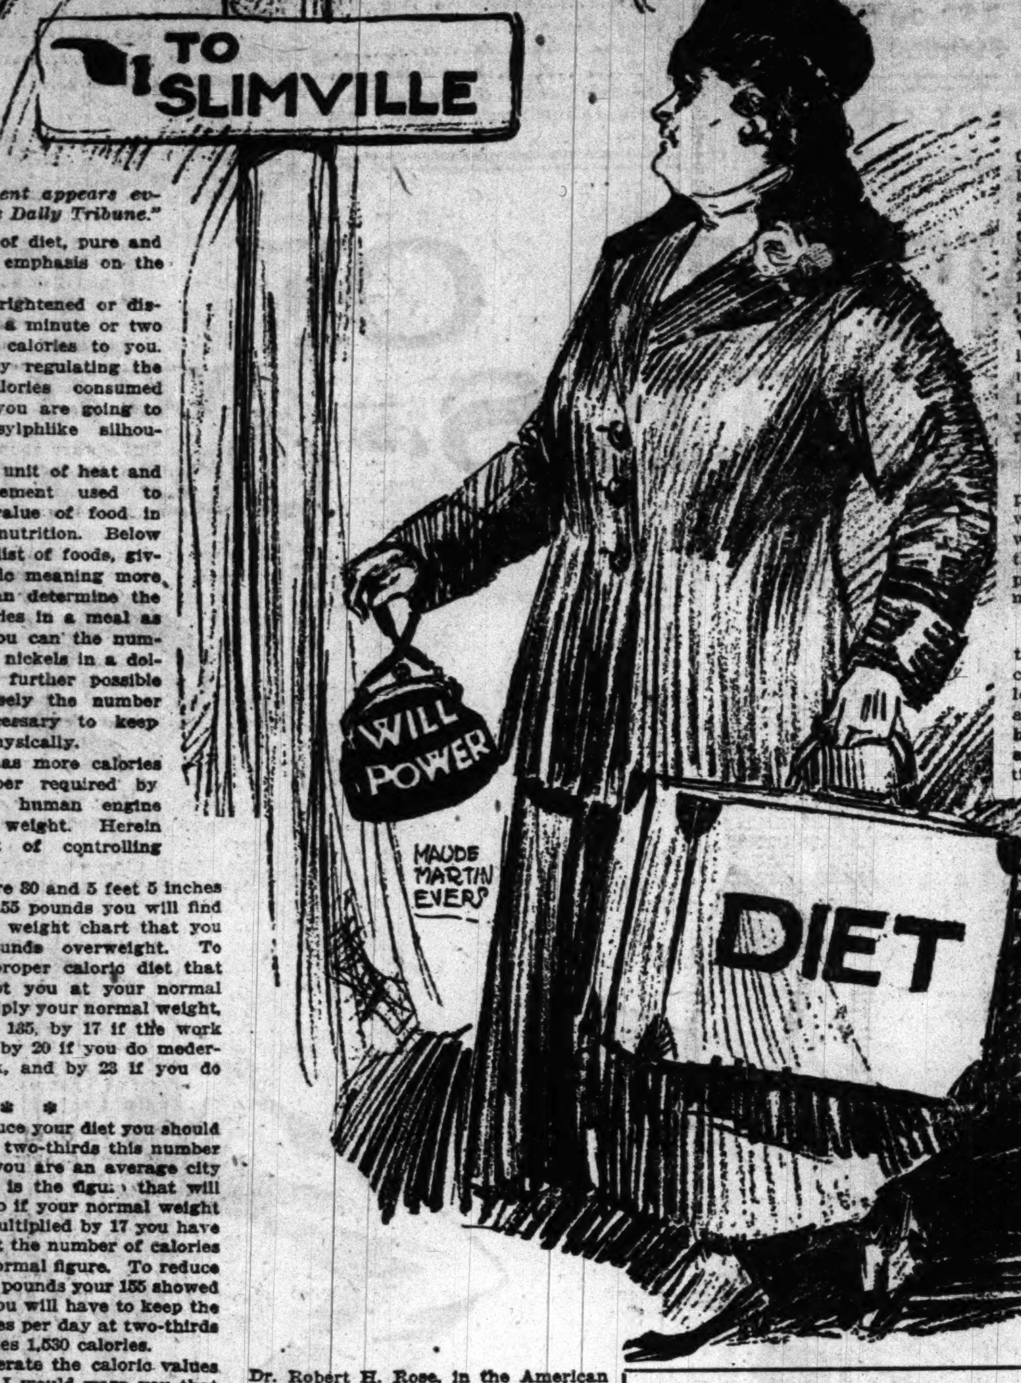
However, it is difficult to determine definitely whether co-eds are responsible for college failures without data from such universities as Yale, Harvard, and Princeton on how much of their time is given to the fair sex.

One conclusion we may draw freely is that the young son of the former governor of Illinois is not working to become the most popular man in his class.

ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

A SHORT AND EASY CUT TO WOMAN'S PARADISE — SLIMVILLE

By Antoinette Donnelly



This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

IT'S a matter of diet, pure and simple—with emphasis on the simple.

Don't get frightened or discouraged for a minute or two until I explain calories to you. Because it is by regulating the number of calories consumed each day that you are going to acquire that sylphlike silhouette.

A calorie is a unit of heat and energy measurement used to represent the value of food in the process of nutrition. Below you will find a list of foods, giving their calorific meaning more plainly. You can determine the number of calories in a meal as accurately as you can the number of dimes or nickels in a dollar. And it is further possible to estimate closely the number of calories necessary to keep you at par physically.

If your diet has more calories than the number required by your particular human engine you will gain weight. Herein lies the secret of controlling your weight.

Suppose you are 30 and 5 feet 5 inches tall and weigh 155 pounds you will find by studying the weight chart that you are twenty pounds overweight. To determine the proper caloric diet that would have kept you at your normal weight you multiply your normal weight, which would be 135, by 17 if the work you do is light, by 20 if you do moderately hard work, and by 23 if you do hard work.

In order to reduce your diet you should have only about two-thirds this number of calories. If you are an average city office worker 17 is the figure that will about fit you. So if your normal weight should be 135, multiplied by 17 you have 2,295 to represent the number of calories to keep you in normal figure. To reduce the twenty extra pounds your 155 showed you to possess you will have to keep the number of calories per day at two-thirds 2,295, which makes 1,530 calories.

Before I enumerate the caloric values of various foods I would warn you that to keep yourself in a healthy state at the time you are reducing your diet must be well balanced in proteins, carbohydrates, and fats.

Undoubtedly, within your experience you have seen cases where women have undertaken to reduce by leaving out fats and carbo-hydrates entirely, with the result that their appearance was anything but improved with the loss of their pounds. An old, worn out, haggard expression often results with this form of diet.

So, it's up to you, in this easy reduction game, to learn the first rules, which consist of a knowledge of what proteins, carbohydrates and fats really are and how to distribute them in your individual diet. Fats and carbohydrates [which are sugar and starches] supply the heat and energy for our body. So, you see, you can't eliminate them entirely and expect your engine to "coal along" on nothing.

The normal diet has from one-fourth to three-eighths protein; fats and carbohydrates make up the rest. Protein is a tissue builder, and is found abundantly in meat, eggs, milk, cheese and nuts. Cream, butter, olive oil, bacon, and fat meats contribute most freely to fats; carbohydrates are found in fruits, vegetables and grains.

HERE'S WHAT A WOMAN OUGHT TO WEIGH.

Dr. Robert H. Rose, in the American Magazine, in an article on this caloric theory, gives these rules for weight reduction and table of number of calories in ordinary helpings of various foods:

"For proteins take one-third of a pound of meat and two eggs daily. Most of your other foods will contain a small amount of protein, which will make up the balance of what you need.

"Select one highly carbohydrate article besides sugar for each meal. You may choose from bread, cereals, soup, macaroni, potato, corn, custard, ice cream, almonds, dried figs, dates, or raisins. Never let willful appetite or mistaken courtesy lead you to take a second helping of such starchy foods as rice, tapioca, macaroni, or potato.

"Limit your sugar to three teaspoons daily:

"Fats should be cut down to a minimum. From one and a half to three balls of butter—which is entirely fat—should be sufficient for this division of your diet. Use no cream, olive oil, bacon, or fat meat. Never eat cheese or nuts.

"If you obey the foregoing instructions you may appease your appetite by eating unsweetened fruits, salads without oil, and such vegetables as carrots, squash, and string beans without cream sauce. You will miss some of your sweet, rich old enemies for a while, but you will be surprised at the speed with which you will come to feel just as fond toward things which are good for you.

"Here is a simple table for weight reduction:

"Eat daily, first, one egg, one lamb chop, three ounces of lean meat, two slices of bread, one and a half balls of butter, three teaspoons of sugar, second, three articles of unsweetened fruit, such as an apple, a pear, and an orange; third, the equivalent of two tablespoons of any of the following: Lettuce, carrots, tomatoes, celery, lima beans, cauliflower, squash, boiled onions, turnips, asparagus, string beans, cabbage; take none of these baked or with cream sauce, butter, or nourishing dressing; fourth, one salad, excluding nuts, cheese, potatoes, or olive oil.

Answers to Inquiries.

MARIE: YES, COCOA BUTTER IS too heavy to use on your face. It would be better to use a good cold cream or skin food. By practicing this exercise faithfully every day you will be able to straighten your round shoulders: Stand erect, weight on the ball of the foot, with hands on the chest, fingers pointing horizontally toward each other, elbows on a level with the shoulders. With your eyes raised toward the ceiling, slowly bend your body forward at the hips, keeping your eyes fixed on the point that you have chosen. Do not let your elbows sag. Practice the exercise for fifteen minutes each day.

THIRTY: A WELL NOURISHED person at 30 should not increase in weight with advancing years. By weighing yourself often and governing the diet to keep the weight at the right point you can keep yourself young for many years to come.

MOTHER: THE APPEARANCE OF the skin reflects, as in a mirror, the condition of the inner organs. Just so long as these organs remain efficient and function normally the skin is healthy and looks well, but just as soon as they become defective or their functioning is disturbed the skin will show it and lose in good appearance. The alterations in the body during pregnancy cause disturbances in the functioning of the inner organs more readily and frequently than at any other period in a woman's life. The remedy lies entirely in extra care that a perfect functioning of the liver, the kidneys, and the bowels takes place.

MRS. S.: PLEASE SEND ME stamped, addressed envelope for the reducing literature. Did you forget it? Any number of women send this request in without the necessary stamp adjunct and undoubtedly are wondering why I never answered their letters.

JENNIE W.: MASSAGING THE hands each night with a good skin food is especially helpful in treating enlarged joints, not so much in actually reducing their size as in building up the other parts of the hand and so giving it a symmetrical appearance. I shall be glad to send you my formula for skin food if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

BETTY: THE HALF CLOSED CONdition of your eye may be caused by the muscles in your eyelid being weak. I suggest your consulting an eye specialist about it. A girl five feet two inches tall at 15 should weigh 117 pounds. You are twelve pounds under weight. You can build up your system by eating fat producing foods, getting plenty of fresh air, sleep and rest, and guarding against constipation. I shall be glad to send you my instructions on how I increased Helene Barnett's weight twenty pounds in five weeks if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

Real Love Stories

SHE CHANGED HER MIND.

LAST month marked my thirty-first birthday. When I was 21 I married a girl I dearly loved who was just 18. I had met her two years before when calling on her sister and for two years my love had grown with her.

As her father would not give his consent to our early marriage we had planned an elopement.

The evening before this was to take place she told me that she had changed her mind, that she did not love me and that our engagement was at an end. I was broken hearted and it seemed to me the end of the world had come. What I lived through that night as I battled with my thoughts no one will ever know. Little did I know I was to live through the same thing in later years.

I was holding a responsible position with a large company. I hated to give up a good position with a future, but decided I could never go on in that city without her. So I made up my mind to leave the next day for the west.

I wrote a letter of resignation and a number of farewell letters to friends and the next morning I was packed and ready to leave. I had said good-by to the woman where I had been making my home for the last three years and had started off down the street, my letters in my hand, ready to drop in the first mail box I should come to and caring little whether I lived or died.

Just as I got to the corner the landlady came to the door and called after me to come back to the telephone. I returned to the house and its was the surprise of my life to hear my sweetheart on the other end of the line telling me she had again changed her mind and that she did love me.

Well, the elopement took place that day and we were married. For seven years we were happy. During this time two babies came to increase our happiness a thousand fold. Then one day I came home to find her gone.

That was three years ago. Last year in the columns of the same paper which published our romantic elopement came the announcement of our divorce proceedings. These came after I had found her and she had told me she was sure she did not love me and never had and that she had lived with me for seven years pretending a love that she did not have. She could not go on even for the babies.

I have the children; she has become a trained nurse and we never see her. Neither of us has married again. But I often wonder at times when I get lonely what different life would have been for me had I been out of calling distance of my landlady that morning so long ago. Also I wonder if she may not change her mind again and if so what I will do?

If you were born this week you are

Lover of Ease.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

IF your birthday falls during the week beginning today you are still under the zodiacal influence of Aquarius, the water bearer. Your tribe is Dan, meaning a judge, and you possess the wonderful gift of reading human nature. Your planets are Uranus and Saturn, the former being the planet of the occult, the latter of science and religion, which is supposed to give great power of thought and executive ability.

As an artist, a marine architect, a sculptor, a lawyer, a musician, an inventor, or a scientist you may find success. The natural magnetism you possess gives you a remarkable power over people at times, and also makes friends for you wherever you go. It also stands you in good stead as a teacher, and, most remarkable of all, is the quieting influence you seem to exert over insane people.

One of your greatest difficulties is your inability to finish what you begin. You enter into some large operation requiring much thought, and because you do not use any forethought you make a sorry mess of things and therefore are doomed to bitter disappointment. This same quality makes it hard for you to "get there" in the business world, though with enough steady application you can make good.

There is no way quite equal to yours and you are apt to denounce the failures and mistakes of others, especially if they have in any way interfered with your plans. What you are compelled to do for others, you do with many a complaint, but you will work with the greatest of vim for your own pleasure and enjoyment.

You are attached to home and kin and have plenty of affection in your nature if it is but drawn out; in fact, you are not happy if long away from home ties. You are often the pet of the family, and you are not slow to take advantage of this state, though you seldom give any one reason to worry about you. Disappointments throw you into the depths of melancholy, and the family then lavishes sympathy upon you. Unless you are married unhappily, you have the faculty of making your home a veritable paradise. On the whole, you stand a chance of marrying happily with almost any sign.

All you Aquarius people stand in great fear of poverty, and are apt to count too much upon blue blood and aristocratic connections. You love excitement, parades, entertainment—anything where there is a crowd. Your desire to mingle with your fellow man in this way makes you a natural trader. Such a life leaves you little time to rest, but the only medicine you are apt to need is regularity in living and sleep. If you can but overcome your natural disinclination to work and cultivate application you can become one of the greatest powers in your sphere.

Your positive pole, Gemini, May 22-June 22, or Aries, March 22-April 20, would make congenial life partners. You would get along well with Sagittarius, Nov. 23-Dec. 22, and Pisces, Feb. 20-March 21, and a marriage with Leo, July 23-Aug. 23, or Cancer, June 23-July 22, might also prove a happy one. So, you see, for you Aquarius folk, the field of happiness possibilities is large.

Your colors are salmon pink, Nile green, and blue; birthstones, sapphire and turquoise. Your two most fortunate weeks are those beginning May 27 and Oct. 14.

Canceled by a Kiss.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 17 and I met a fellow four years my senior. He seemed to love me, and, to tell the truth, I also love him. He took me home and before the house he kissed me. We made a date, but because he kissed me I did not go. Is it proper for me to go with him if he asks me to go with him? M. K."

If you had no intention of keeping the date, you should not have agreed to do so, kiss or no kiss. But just remember, little lady, that a kiss does not necessarily mean that he loves you, so don't pin too much faith on that act. Give him to understand firmly but kindly that you do not permit such familiarities, and he will think all the more of you, mark my word.

The Plea of a Lonely Girl.

"Dear Miss Blake: Could you please tell me if there is a club or society in Chicago where lonesome people meet? I am a young lady 19 years old and lonely.

"I would like to get acquainted with some nice gentleman. I don't care much about dancing, so it seems I can never get a nice young man.

"I am a nice girl. I don't care for cabarets or anything of that sort. Hoping to see your answer in the paper real soon. B."

There is a club in Chicago called the "Lonesome club" and I should be glad to send you information regarding it if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

Her Friend Likes Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 20 and in love with a young man one year my senior. I also have a very dear girl friend, who also likes this man, and always invites him to different places where she will be. He always accepts. He told me he did not care much for her.

Now, Miss Blake, I would like very much to know how can I win him and make him love me as I do him? "V. I. R."

Why don't you do a little inviting on your own account? Personally, I don't think your girl friend will ever win out by this "rushing" method, but you might try to compete once in a while and at least show your friend that you, too, enjoyed his company. Maybe he's the bashful sort that needs a little encouraging. Usually I think a girl stands a far better chance to win a man's love if she does not appear too eager or too interested, but there are degrees and degrees that have to be estimated to suit the occasion.

Wants a Real Pert One.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a man between 40 and 60, a widower, and I am to set up keeping house this spring and need a wife. Do you know any one between 40 and 50, a real pert hard working fairly good looking woman? I will greatly thank you to let some lady know of my address. J. R. C."

Are you sure it is a wife you are looking for or a housekeeper? I feel sure I don't know any pert, hard working, fairly good looking woman to whom the proposition you have to offer would be alluring or flattering. Surely there must be some women in your community who would be willing to share her lot with you if you are thoroughly honest, industrious, and deserve the companionship of a woman of the qualities you demand.

She Can't Dance.

"Dear Miss Blake: My name is Helen and I am 17 years old. I have been going with a nice young man for three weeks. I think he is a real gentleman. He has invited me to go to several public dances. I cannot dance. Would you advise me to learn at a public dance?"

If your mother approves of your going to this public dance hall with the young man I have no objection. I take it that in the small town in which you live you probably have no other means of learning, and so I should suggest getting people to learn to dance and getting as much fun out of life dancing as possible. Dancing is not only a healthy recreation but it provides opportunity for people making acquaintances and friendships.

Few Drops When Corns Hurt, Pain Stops! Corns Lift Out

Don't let corns ache twice! Lift any corn or callus off with fingers—Here's magic!

No humbug! Any corn, whether hard, soft or between the toes, will loosen right up and lift out, without any pain.

This drug is called freezone and is a compound of ether discovered by a Cincinnati chemist.

Ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly upon any tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callus will loosen and can be lifted off with the fingers.

Freezone doesn't eat out the corns or calluses but shrivels them without any irritation.

Just think! No pain at all; no soreness or smarting when applying it or afterwards.

Women! Keep freezone on your dresser and apply a few drops whenever a corn begins aching. Pain stops, corn goes!

Genuine "Freezone" bears the name, Edward Wesley Co., Cincinnati, O.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Homes for Working Girls.

WHEN a girl is willing to give up some part of the limited time at her disposal to the solving of a problem for her fellow workers, that problem holds something more than a superficial interest for her and deserves consideration. Therefore, I am quoting the following letter, which is signed simply "A Business Girl":

"No one likes to be accused of being inconsistent, and the business girl especially raises strenuous objections when such an adjective is applied to her. But even the business girl, in spite of her indomitable spirit, has her season of inconsistency.

"The girls whose ambition takes them from the small industrial and agricultural centers to the large cities are all looking for comfortable and respectable lodgings that will hold for them at least the semblance of a home.

"Independence has always seemed to me the most striking characteristic of the girl in business. In many cases her independence has come to her through necessity; but that does not make her spirit any more servile or dependent, yet when a girl comes to the city from the country or a small town and makes inquiry regarding a home or boarding house for girl workers, the only institutions that fill the bill are charitable organizations, or homes so heavily endowed that even though the girls pay a nominal sum for their room and board, they know that they are the recipients of a well meaning charity, but charity nevertheless.

"With few exceptions the girls who come alone to the city do not want charity, nor anything that smacks of charity. What they want is a respectable place to lodge and board and they are willing and anxious to pay full value for what they get.

"The endowed homes and organizations we have for girls who are temporarily in need of a refuge are a great charity and do an endless amount of good, but the business women of every large city ought to organize for the purpose of establishing a hotel or temporary lodging house on a purely business basis—run on a coöperative plan, if possible—so that the girls from outside who are unfamiliar with the city can be sure of a safe place to live for a reasonable sum.

"An organization of this kind, conceived and planned by business women, built by business women, and run as a coöperative business by business women, would be a haven to the girls of other towns who from necessity or choice find themselves alone in an unfamiliar city.

"The girl who has the courage and independence to earn her own living has nothing in common with charity except to give when she can. But because she is a stranger in the city and therefore is ignorant of the location of the respectable boarding houses, and because she cannot afford to stop at the first class hotels, she is forced to accept charity of a sort.

"It seems to me that the business women who are already established in the city, with homes of their own or comfortable living quarters in a good hotel or boarding house, are responsible by their lethargy for thrusting an unwelcome charity upon the newcomers.

"The welfare of the stranger, when that stranger belongs to her own class, should be one of the first concerns of the successful woman in business, and it is inconsistent with her naturally independent spirit that she leave to club women, society women, and other philanthropists a work that is undoubtedly her own and which she can accomplish to the greatest advantage of all working women."

As set forth by "a business girl," the above plan seems feasible. It is interesting and looks well on paper, but it seems to me that the idea is impracticable, as the minimum charge for such a service would be prohibitive to the majority of working girls.

Institutions such as the Y. W. C. A. and other endowed homes for working girls that are found in most of our cities could not be run without help from outside and this work is accomplished on as economical a basis as possible.

How I Won My Mate.

How did you win the love of your mate? What measures, if any, did you adopt? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Won My Mate." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Carrying Home the Groceries.

I won my mate by marketing at the stores that sell cheaper for cash, but will not deliver. Herbert, who called on me often, lived a few doors from me, and sometimes met me carrying home the groceries. He asked why I carried them, and when I told him economy was the reason he felt that his small income need not be an obstacle to our marriage. L. E.

Outstayed All Callers.

By simply wearing out the other friends and admirers. We had been friends since childhood, but I began to care for Jane when she blossomed into a pretty young woman.

A doctor was her most constant caller, so I always outstayed him when we both called. He was too busy to come regularly, so I made the most of my chance, as all my evenings were free.

Finally I was ill, and the doctor called on me instead of Jane, and his skill saved my life. I was so grateful to him that I offered to give up my chances with Jane if he wanted her. He only laughed and said he never had been my "hated rival," and had suspected all the time that he knew what Jane thought. So I asked Jane and she said I was the man.

Now the doctor is our family physician, and I have promised him our daughter for a wife, as she loves him dearly, although she is only 3. R. K.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING·HAND

Music for Orchestra.

"I HAVE often thought of writing to the Helping Hand, but the little help I could give seemed so small. But now I write to say that I have a good deal of orchestra music to give away. I think there is enough to be divided between at least three orchestras, and I would be glad to give it to any one who can use it. I also have three or four different magazines of a year each that I should be happy to give. I should like to tell some one who may not know the method of making round steak tender. Pound or chop flour into it, instead of rolling it in the flour. I find it makes it tender. Mrs. O. S. C."

While music for an orchestra may not be so much in demand as that for the piano, I am sure some one would like to get it, and I am happy to print this notice. The magazines also will be welcome, and any one who wishes the address of this correspondent may have it by writing for it. The hint about the steak is worth bearing in mind.

Housewife Speaks Her Mind.

"Your talk on stinginess or economy was most timely. The government food expert, Dr. Wiley, some years ago made the statement that American housewives were the most extravagant of all housewives. The waste of one average American family would feed five families. Really, I think it is about time clubwomen investigated that department of women's own profession—homemaking. It is rather amusing that as soon as women were well launched toward revolutionizing men's affairs men should display a consuming interest in the conduct of the home and an evident desire to interest women in her own business. Can any one tell us why women marry, knowing that they must keep house and taking absolutely no interest in it? Homemaking is a complicated business, requiring for success every qualification that makes a man successful. I believe in equal rights—sometimes I feel almost like throwing a bomb or two—but I think women need some sort of a jolt to wake them out of their beautiful dream and show them in how many instances they have failed as partners. Please excuse me for raving. E. R. P."

Our correspondent is right in her estimate of the waste in many homes, but I believe some of the Cornerites have found new and more excellent ways and now and then they let us have the benefit of the welcome economies they have discovered. They cannot come too often.

Copies of Poems.

"Some time ago you kindly published in the Corner my request for poetry and offer of the same. I want to thank you so much for this, although my thanks are late. At present I have received three letters and each correspondent asked for the words of the two pieces of poetry I offered. I have written to each one this morning, letting them know the pieces they ask for are coming as soon as I can finish copying them and also expressing my thanks for those I received. Please send me just as many requests as you like for the poems I offered. Although it will take some time to copy each piece, I gladly do it and send them at my earliest convenience. Since I wrote to you I have married and am in a little house of my own, so you see I have rather more work to do than when I was single. But I am always glad to do everything I can to help any one who asks of me. "Mrs. M. W. H."

This letter shows both the appreciative and the helpful spirit we like to note in the Corner. I am glad Mrs. M. W. H. has received such good treatment and I am personally grateful to her for her desire to be of assistance to others. I am sure all the Cornerites join with me in wishing her much happiness in the little house of her own to which she has recently gone.

Magazines to Give.

"I received the book of crochet yokes and also the lace patterns; thanks very much. I have some magazines I would like to send to any one wishing for them. I think the Corner is doing wonderful work. M. K."

I trust that M. K. wrote to the person sending the articles she mentions, as well as to me. On the chance that she did not I print her letter as well as her offer of magazines. Those who wish to get in touch with her about these may write to me for her address.

Crochet Thread Wanted.

Two appeals framed in practically the same words and from the same place, although with different signatures, have been received and I print them together.

"I would be more than grateful for some crochet thread. I am willing to crochet a piece of lace for some crochet thread. Mrs. H. O. T."

"I would be more than grateful for some crochet thread, also embroidery pieces. Mrs. B. W."

I trust both these desires may be gratified and that I may receive requests for the addresses of the writers.

Confederate Camp in Chicago.

"Can you tell me if there is a Confederate camp located in Chicago? Is it social? I am the daughter of a Confederate soldier and would like to join the Daughters of the Confederacy. "Mrs. E. J. C."

Your repetition of a query which has been sent in by two other correspondents would show that the matter is one of more than local interest. We therefore submit it to those who are qualified to reply intelligently. It is highly probable that the organization referred to has a chapter here.

Weight Reducing Contest.

Did you try my method for reducing as outlined for Mrs. Eva Lane, who lost thirty-six pounds in six weeks? How much did you lose? Did you stick to it or not? I want to hear your experiences, whether you were successful or not in reducing. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Your chance for earning the dollar will be as good if you slumped on the reducing job as if you stuck until you got rid of pounds of flesh. Your name will not be printed. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "The Chicago Tribune."

Getting Quite Desperate.

I am a young woman, 5 feet 3 inches tall, and a few months ago weighed 160 pounds. I never enjoyed myself because I was so fat and clumsy. I could not dance because after a few steps I was winded, and my heart would beat like a trip hammer. I was getting quite desperate when I read your instructions. I proceeded to follow them, and in six weeks lost thirty-two pounds. O, but it was a relief to get rid of that load of flesh! Now I can dance, play games, and enjoy myself to the fullest extent. My heart never bothers me, and, best of all, I no longer have a craving for candy and pastries. M. M.

Complimented on Her Looks.

Following your series of reduction by diet and exercise, I lost forty pounds in three months. I look much younger and feel much better, and am encouraged because others now make admiring compliments regarding my appearance. Nothing spurs one on to do things so much as to know you look well and that other people know you do. I am truly thinkful for the help your lessons have been and still are to me and will cheerfully recommend them to any one. Mrs. J. K.

Hard Battle at First.

I lost twenty-one and three-quarter pounds in about seven weeks. I am 5 feet 7½ inches tall, weighed 184¾ pounds, and am now down to 163 pounds. I am 37 years old.

To my notion of the system, think it all lies with yourself. Make up your mind to do it and the battle is won, though I do admit it is a hard battle at first. You must sacrifice. I had the worst trouble of all leaving butter, olive oil, and sugar alone. I use scarcely any of these, weigh myself each week on the same scales, and with same apparel. Have been 163 pounds for the last six weeks, so feel I am not going to take the weight on again, and shall always be careful.

I feel that when I succeeded in reducing, any one can, as mine was good, solid flesh, and am most grateful to you.

Starting tomorrow, I am going after thirteen more pounds. I want to be 150. I've had a short rest and will get down to rules once more.

I feel and look a whole lot better, though all my friends think I was not too stout at 184¾; but it was on me and I didn't like it, and I'm glad it's gone, and with my care it won't come back. D. B.

CURED AND CANNED FISH.

THE herring has almost as much a place in the history and humor of England as the figure of John Bull himself. There is even an ancient oath which has the expression, "as the herring backbone doth lie in the midst of the fish." But it is the red or smoked herring around which humor has clung lovingly, and to this day the red herring is pictured on postcards with humorous legends or verses.

The herring of Sardinia has become famous as the sardine, and the herring of Germany appears with many names, according to its curing, the "rollmops" being especially one of the thirst inspiring salad materials.

The little boneless herring has become a more or less famous cosmopolitan appetizer and when broken up fine, heated up in butter, and seasoning of onion and pepper, makes a "tasty" sandwich filling.

In our markets there are other small smoked fish besides the herring, less thirst inspiring, and some that do not fill the house with their odor, while they are ready for a quick little luncheon or other meal, according to need. The whitefish and its relatives are excellent smoked and are none too well known. This year the smoked whitefish is unusually high, as are the fresh whitefish, so that what we get when we ask for smoked whitefish is likely to be the small chub or the large Canadian tullibee, which is cooked in the same way, when fresh and cured, as the whitefish.

There is a great deal being done all over the world to teach, or really to reteach, people to know fish and to know how to use them. This knowledge is being presented in both scientific and attractively picturesque forms, and this column would be behind the times if it did not recognize this fact. Governments of nations, states, and even of cities are engaged in promoting intelligence about this always abundant food, though there may be lack of some one kind, because people demand this in excessive amounts, as in the case of lobsters, which used to be bought for 6 cents apiece on the Atlantic coast, at a time easily within my memory.

It is hard to find many recipes for cooking the commonest fish. American cook books give us next to none at all for smoked fish; even the new pamphlets indorsed by the governments of states, nations, and cities, and English cook books, rarely have more than one recipe for red herring, although it is even used in the kedgeree.

Smoked Whitefish and Tullibee.

Wipe the fish well, place under the broiler, and broil a small fish for five minutes on one side and then five on the other. Take up, remove skin, take off fillets carefully—that is, take off each side, leaving the bone—butter these, and serve with lemon juice.

Since the fish is as moist as need be, much more so than that of herring, it is not necessary to butter the outside before heating it. It may be flaked and used variously as a hot appetizer and flaked and well buttered and seasoned with a bit of cayenne, or it may be surrounded with a border of boiled rice and hard boiled egg yolk riced over the whole for a kedgeree.

Brandade.

About four years ago, the thing that excited my attention most in the restaurants of Marseilles, France, was a white mound of something looking like whipped cream, piled on a plate. This seemed to be the favorite dish there with which to begin a luncheon. It was of salt codfish or "morue." And here is the recipe I worked out for it from a cook book of that old city and other French sources:

Take one pound of perfectly soaked and boiled codfish middle, four to twelve tablespoons of olive oil (boiled cream or milk may be used instead), two tablespoons of cream if oil is used, one clove of garlic, the juice of one lemon, a bit of cayenne pepper, and other seasoning to taste. Cut the thoroughly soaked codfish in many pieces, and put it on to poach (this means to simmer gently, not boil,) for fifteen minutes after it comes to boiling point. Drain, take out bones, put in a mortar or wooden bowl, and pound until shredded into the finest of little silver fibres. Heat the garlic in a little of the oil and remove before adding the fish. A finely chopped onion may be just sweated in this oil as well, but the garlic is necessary if we would have the real provençale flavor. Put the fish in the hot oil and stir it constantly over the fire, adding the rest of the oil little by little, alternately with the cream. Stir and beat until it stands up like whipped cream.

The French either salt their "morue" or codfish less than we, or soak it longer, so that when ready to cook it is soft and white. For this reason probably we could make a better brandade of fresh codfish, salting to taste, than with the salt, but I have never done it this way. The inexperienced will undoubtedly get a better blend by using boiled cream instead of oil, especially if she has not a mortar in which to pound the codfish to the finest shreds. This makes a pretty thing for a party luncheon.

Canned Shad.

As the shad season approaches bargains in canned shad are likely to be offered. Of course, this is much off from the fresh as to flavor and daintiness, but it can be made acceptable by taking it out of the can carefully, sprinkling over it fine slices of little new onions and squeezing lemon juice over it, with chopped parsley and other seasonings. Let the shad so prepared stand for an hour or considerably more to marinate, then put on a tin plate and heat up under the broiler. Serve with plain or prepared butters and quarters of lemon.

Herring Appetizers.

Brush herring cut into small strips with lemon juice and melted butter and heat thoroughly. Garnish with parsley and lemon.

Smoked Fish Salad.

Heat up two or three smoked fish on each side, on a stove cover or iron plate over the gas, take off the skins, cut off the heads, split fish, remove the bones, and cut into small square pieces. Mix with these a bit of hashed onion, a chopped hard boiled egg or two, a cold potato cut in small pieces, and a freshly cooked beet cut up small and mixed with the other ingredients or sliced and served as a garnish. Add a little chopped parsley if liked and serve with a French or cooked dressing. Daintily made this is not so bad; coarsely put together it is coarse food.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth" now and then—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver, and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.—Adv.

COCOANUT OIL FINE FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last every one in the family for months.—Adv.

Suitors' Mistakes Contest.

Did you make a mistake that cost you the one you wanted to win more than any other? Was it an unkind remark, a selfish deed, a mean or careless one, an error or tendency of your past come to light? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Mistake That Cost Me the One I Wanted Most to Win." Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune."

How Carl Lost Out.

Carl, being sadly smitten with Lena, tried all kinds of ways to ingratiate himself with her. He invited her to the movies one night and he had but 20 cents of his own at this historic moment. When they came out of the theater the rain was simply pouring, there were no street cars, and it was a long way to Lena's home. Needless to state, she hadn't a dry thread on her when they reached home; no more had he. Also, needless to state, he did not receive an invitation to call again.

Warned in Time.

A number of years ago I believed myself to be in love with a pretty and seemingly in every way adorable young girl who lived in a small town where I was then employed. I had paid her considerable attention and had, in fact, made up my mind to ask her to marry me, but was inexpressibly shocked and disappointed in her when going to call unawares one day, as I walked up the path, I overheard her make several cutting and unkind remarks to her mother. This one discovery was enough. I knew then, and have realized more fully since, that she was not the "one and only" girl for me. I turned away without having made the call, never to go back, much, I should judge, to the wonderment of the girl.

BAD MANNERS IN A CROWD.

WE Americans are so busy, so constantly rushing somewhere, that we are not always considerate of those about us. There are several ways in which this thoughtlessness manifests itself, but one of the most noticeable is our habit of pushing ahead in a crowd unmindful of the people near us.

Our destination or purpose is so important that we make any means justify the end, and we are apt to use means unpleasant to others. For instance, if we are about to go up to the fourth floor in one of the large shops and are waiting for the elevator there is a great deal of unnecessary jostling and elbowing. A well bred person will always await her turn and will try not to stand in another person's way as well as to refrain from shoving some one ahead of her.

The much cartooned and ridiculed bargain counter is another place where rudeness is an all too present element. Football tackling, pushing, and fighting forward are well enough in their places, but one can hardly consider them appropriate in a shop or in a gathering of well bred women.

Moreover, it is really ineffective, because in the natural law and order of things every bump and push we give will be returned to us some time with interest and probably when we are least desirous or expectant of it. And just as surely every crumb of civility and kindness cast out upon the turbulent waters of life will come back to us to help prove that "virtue is its own reward."

Use "Gets-It," Lift Corn Right Out

Shrivels, Loosens—and It's Gone!

"Just like taking the lid off—that's how easy you can lift a corn off your toe after it has been treated with the wonderful discovery, 'Gets-It.'" Hunt the wide world over and you'll find nothing so magic, simple and easy as "Gets-It." You folks who have wrapped your toes in bandages to look like bundles, who have used salves that turned your toes raw and sore, and used plasters that would shift from their place and never "get" the corn, and who have dug and picked at your corns with knives and scissors, and perhaps made them bleed—just quit these old and painful ways and try "Gets-It" just once. You can put 2 or 3 drops on, and it dries at once. There's nothing to stick. You can put your shoe and stocking right on again. The pain is all gone. Then the corn dies a painless, shriveling death; it loosens from your toe, and off it comes. "Gets-It" is the biggest selling corn remedy in the world today. There's none other as good.

"Gets-It" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.—Advertisement.

Jane had been much interested in the preparations her young aunt had been making all week for the big charity ball. She asked her father so many questions about this affair that at last he said they would play they were going to the ball. Jane was all excitement while mother dressed her for the ball. Then she was whirled off in the make believe auto, of which daddy was the chauffeur, to the make believe ballroom. They had a regular ball. Jane's car was called, she tripped out as big as you please, climbed up in the big arm chair, and nestled down among the cushions for the ride home. "All right, baby's it's sleepy time now; come and kiss Daddy good night," said her father, and to his great surprise the little lady threw her head up and said "Huh, ladies don't kiss their chauffeurs good night." Daddy was squelched. M. G.

Sonny was spending the afternoon with his grandpa and was having a delightful time writing letters which grandpa read aloud, putting in many thrills to each letter. Sonny was watching grandpa with great pleasure as he read on and on. Knowing that it was time for Sonny to return home, he finished the last letter given him by saying, "and, grandpa, as it is dark out, will you please walk half way home with me? Good-by, Sonny." Sonny looked at his grandpa with some wonder and surprise and then said, "Gee, grandpa, I made a mistake that time. I meant all the way home." I. R. J.

Junior, who had attained the mature age of 5, objected strenuously to being kissed or "made over" in any way. One day when he was at my house I said: "Junior, if you will give auntie a big hug and kiss I'll get you some cookies." The exchange was made to the mutual satisfaction of both. A few days later he came into the kitchen, and, looking hungrily at the cookie jar, said: "Auntie, how about a good old huggin'?" E. C.

Margaret's great desire was to own a bull pup, but her father had repeatedly assured her that they were too expensive. She accompanied her mother one day on a bargain hunting expedition, and a bright thought struck her. That evening she asked her father again to buy her a bull pup.

"No, daughter," answered her father, "I've already told you they cost too much."

"But, father," said Margaret, "can't you get me one with a flaw in it?" M. M. K.

A charity affair occupied much of mother's time. Little daughter bewailed that fact by saying, "Mamma, I only see you at the tops and bottoms of these days." C.

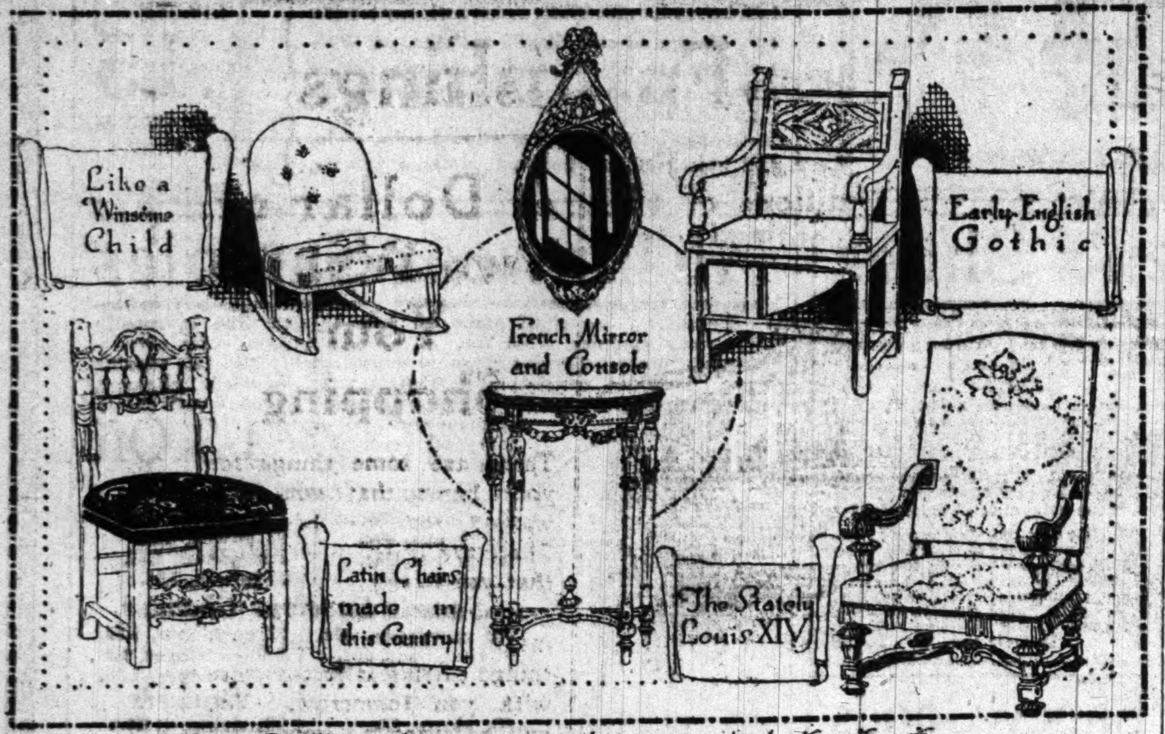
The Home Harmonious

New Fashions in Furniture

Anita de Campi



Beautiful Chairs that are among this years output

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

At certain specified seasons furniture manufacturers come together from all over the country to what they call their market, which is held in Grand Rapids, Mich., the biggest furniture manufacturing center in the country. All of the goods are shown that are to be on sale by the retail dealers during the coming season.

There is a good deal of secrecy about it. No one is admitted excepting furniture buyers. The public is strictly excluded. By the time the exhibition is over the best sellers are pretty well determined. The coming styles are absolutely decided upon and post-mortems are pronounced.

It has been my privilege to attend the most important of these exhibitions, and this enables me to tell readers, at least in a general way, about the trend of good taste.

Last week I mentioned that red mahogany was going out. Now I must emphatically state, as the small boy says, "she has went!" Not one bit of it is to be seen in either the finest or the most mediocre displays. Isn't it remarkable that a once popular wood finish could so completely vanish from the market? Mahogany there is in abundance, but it is all brown, not red.

Where shall I begin in describing to you the beautiful things I have seen? Suppose we take it in the course of procedure. The first thing that met my gaze in stepping out of the elevator on a visit to one of the most expensive and finest exhibits of chairs and tables was a smart little bedroom set—two rockers, a comber, a bench, a stool, and a chaise longue—in a simplified Louis XVI. style, all upholstered in pink and white taffeta.

The pink stripes were overlaid with narrow stripes of pink satin and the white stripes were trimmed down their center with a tiny floral brocade. The bodies were enameled in old ivory; nothing daintier could be imagined. When my guide asked me how I liked it I could only say it was "as sweet as a box of French bonbons," and so forthwith they named it, if you please, the Bonbon set.

A pretty feature of this set was that it was finished across the back of each chair with a little bib shaped lambrequin trimmed with fringe. The chair seats, too, were finished with fringe, and the whole was designed to be used in conjunction with inside window draperies of the same striped taffeta.

There is today a spirit of restlessness among women in regard to their home furnishing. Formerly it was the advice of every one to buy lifetime furniture. This is no longer so. Many women clear out their homes from season to season and love to surround themselves with entirely new creations. Perhaps it is because homes themselves are less permanent, due to the advent of flats in place of houses.

Certain it is that the furniture that seems adequate in one apartment is impossible in another, and in many instances it is not at all unwise to call in the second hand man or in some other manner sell out and begin over again. With the splendid assortment of new things that are to be had at reasonable prices it would be foolish to live in discontentment among ill assorted decorative factors.

The feeling that one is a "freak" in out of date clothes has now extended itself to the less intimately personal features of habitual surroundings.

Walnut is by all odds the winning wood. There is a wild rage for lacquer, some of which is good, and if it isn't very good it is "horrid." The cheaper sort looks as though some one had dropped a soft, stringy piece of molasses candy on it, some one else had stepped on it, and some one else had smeared paint over it. And as to the colors in the cheaper pieces, they are hideous. It is my earnest advice not to risk buying lacquer unless the finest is obtainable.

Some period furnishings have increased in favor, some have declined. The Louis XIV., XV., and XVI. are among the former. Georgian (Heppelwhite, Chippendale, Adam, and Sheraton) still hold their own, but the Jacobean, the Queen Anne, and the William and Mary are slightly waning.

The furniture makers are fairly frenzied over Italian furniture, all of the highest priced exhibits include many pieces of Italian, which means that within six months this type will be popularized by less exclusive manufacturers, who are quick to imitate good things in inexpensive materials. The Italian chair shown at the lower left in the sketch is in Italian walnut, finished in what is called the Della Robbia finish; that is, in different delicate colors all rubbed into the wood. The seat is upholstered in a faded blue and bronze taupe velvet. Notwithstanding its structural solidity this chair gives the impression of unusual delicacy.

Charming in its purity of style is the medieval chair at the upper right. It is finished in silvery gray. This chair is one piece of the complete furnishings for a Gothic dining room. The double curved line at the angles where the front legs join the apron under the seat claims attention. The rounding of these corners, carefully worked in by hand, is repeated at the height of the table and console legs, and it is this that gives the whole set its unusual air of distinction. Pieces of this sort are admired but not readily accepted. They will remain exclusive, and perhaps it is in their favor that they will never be commercialized.

The little bedroom rocker, on the other hand, is utterly lax; it has an ivory enameled frame and is softly upholstered in light colored faille. Several widely different sorts of exhibits have hit upon the same type of chair, spontaneously, as it were. Almost too wide a popularity is predicted for it. Every woman who sees it opens her heart to it as she would to a winsome child. So before the year is over it will probably be "spoiled to death."

Stately is the Louis XIV. chair at the lower right; it is an elaborate and expensive piece suitable only in quarters spacious and stately. The frame is in walnut and the upholstery in an antique shade of crimson damask.

Here I am almost at the end of my space and I have barely touched upon this season's novelties. The range is wide and many of the innovations are so unusual that they really deserve to be divided into distinct articles.

We have room left today for just a brief mention of hall furniture. Never has there been such a wide variety of consoles and mirrors. The mirror and table shown here is but one of at least a hundred styles, all more or less attractive. Both pieces are made of composition, finished in colors—a variety of colors, but all so tenderly grayed that it is only at a second glance that you exclaim, "Why, it is in color."

It would not do to finish without mention of the revival of marble tops. Several of the most admirable consoles are of walnut with malachite tops.

So much for today; it will take a month of Sundays to cover the field of delightful novelties that are soon to be offered for every nook and corner of the room. If there is some particular you wish to know about, write to me. More presently.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

MRS. G. M. B.: I believe that soft rose colored sunfast would be prettier with your gray figured wall paper than figured chintz would be. Velveteen of the same color would make nice chair cushions.

MRS. H. B. G.: Divide the wall space into panels by means of a narrow wood molding mitered at the corners. After this is done and adjusted to the wall paint over all. Sometimes the insides of the panels thus formed are painted a few shades lighter than the outside.

J. G. C.: I thank you for your compliments in regard to my work in this department. Your praise is doubly appreciated because I recognize your authority in this matter. I should be glad to hear from you any time and work out any suggestion you make which I am sure will be interesting to readers.

* *

MRS. J. V. W.: The pictures you sent me of furniture you wish to dispose of are extremely attractive. If readers inquire about such things I shall be glad to refer them to you.

MISS MARCIA M.: A lovely accident of color can be had by using turquoise blue. Be careful not to overdo it. It might be in a lamp shade or in the wax candles or in a cushion embroidered in silver. If your lamp is small, a gate-leg table would be the best choice.

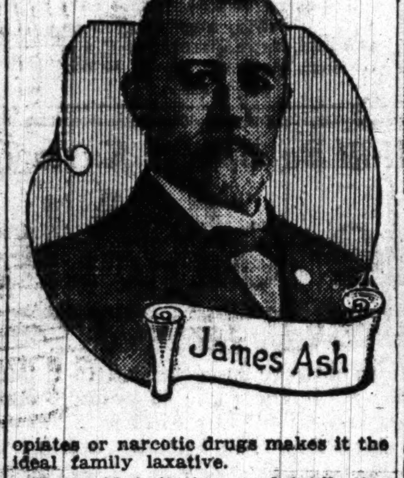
Simple Laxative Remedy Best for Constipation

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin Gave Satisfaction When Nothing Else Would.



Nearly every one, at one time or another, suffers from constipation, or inactive bowels, and one of the few conclusions upon which the doctors agree is that regularity of the bowels is an essential to good health.

In the family medicine chest of most well-ordered households will be found one or more of the various remedies recommended for the relief of constipation. In the majority of homes today the combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is recognized as the standard laxative. Druggists everywhere report a constantly increasing demand for this splendid remedy which is sold for fifty cents a bottle.

Mr. James Ash, 102 Green St., Cumberland, Md., wrote to Dr. Caldwell that he found Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin the most effective remedy for constipation he had ever used and that he always keeps a bottle of it on hand for use when necessary.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a mild laxative, and does not gripe or strain, but acts gently and brings relief in an easy, natural manner. Its freedom from opiates or narcotic drugs makes it the ideal family laxative.

To avoid imitations and ineffective substitutes be sure you get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. See that a facsimile of Dr. Caldwell's signature and his portrait appear on the yellow carton in which the bottle is packed. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 455 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois, for whom this advertisement is published.

Childhood Ambition Contest.

"Did you ever have a childhood ambition—a humorous one? Of course you did. And what you did wasn't anything like what you dreamed. Tell us what your great ambition was—and then tell us how far short you fell. Do it in 250 words, on one side of the paper, and address manuscripts to Childhood Ambition Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune. For each story printed $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned.

Well, He's a Cook.

My childhood ambition was to cook for the king. I came from a small European country, where my parents kept a hotel. When there was any doubt about my whereabouts I could generally be found in the kitchen, gazing in admiration at the cook. It seemed to me the grandest profession in the world, only I wanted to cook for the greatest in the land. That was a great many years ago. Well, I am cooking, all right, but not for a king, and I want to say right here that if kings are any harder to please than the ham actors I am cooking for now, I don't want a job in the throne room. D. L.

Where He Explored.

As I recall it my earliest ambition was to be an explorer—to sail unknown seas, climb unheard of mountains, track the vast bare spaces, and, crashing through the wilderness, tie the good old flag to the north pole and let 'er wave.

Up to the seventeenth year I was loyal to this ambition, but about this time Cupid began to do a little exploring on his own account and selected me as an expeiment station; I fell deeply and madly in love with Minnie, the barber's daughter. The old man was a shrewd old duck and persuaded me to enter his employ.

"For," said he, "you'll have a chance at the wilderness in my long haired customers and in the bald headed ones you can cove the vast bare spaces."

Wanting Minnie, I accepted her father's offer, although the barber business proved for a month or two a harrowing experience, but at last by short cuts I reached the road to contentment. It was here I found that ample opportunity was afforded me for serving my fellow men and I decided to let the N. P. take care of itself.

At the end of two years I made my great discovery for the cure of dandruff and today, while I sit placidly at home, my picture travels via bottle to all parts of the globe. J. O. I.

To Strum the Lyre.

When I was a lad my greatest ambition was to write poetry. And write it I did. Pretty fair poetry, too. At least I thought so then. I could string it off by the yard. No girl in our school ever had a birthday without being presented with a bit of verse on a highly decorated card. Even yet I often have a sneaky liking to write poetry on the sly, and today I am head mover on a piano wagon with a gang of fellows who, if they ever found a sample of my poetry, would chase me out of Chi. J. C. K.

Longed to Be Thrasher.

I was the "middle" one in a family of seven, and the only boy. My father was a minister and I wore the second hand clothes of every boy in our parish by turns. Consequently from that fact and the additional affliction of never having enough to eat except once a year, the day after the pound social, I early decided that the world would have to deny itself my services as spiritual adviser. But after I had spent a few summer vacations on a farm, my life work opened up before me; I would be the head of a thrashing crew, who owned the steaming, puffing monster that roared about the country.

The chief inducement to this vocation was "the eats" that were served to those husky, hungry fellows. It convinced me that no other means of livelihood held such pleasing and lasting possibilities of happiness. I can smell those platters of fried chicken now and taste those hot waffles, and the fresh apple pies with thick yellow cream to pour over. Who wouldn't be a thrasher?

But one day along came a philanthropic parishioner of my "dad's" and offered me the college wherewithal. I became addicted to zoölogy, and later became a teacher of this subject. And, although I must confess ignorance of the most familiar part of a thrashing machine, I can tell the names of all the levers, valves, and cylinders in the smallest bug that ever buzzed, and I still adore fried chicken and waffles; so who shall say that my childhood dreams were entirely shattered? E. L. R.

My Most Embarrassing Moment.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on the subject "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life Was When——." Address Embarrassing Moments Editor, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Write on only one side of the paper. No manuscripts will be returned.

The Cheerless Cup.

I was on a transcontinental passenger train in the west. It was a hot day and thirst sent me the entire length of the coach to fill my cup with ice water.

While returning with the filled cup in my hand the car gave a sudden lurch around a curve. I was thrown against one of the seats and emptied my ice water on the head of a sleeping man. His remarks as he was aroused from his nap added to the embarrassment that I already felt. Cora A. R.

Papa's Basement Gift.

My husband had a gas lamp which had been given to him some time ago and which he kept in the basement, intending some day to make an electric lamp of it. Christmas came and he made the lamp and presented it to his friend. His friend made a great fuss about the expense my husband had gone to. Imagine our embarrassment when our son, 8 years old, said: "O, that is nothing, Mr. Tom. Papa made that out of old junk he had in the basement." R. B. R.

Careless Were His Manners.

I have a Polish friend who had been planning on buying some land in Michigan. I am in the real estate business and so he asked me to go with him to advise him on the land. He is a "shabby" sort of a fellow and doesn't care how he dresses or how he eats at the table. We went into a high class Chinese restaurant and we both ordered a "T bone" steak. When my friend's steak came he picked it up with both hands and started to eat away. The place was crowded. I poked him and told him to use his knife and fork and he said, "It's paid for." H. G.

Before and After Marriage.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on marriage disillusions. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." Write on only one side of the paper.

On the Wedding Trip.

Before my marriage I never had to carry a package when Ted was around. On our wedding trip to visit his folks we had three suit cases, Ted carrying two, I the extra one. At the depot a friend gave us a phonograph with a large horn. Hubby, all excited for fear we would miss the train, took his two suit cases, told me to bring the rest, and ran for the train. After some quick figuring, I took the suit case in one hand, the phonograph in the other, put the big horn on my head, and hurried after him. A. J. R.

Enough of Housework.

We lived in different towns and after we were engaged he often wrote about different things he did to help his mother. I reasoned if he was good to help his mother he will help his wife. Once he wrote that he beat rugs for his mother and said: "You shall never beat a rug; I shall see to that." Now when I ask help and tell him about those letters he laughs and says: "I got enough of housework before I married." E. J.

GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR WITH 'DANDERINE'

Get a 25 Cent Bottle! Freshen Your Scalp! Stop Falling Hair! Remove Dandruff! Grow Lots of Wavy, Glossy, Beautiful Hair—You Can!

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you can not have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?—Advertisement.

FEBRUARY 4, 1917.

Nijinski, Fanny Brice, Charlotte the Ice Skater, and Captain A. C. Anson

By Percy Hammond

IT is bruited about that last Sunday at the performance of the Ballet Russe we did not know the divine Nijinsky when we saw him. Persons familiar with his behavior upon the stage say that under another name he danced the rôle of the archer in "Cleopatre" and that thus misled we looked him over with a tolerance involving no enthusiasm. When, however, identified thoroughly upon the playbill, he appeared in "La Princesse Enchantee," we reacted rapturously to the marvelous rhythms in which, it is said, he embodies his soul; and we applauded him heartily.

Controversy follows the Ballet Russe as inevitably as the street car does the pie wagon. But usually the question is, "Is it art?" and not "Is it Nijinsky?" Asked to settle the argument for a perplexed æsthete (a visiting New Yorker), this column decides that the virile archer was not Nijinsky, but that Nijinsky was the simpering, asexual, somewhat sallow and slimy figure in "La Princesse Enchantee" whose flying shanks, like large, inflated bladders, performed such lyric prodigies of aviation. It was also Nijinsky who impersonated the Faun as something like a slug, adding to the enchanting faience of Debussy's sultry, drowsy, summer afternoon music (and his own subtle arrangement of attitudes), a fetid study of an amorous protoplasm. Or, to employ the figure of a sister barbarian, he was like a kodak picture sewed into an otherwise lovely and imaginative bit of tapestry.

Brice.

ANOTHER exhibition of this photographic dancing is given in the Follies by Miss Fanny Brice, who undertakes an interpretation of "The Death of the Swan," one of the Pavlowa favorites. Unlike Pavlowa, Miss Brice does not idealize the unfortunate anatoid, but in the Nijinsky manner reproduces it to the ultimate details of oary feet, and extended neck. She believes, with Heine, that the swan, like the soul of the poet, by the dull world is ill understood, and she proceeds to translate it. Explaining some of the capricious minutiæ of her interpretation, Miss Brice says that her subject is a Yiddish swan, the most interesting, she infers, in all natatorial ornithology. Her swan is no stately-sailing, snowy-plumaged bird, murmuring the sweet strains of its own dirge, but, being out of water, a sick and unhappy fowl in the throes of dissolution. It should be observed by those who like footnotes to their dancing. The mournful "Squawk! Squawk!" of the death pangs, the despairing flop of the wings, and other mortuary items of the incident are as eloquent of the end of things as M. Nijinsky's gestures are of their beginning.

Charlotte.

IF you do not take your dancing too seriously you will enjoy yourself during the final hour of the spectacle at the Auditorium when Charlotte skates. This performance is not so beautiful, perhaps, nor so significant as that of the pilgrims from Muscovy, but at least it is prettier. Charlotte is a symmetrical young woman of ample dimensions, who has received from nature the gift of grace, and who has developed the gift through an uncommon medium. Proficient at ballet dancing, she adds to the charms of that art the swirl and swiftness of steel upon ice, though one of the beauties of her performance is that her skates are so little in evidence that they are almost secret. No toe dancing save Pavlowa's is so fluent as this ice-dancing of Charlotte's, which at one instant can be the staccato rhythm of the ballerina and the next the darting or sonorous movement of a bird. Beside Charlotte, ordinary dancers are mere inertia. She has no dramatic values. Her face is one which signifies only youth, sweetness, composure, and self-confidence, and the true artist's pleasure in her art. She is a Dane, reared in Germany, she is 18, and her sur-name is Oelschagel.

Anson.

CAPT. ANSON and his comely progeny are decorating the program at the Majestic in a little comedy of family life written by J. P. Lardner and his brothers, James and William, infant sons of Ring W. Lardner of this journal and themselves frequent contributors to its columns. The sketch is ideal for the captain's purposes, combining as it does wit, humor, melody, dancing, and a soupcon of the sentiment which is said to cling around the memory of historic personages. Aided by the cinema, Capt. Anson declaims a poem, in which there is tactful comparison of the baseball heroes of today with those of another generation, the portraits including those of Fred Pfeffer, Mike Kelly, Mr. Comiskey, Mr. Sunday, and other famous aboriginals. The Misses Anson are large, blonde, and affable ladies of the Valkyr type, and they are not incapable of the filial songs and conversations assigned to them by the Messrs. Lardner. "They are the product of the days when meat was cheap," says their parent, as he modestly regards their efforts. The captain's conduct is distinguished by an experienced ease, and he has the faculty of assuming a dignified intimacy with his audience. This is the Ansons' debut in what is known as "big time" variety. Vaudeville is full of acts not nearly so good by authors not nearly so mature.

Values

Rights of Harrison Grey Fiske in thirty-nine plays were sold yesterday to the Vitagraph company for $500 by a referee in bankruptcy. The rights in fourteen of them were appraised a year ago at $4,450, while Mr. Fiske's interest in the twenty-five others was listed as of no value.

The work in which Mr. Fiske's rights had an appraised valuation were: "Becky Sharp," $1,000; "Mrs. Bumpstead Leigh," $1,000; "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," $500; "The Regent's Diamond," $500; "Septimus," $250; "A Bit of Old Chelsea," $200; "Little Italy," $200; "Queen of the Liars," $200; "Der Gruna Kakadoo," $100; "The New Marriage," $100; "Sappho and Phaon," $100; "Dolly," $100; "Hannele," $100, and "The Gay Life," $100.

News of the Theaters

The former Mrs. Norman Hapgood will make her debut as an actress with O. P. Heggie in G. K. Chesterton's "Magic" when it is produced this month.

Miss Blanche Bates' new play by Paul M. Potter is to be called "Eleven P. M."

Miss Janet Beecher withdrew from the cast of "Fair and Warmer" Saturday and Miss Helen Gill resumed the rôle of the frivolous wife.

In an address to New York high school girls last week on "The Earmarks of a Gentlewoman" Miss Elsie Ferguson mentioned simplicity in dress and demeanor as a chief feminine charm.

Augustus Thomas says that the Frohman company is prevented from producing at least three promising comedies because all the actors fitted to play in them are engaged in the movies.

In Honolulu W. Somerset Maugham is finishing a play for American production called "Love in a Cottage." Miss Chrystal Herne, Fritz Williams, John Flood, and Miss Rose Coghlan are among those rehearsing "Our Betters," another play by Mr. Maugham, a bitter treatment of title hunting Americans.

"Seven Chances," a Belasco enterprise, will be the summer entertainment at the Cort, succeeding "Good Gracious, Annabelle!" which will have a spring engagement at that theater.

Miss Laura Hope Crews and not Miss Kathlene McDonnell will have the leading part in the revival of "The Great Divide."

Silvio Hein, who made a fortune writing popular music for Miss Marie Cahill, has given some of it back through his eagerness to help celebrate the death of Shakespeare. His late revival of "The Merry Wives of Windsor," with Thomas A. Wise as Falstaff, cost him $35,000.

Mr. Wise and William Courtenay will be the stars of a play by Lee Wilson Dodd called "Pals First."

Messrs. Ziegfeld and Dillingham desire it to be known that neither "The Century Girl" nor any of its successors at the Century theater, New York, will be exhibited in any other city. Tentative announcement has been made that "The Century Girl", will be the summer show at the Illinois.

Concerning some of the prominent figures in "Turn to the Right," it may be said that John L. Golden, the author, wrote "Poor Butterfly"; that Miss Helen Collier runs a moving picture house in Germantown, Pa.; that Joseph Byron Totten used to be a director with the Essanay, and that James H. Huntley played at Wood's museum here in 1866.

The Playhouse announces the coming of Miss Nora Bayes on March 11 for a series of vaudeville concerts. Miss Bayes is an outcast from organized variety, since she refused not long ago to give an extra performance in Philadelphia. She has been appearing independently at the Eltinge theater, New York.

Miss Anglin and "The Lioness" will reach the Blackstone next week.

Including the three plays by Lord Dunsany, "The Gods of the Mountain," "The Golden Doom," and "King Argimenes and the Unknown Warrior," eleven items are included in the repertory of Stuart Walker's Portmanteau, which opens at the Playhouse tomorrow. At least three plays will be given at each performance, with one and sometimes two of the Dunsany pieces on the bill each evening. The first matinée, on Monday, Feb. 5, will be for the members of the Drama league, although tickets may be had by others. Stuart Walker himself wrote six of the plays.

The Drama League Disinters Some Plays of Yesteryear

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—The lads who write variously of the drama hereabouts were stirred to their artistic, not to mention their physical, depths last week by the performance of seven excerpts of American drama given under the auspices of the Drama league.

It was an afternoon devoted to plays which a committee had decided were characteristic of certain periods in the history of the native theater—beginning with a duologue from Royall Tyler's "The Contrast," generally credited with being the first American play, and ending with an act from Clyde Fitch's "The Girl with the Green Eyes," which was one of that playwright's last, though not one of his best efforts. Between these two were scenes from William Dunlap's "André," Anna Cora Mowatt's "Fashion," Frank Murdock's "Davy Crockett," Charles Hoyt's "A Texas Steer," and James A. Herne's "Shore Acres."

Not only were these plays reproduced from their original scripts, and according to their author's stage directions, so far as these have been preserved, but the scenery of the day and the cruder lighting effects were suggested where they were not duplicated. In the old John street theater, where "The Contrast" was first seen, for instance, the stage was lighted by barrel hoop chandeliers stuck with candles. For the performance here given the barrel hoops were redone in metal and the candles were electric instead of tallow. But otherwise the scene, devised by Robert Edmond Jones, who is by way of becoming the American Urban as a stage director, were exact.

The matinee proved a surprisingly entertaining affair, and the critical lads, as I say, were rather put to it to do themselves and their profession justice. Some accepted the affair as a challenge to their knowledge of American drama and were forced to rather frank confessions that they knew little of it. Others arose in column formation to protest that if it were the object of the Drama league to prove that the native dramatist had always been quite as naïve as he is today the result was a triumph. Some insisted upon believing the committee in charge had selected these particular plays as samples of the best American drama and others were pleased to record it as their opinion that it was chosen from the worst.

However, now that controversy has cleared the air and argument has exercised all the best of the adjectives, we may look calmly at that curiously interesting performance. Whatever else it may have proved, it proved good entertainment, and it has served to arouse more interest in American drama, good and bad, than any single revival given within the last dozen years. A lot of the boys know now that Royall Tyler's name was not Taylor, as even the program had it, and that when William Dunlap wrote "André" he was drawing $24 a week as both joint director and treasurer of the Park theater. That's something.

"The Contrast" was written by Tyler after he had seen a performance of "The School for Scandal." Playwriting impressed him, as it has many another amateur, as being a fairly simple form of expression, so he went home and wrote one. The excerpt acted included the account of Jonathan, the forerunner of a long line of Yankee comedians, of his first visit to the playhouse, and, while the quality of this bit indicated that whatever Mr. Tyler's future might have been, he was fully justified in sticking to politics rather than to the drama, it was archaically interesting.

"André" was done in blank verse and the scene shown was one in which the spy is notified by his young American friend that his hour is come. His parting with his wife and friends is stilted, but still effective melodrama, and there was no disposition on the part of the audience to laugh at it. It is interesting to note that Dunlap, whose father was loyal to George of England rather than to George of America, and whose sympathies were strongly with André, was forced by the patriots who saw his play to modify its tone and alter one whole scene before he was permitted to go on with it.

Mrs. Mowatt's "Fashion" was the surprise of the afternoon. Here is a delightful old thing, a society satire making caustic sport of those parvenu Americans who were then aping foreign manners and customs; its heroine an ambitious milliner, now the wife of a

Lines, with Figures, on the Low Cost of Good Music in Chicago

By Frederick Donaghey.

GOOD music is to be had at small cost to the consumer in Chicago, if he know how to buy.

It is my belief that the Saturday-night problem of the Orchestra, the achievement of a complete subscription for all save the top-tier seats, might be solved if the eager crowds at the Pop series were made aware how low the rate runs when a seat is bought for the season of twenty-eight concerts. That there are more patrons than places in the series has been a manifestation in the intermission of each of the six Pops so far given: at last Thursday night's, the crowd was so eager to get a good place in the line to buy for the 22d instant that at least fifty men and women on the main floor rushed out in the barely-perceptible waits of the "American Negro" suite.

Doing so, they annoyed everybody else on the floor. I was eager to observe the effect of Mr. Otterström's interesting transcription of Negro-jubilee tunes, all reasonably familiar in survival from the eighteen-eighties, on an audience theoretically more responsive to light, definite melodies than the "regulars" of the Friday-Saturday concerts; but I suspect that less attention was paid to this composition than to anything else so far played in the season's Pops.

Those who did not possess the nerve to get up and go out were palpably not only desirous of going, but also resentful of those who permitted anxiety for the next concert to overcome their sincere-enough regard for good-manners. Not even the vital, shuffly march-tune, "Trabel On!" got so much as a "hand" from the Pop audience: the sedate Friday-afternoon congregation was so taken with this movement at the first hearing of the suite, that it was strongly disposed to insist on a repetition.

Questions of Cost

A casual suggestion were that the relief of the pressure on a series of ten Pops resides in giving a second series, or else of giving more concerts in the one series. Examined in the light of the counting-room and of the physical resources of the Orchestra, this is not easily practical. I believe that the receipts of a sold-out Pop "house" are just equal to the cost of the concert: this being due, however, to the fact that the musicians are engaged by the season for a minimum number of performances at a rate per-man which carries through all additional performances. The popular notion that these Pops are financed or guaranteed or underwritten by the City Club and the Civic Music Association is erroneous: the series is a venture of the Orchestral Association, itself; and the bookkeeping is the concern of the association, and of no other body. The two other organizations were active in the first season of the experiment: they gave time and work to the distribution of tickets, the advertising of the series, and the establishing of branch-offices. The venture is now handled entirely by the managers for the Orchestra.

One important and material objection to a second series of Pops or an extension of the established series from ten to (say) twenty is that they would, in some degree, be supported at the expense of the Saturday-night series. One of the objects of the Pop venture was to create a clientele which would, in the logical course of such things, become Saturday subscribers. There are available no figures to indicate to what extent the scheme has worked to-date; but it is certain that the Saturdays are not yet a solid subscription, like the Fridays, when all the seats save those in the gallery are sold by the season at a rate. This rate is the same as for the Saturday subscription, and runs as low as forty-three cents a concert for the series of twenty-eight. This is at twelve dollars for the season. The seats at this price are, of course, upstairs: the same that cost twenty-five cents at the Pops. But they are in hand: there is no necessity for standing in line and taking a chance on location.

As to Price Per Seat

With the Saturday-night series fully subscribed, an amplification of the venture with the Pops would, perhaps, be desirable as an activity looking forward, however far, to a day when a third "regular" series might be undertaken. The ideal of any great orchestra in an American city is to give profitably—which, in such matters, is an easy euphemism for without loss—as many parallel series of concerts as will permit of proper rehearsing. Thus, the Chicago ideal is, no doubt, to give the "regular" weekly program three times rather than twice. The greater number of concerts profitably possible in the city, the less time is lost and money spent in traveling.

As to the Pops, they represent, I think, the greatest value in well-played good music to be had anywhere in the world: the main-floor seats are sold for fifty, thirty-five, and twenty-five cents, the balcony for fifty and twenty-five, and the gallery for fifteen! It is for those who pay to say whether the difference between the cost of the best seat, fifty cents, at a Pop and the best in the Saturday-night series, a dollar-twenty-five at the subscription-rate, is offset by the necessity of rustling for a place in the intermission. That difference becomes less as the scale descends and the seats ascend, until it is a matter of eighteen cents for the rear division of the balcony.

Opera as Opposition

The theory is put forward by some observers that the Saturday series of the Orchestra would long ago have been solidly subscribed had it not been for the opposition set up ten weeks in each year by the half-price performances at the Opera: these performances, too, are on subscription for those who care to pay for the ten in advance, and scale as low as twenty-five cents for the top galleries. It is said that, when the Opera was first projected in 1910, a tentative agreement was made by the directors that the schedule would be arranged to avoid conflict with the Orchestra arrangement. It is not likely that the half-price Saturday nights of the Opera will be abandoned now: I understand that they represented a small but definite measure of profit in the season just ended, and served the purpose, besides, of absorbing some of the obligations of the management to singers engaged by the performance.

News of the Singing Somebodies

GALLI-CURCI, the notable newcomer in the recent season of opera, is to be heard as a concert-singer for the first time in Chicago on Wednesday night, the 14th instant, in Orchestra hall: she will contribute to the entertainment by the glee club of the Association of Commerce. Her formal program, as submitted by the management, includes but one selection from any of the operas in which she was heard in the Auditorium—the "Caro Nome," from "Rigoletto," in which she made her sensational Chicago debut on November 18. The Queen of Night's famous aria in "The Magic Flute" and the "Chanson du Mysoli" from Felicien David's "The Pearl of Brazil" are other bravura implements listed for her use on this occasion, when she will take part with the club, itself, in the Bach-Gounod "Ave Maria."

A striking proof of the hold Galli-Curci has taken on Chicago is to be had from a study of the sale of tickets for the concert. A paragraph not exceeding three lines in THE TRIBUNE stated that she had been engaged as soloist: this some days before the end of the opera season. Inquiries by mail as to seats, the price, etc., poured in on the management of the hall and the glee club. The latter's patrons were notified by a mailed memorandum that they would be given first choice of seats: within forty-eight hours, every seat was taken, and checks representing orders for three times the capacity of the hall were returned. It is freely predicted by those who have made the merchandising of singers and musicians a business through years that she will by January 1, 1918, be an "attraction" as great at least as John McCormack: his manager is Galli-Curci's, also.

The Irish tenor was listed months ago to sing with the orchestra at its Friday-Saturday concerts of January 26-27. As the time drew near, word was sent out that he would not fill the engagement because of his physician's having forbidden him to sing two days in succession, and another soloist was hired and a new program made up. Evidently, the prohibition was not binding on McCormack; for he sang Friday afternoon and last night in Boston with the orchestra named for that community.

Caruso, from all accounts, is more popular than ever in New York as an outcome of the Metropolitan Opera's revival for him of Donizetti's comic opera called "The Elixir of Love." That the management did not long ago hit upon this work as a relief from the eternal necessity of using "I Pagliacci" in bills employing him as the sole star is surprising; for "The Elixir" is to tenors of his type what the composer's "Lucia" is to the coloraturas among sopranos. This neglected piece of Donizetti's, by-the-way, was the "copy" for Gilbert and Sullivan's early work, "The Sorcerer," which De Wolf Hopper revived in Chicago two years ago. Sullivan rather than Gilbert was the parodist in this case: the latter worked out a comic tale of his own, without much regard for the libretto of the Italian piece; whereas Sullivan's score is a clever, witty, pertinent burlesque of Donizetti's florid, empty, detached music.

Geraldine Farrar, also, seems to be in new and great vogue in New York: the Metropolitan is packed whenever she sings since her return at the end of her Chicago season. They have put on a revival of comic opera for her, too: Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro," one of the three greatest works in the form. The two others are Verdi's "Falstaff" and Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

MATTERS of MUSIC

The Orchestra

THE eighteenth program of the Friday-Saturday series of concerts, this week, does not include a soloist. Mr. Stock's arrangement is made up of the overture to Mozart's "The Impresario" ["Der Schauspieldirektor"], Brahms' Variations on a Theme by Haydn [Opus 56a], Strauss' set of "fantastic variations" called "Don Quixote" [these have not been played by the Orchestra since 1910-11], and, after the intermission, Dvorák's fifth symphony, "From the New World."

The Orchestra will play on Tuesday afternoon, at 4:15, in Mandel hall, University of Chicago, a program made up of Georg Schumann's "Liebesfrühling" overture, Dvorák's fifth symphony, Otterström's "American Negro" suite, and Liszt's twelfth Hungarian rhapsody.

The seventh Pop will be given on the night of the 22d instant.

City Club's Chamber-Concerts

The fourth of the concerts of chamber-music by the Shostac Quartet will be given on Tuesday night, at 8 o'clock, in the Lounge of the City Club's quarters, 315 Plymouth place. Walter Spry, pianist, will take part in the program, which will include compositions by Mozart, Mendelssohn, Schumann, Rubenstein, and Glazounow-Liadow. The price of admission to these concerts is fifteen cents.

News-Items About Music

The Ballet Russe, with Nijinsky and Flora Revalles in leadership, are to give a second Chicago performance: they will return a week from next Thursday to the Grand Opera-House.

Agnes Leist Beebe, soprano, and Ludwig Schmidt, violinist, are to give a recital next Sunday in The Playhouse. Alfred Hilles Bergen, the baritone, is to return there on March 18 for another recital. He is credited with having made a definite success when heard last Sunday.

Glenn Dillard Gunn's orchestra, the American Symphony, will resume its series of Sunday-afternoon concerts in the Grand Opera-House on the 25th: it will by then have completed the Civic Music Association-TRIBUNE series in the public schools. Parnell Egan—a Celt despite his name—will be the soloist. He is a Chicagoan, a tenor, and an envious if admiring observer of the high regard in which John McCormack is held by bankers, Rembrandt brokers, and dealers in sound investment-securities.

Tunes heard in the Kentucky mountains are to form the program of a recital on the 16th in Central Music Hall, by Loraine Wyman, who will sing them in arrangements made by Howard Brockway, who will play them.

Maud Powell, the violinist, is scheduled for an Orchestra hall recital on Sunday afternoon, the 18th, of "popular and familiar" things.

Among other recitals listed are those of Vera Kaplun Aronson, pianist, on the 11th, in the Blackstone, and Heniot Levy, on the 25th, also in the Blackstone. The former is as yet unknown here: she is a Russian, and is coming with a new piece by Glazounow—a theme-and-variations composition, taught to her by Glazounow, himself, she says.

rich ex-peddler, who seeks to marry her daughter to a French count, only to learn through honest Adam Trueman, the great-great-grandfather of "The Man from Home," and he who is now "Fixing Sister," that the foreign person is really an ex-cook and valet and that his French is really quite as execrable as it sounds. Edgar Allen Poe was one of the dramatic critics who couldn't make up his mind whether "Fashion" was a good play or not, though he saw it fifty times.

The "Davy Crockett" scene brought the entertainment to within the memory of many of those present, the elder Mayo having played it as late as the early '90s. The scene given was that old curtain thriller in which Davy, thrusting "the strong right arm of a backwoodsman" across the door of his cabin, saves himself and Eleanor from the wolves, while the stage hands howl dismally without.

Charles Hoyt was represented by an act from "A Texas Steer," with Tim Murphy playing his original rôle of Maverick Brander. Murphy is still sufficiently vigorous to howl his way realistically through the part of Bill Bones in "Treasure Island," and "A Texas Steer" is always good farce. The scene was the familiar incident in which the new congressman from Texas meets Dixie Style in Washington and kisses her in memory of the time her mother was kissed by Daniel Webster, only to learn a moment later that he is being blackmailed for $100. "Tell me one thing, my dear: Did it cost Dan'l Webster $100 to kiss your mother?"

A part of the first act of "Shore Acres" revived memories of the well loved Herne. It included, too, that familiar speech of Nathan'l's beginning: "You don't remember father, do you, Martin?" followed by a long recital of how mother had sat on the highest point of Shore Acres farm and waited for the father to come home after he had been lost at sea. It was this speech that, one night in Boston, when the weather was oppressive and he was tired, Mr. Herne failed to speak. Without waiting for the cue that Martin was supposed to pass him by allowing that he did not, in fact, remember much about father, Herne went right on. "Wal," he said, "it's a damned long story and we'll cut it out tonight."

"The Girl with the Green Eyes" is, of course, familiar to any community in which a stock company has been resident for any length of time. It is an observant study in feminine psychology, a knowledge of which guaranteed this playwright his preëminence in the field of the native drawing room drama. Or so much of a drawing room drama as we ever have been able to produce. It was the third act, which ends with Jinny's threat to kill herself if the husband she has goaded past endurance by her unreasoning jealousy makes good his threat to leave the house. A crudely built scene is this, and one of which most amateurs would be ashamed today, seeing that it is entirely dependent on the letter episode in which the husband calmly pens the most incriminating evidence against himself, reading it boldly aloud as he writes, and then leaves it for Jinny to read as an excuse for her later emotional outburst. But it still is an effective scene, and this audience reacted to it quite readily. It will always be a significant excerpt, too, because of the part it played in the unhappy death of Clara Bloodgood. It was the suggestion given her in playing this scene, and that of Jinny's attempted suicide which follows, that caused Mrs. Bloodgood, when her own troubles piled heavily upon her, to take her own life.

Arthur Hopkins had supervision of the staging of these plays, and there were many volunteers among the players. Mary Shaw played the heroine in "Fashion," James Lackaye the Herne part in "Shore Acres," Lowell Sherman was the husband in the Fitch play, and Margaret Lawrence the Jinny.

Way back in the Hippodrome mountains, which raise their snow capped peaks just the other side of Sixth avenue, they have built a small Niagara for Annette Kellermann. The diving Venus has succeeded the dancing marvel, Anna Pavlowa. Annette Kellermann (herself), the bills read, to make it plain that here is to be seen no mere shadowed Venus such as romps across the screen, naked and free, as you might say, in "A Daughter of the Gods," but the shapely mermaid herself.

We may be wrong, and probably we are, but it seemed to us the other night that the fair Annette is not eating and growing thin, but rather swimming and growing—no, it might start a suit for libel if we said fat—but at least a few pounds heavier than she used to be. The view from where we sat seemed to suggest an added breadth unnoticed before. It may have been the spangled tights she is wearing this season. Anyway she is still a beautiful figure, and when she climbs up to a jutting peak of those same Hippodrome mountains and then carelessly throws herself into a glass inclosed pond below she is as nearly our exact notion of what a diving Venus should be as any we can picture offhand.

There are other mermaids of the common or Sixth avenue variety, and these slide down the waterfall on their small tummies by way of filling in the time between Annette's dives, and below there are contortionistic frogs and lizards, alligators, and such to interest you if they can. It is a picturesque spectacle.

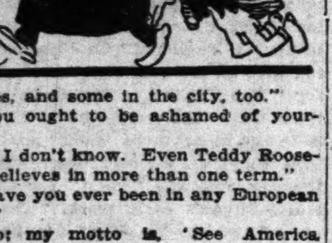
"It will mean ten years for me."

"Is this the first time you've been in trouble?"

"Say, do I look like an amateur?"

"Don't get funny. I suppose you've been in every jail in the country."



"Yes, and some in the city, too."

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself."

"O, I don't know. Even Teddy Roosevelt believes in more than one term."

"Have you ever been in any European jail?"

"No; my motto is, 'See America first.'"

"What's your name?"

"My right name is Reginald Vandergould von Sleesinghausen, but in the underworld I'm known as Handsome Harry."

"Handsome Harry? With that map!"

"Say, the map of Europe looks much worse than mine does."

"You seem to take your arrest easy."

"Taking things easy is my profession."

"Don't you feel bad about going back to jail?"

"No. Why should I? Nowadays the jails are more comfortable than our best hotels, and everything is free. The warden of Sing Sing treats the prisoners better than friends."

"How?"

"He doesn't try to borrow money from them."

Right off the Reel

By Mae Tinee.

PARAMOUNT GETS ARBUCKLE.

FILMDOM'S famous fat man, Roscoe Arbuckle, has just signed up a contract in which he will begin the production of two reel comedies for the Paramount Pictures corporation about March 1. Just exactly what compensation he is to receive has not been divulged, but it is said that he has proved himself worth his weight in laughs.

Madge Kennedy, who has starred in such farces as "Twin Beds," "Fair and Warmer," "Over Night," and "Little Miss Brown," has become a Goldwyn Pictures star. This will mark her debut in pictures and it is said the Goldwyn people are enthusiastic about the way in which she "registers." This new company has certainly accumulated a constellation of stars. Let's see —Maxine Elliott, Mae Marsh, Jane Cowl, and more coming.

New York film circles are quite excited over the rumor that little Mary Pickford has purchased the estate at Marblehead Neck, Mass., where she produced "The Pride of the Clan." "Sky High" is the name of the beautiful place, and, like the name, so we hear, is the price.

Louise Huff is soon to co-star with House Peters.

Universal wishes to announce that Zoe Ray, the child actress, is to be featured in a serial of one act photoplays especially intended for women and children.

Because he is one of those "realistic" actors, William Russell is now tenderly caring for a swollen jaw and a cut and sprained hand. It was his "bit" to stop a runaway horse. Ah, well, it is all in a day's work, they say.

Louise Lovely has lost her dog.

Charles Chaplin, whose middle name is Spencer, wears 6½ shoes—when not working.

A sad young English boy, with a story of three starving sisters and no job, has been working havoc on the sympathies and pocketbooks of the Los Angeles film folk. Those to respond to his pleas for help were Bessie Love, Mabel Normand, Fay Tincher, and heaven knows how many more. When learning that these warm hearted people were going straight to his home to provide for the three starving sisters, the sad English boy disappeared and all the addresses he had given turned out to be vacant lots.

Jack Pickford has been reading the works of Horace Greeley and declares one of his sayings to be the greatest in the world. It is the memorable advice to the young of the Atlantic coast line that they put as much of the United States as possible between themselves and Europe.

The S. O. S. call for 200 flies to be used in the Metro serial, "The Great Secret," was revealed to Dan Hogan, property man, who is one of those whom nothing daunts. When asked where he got them, however, he merely shook his head and replied that was his great secret, and though the flies did a lot of buzzing they didn't give him away.

Max Linder declares that our high prices are the limit. At a recent party he declares he was charged $98 for food and that he had to pay $10 for the privilege of paying the 98. Why not make it an even 100, Max?

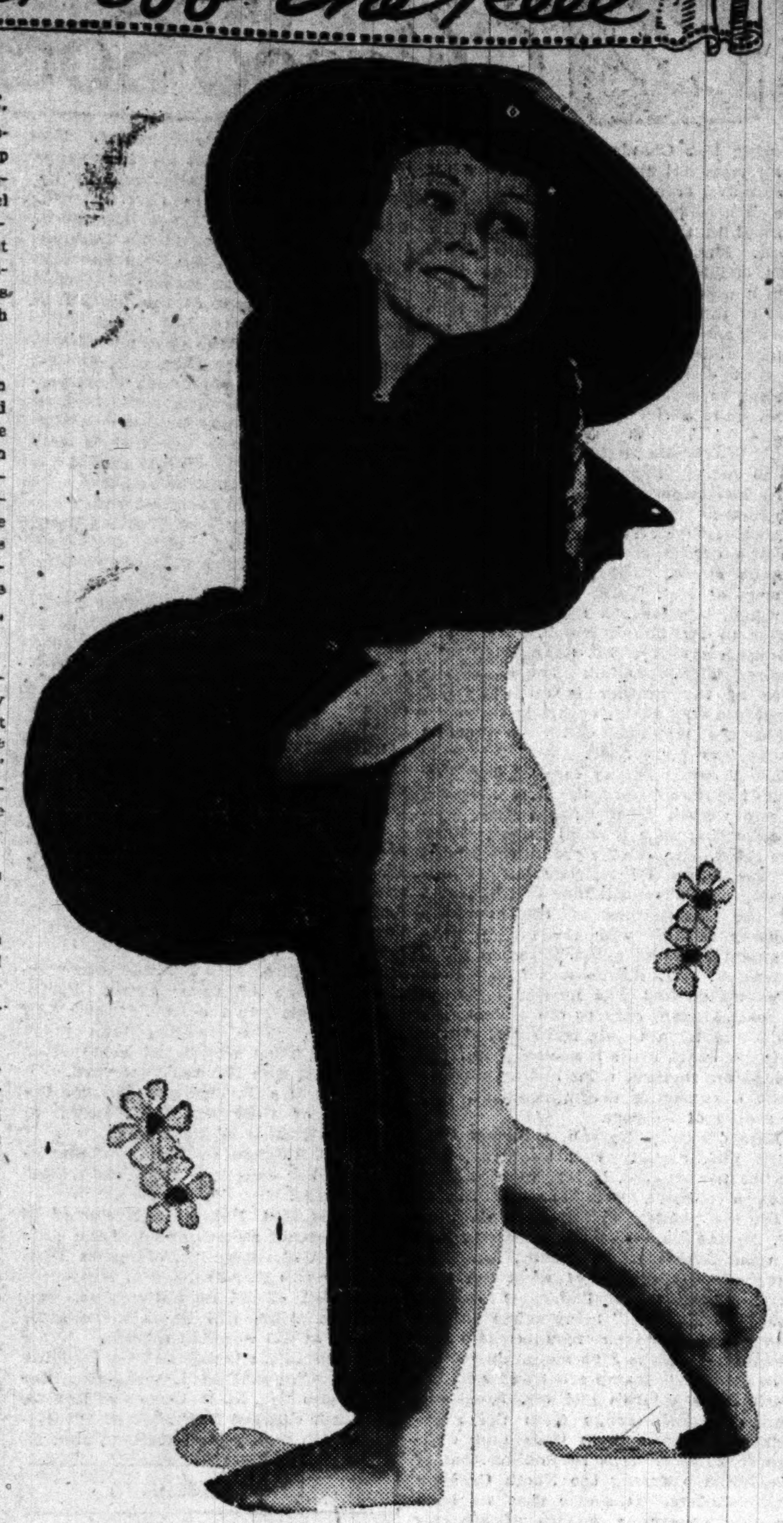
Playing opposite Clara Kimball Young in "The Easiest Way" will be Rockcliffe Fellows. Mr. Fellows has for some years been a "legitimate" leading man.

Gladys Brockwell has a warm spot in her heart for any one who likes "shoestrings" of licorice. It's her favorite confection.

At the William Fox plant a large schoolroom has been built for the children working in the films.

There's a little mixup about the contract with Marie Dressler and the Mutual company. Guarded information is that the contract has been drawn but not signed.

Edward Coxen, who plays an important role in the new features being produced by the Selig company, fell from his horse, badly crushing his ankle. Since then he has been compelled to walk on crutches.



Miss Jane Lee of Fox Poses for Fashions

"ASK ME!—ASK ME!—ASK ME!"

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

BLUE EYES: Louise Glaum is married to Walter Edwards. Not that I know of. Rumors.

DAN: What you need is an alarm clock. You're dreaming, Dan!

MARY H.: I never heard that all actresses ruin their hair marcelling it. From whence did the wild tale blow to you?

J. G. S.: Address Robert Harron care the Ince Triangle company, Culver City, Cal. Vurr' welcome.

L. L. G.: When Billie Burke was playing in pictures she worked for the Kleine company. She is not in pictures at the present time. Marguerite Clarke is with Famous Players, 130 West Fifty-sixth street, New York. Niles Welch is about 29 years old. He is not married. He is with Famous Players. Yes. The man who played with Mary Pickford in "Less Than the Dust" took the part of Freneau in "Gloria's Romance." His name is David Powell. Many, many thanks.

HARRY M.: I don't know any other way of making your wishes known than to advertise. There are undoubtedly plenty of amateur writers who would be glad to give you reasonable remuneration for such work. Personally I know of none.

MILTON: Well! well!

H. H.: Mighty glad you like the column. Norma Talmadge is married to Joseph Schneck. She is supposed to be 22 years old. If you will write to her care of the Selznick Pictures company, Forty-ninth street and Seventh avenue, New York, inclosing a quarter for her photograph, it will probably be sent to you. You are welcome.

R. L. C.: I do not know Miss Bara's nationality or religion. You are quite welcome to your own opinions regarding all things.

B. S.: You are right. Charles Kent is an artist and in "The Enemy" he certainly did deserve to be strongly featured.

FAITHFUL READER: I should like nothing better! Douglas Fairbanks was born in Denver, 1883. I haven't his exact height. Sorry.

GLORIANA: Wrong; guess again!

JR.: Neither short nor tall am I; thin nor fat. Now make what you can of me out of that!

FAN: I forwarded the letter you sent me. Let me know if at any time I can be of service.

READER: I did apply for a copyright on "vurr'" and "y'wekkum," but the man at the government office couldn't understand them and he sent them out to be interpreted. The interpreter wasn't there and they couldn't find their way back to the copyright office. Dash wy!

H. M. H.: Bert Williams of the "Follies" is colored.

JOSEPHINE S.: Here you are again. I'm glad to hear from you. Francis X. Bushman is with Metro, 1465 Broadway, New York. Robert Warwick is with Selznick, Forty-ninth street and Seventh avenue, New York. Hobart Henley is with Universal, Universal City, Cal. Marguerite Fischer is with Mutual, Los Angeles, Cal.

F. N. K.: Ethel Clayton is with the World Film company, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York. Y'wekkum.

M. L. K.: I'm awfully glad you wrote to me. It certainly is nice to be 12 going on 13, isn't it? I remember I had my first dress to my shoe tops when I was 13 and I did feel that I was much older than anybody else in the world. Billie Burke is 21 years old. Yes, she is pretty, isn't she. She has reddish golden hair and it is fluffy and curls readily. Harold Lockwood is 27 years old. He is quite blonde. You are supposed usually to send 25 cents for a picture of the stars. Some of the men and women of the screen, however, are delighted to mail photos gratis. I don't know whether the curls are real or not. Annette Kellermann is extremely attractive. Write and tell me how you come out in your examinations.

LILLIAN M.: Bessie Barriscale is with the Triangle company, Los Angeles, Cal.; Charles Chaplin is with Mutual, Los Angeles, Cal.; Peggy Hyland is with Vitagraph, East Fifteenth street and Locust avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Lillian and Dorothy Gish are with Triangle. You're welcome.

L. C.: The Keystone Comedy company is located in Los Angeles, Cal. Here's hoping you have your scenario accepted.

DORT: If one is to believe Mr. Hart himself, he is not married. No, William Duncan is not married to a professional.

SWEET MARIE: You have a secret in your heart, Sweet Marie? Well, I'm glad to do what I can for thee, so send me a stamped, addressed envelope, and I'll mail you the article I have on how to become a photo player.

MIKE: I don't see why you'd be afraid to write to Mr. Fairbanks. Whether or not he would be "so adorable as to answer," I must say I have no doubt but that he is as glad as most of us to receive words of praise and appreciation. Address him care of the Famous Players company, Los Angeles, Cal.

INTERESTED: I agree with you that "The Crab" is a splendid picture. Thanks ever so much for the kindly letter.

AN IRISHMAN: Douglas Fairbanks is married. He has a son about 7 or 8 years of age. No trouble at all.

DAILY: Yes, I have an article on the doubling process, which I shall take great pleasure in sending to you, if you will mail me a stamped, addressed envelope. Mighty glad to be of service.

Social Doings Slacken with Lent's Approach

By Mme. X.

THE ship of state is rocking a good deal these days and while its crew may not mind the motion, its passengers—you and me and the other man—feel pretty shaky and somewhat seasick. In this state of mind social activities, past, present, and to come, seem a superfluous consideration.

But steady! What we've got to do is to go quietly about our daily ocupations for the present. So this chronicler of the so-called gay world has to record that, although there are still seventeen days between us and Lent—Ash Wednesday being due to arrive two weeks from next Wednesday—Chicago's social season is as dead as a doornail. It really collapsed with the Franco-Italian gala performance and the closing of the Allied bazaar, although last week was crowded with small dinners and luncheons, many of them given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Fessenden of Boston and of Mrs. Fessenden's daughter, Miss Christine Snelling.

The Fessendens are the guests of their cousins, the Russell Tysons, while Miss Snelling is visiting her fiancé, Loring Coleman's, parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Coleman. Miss Snelling will become a permanent resident of Chicago some time early next summer, after her marriage in June to Loring Coleman. She is good to look upon and clever, in spite of not yet being in her twenties, so she will be a great addition to the young married set.

Although she only arrived last Sunday entertainments for her began almost before her trunks were unpacked. Mrs. Charles Strobel, her aunt-in-law to be, gave a tea for her that afternoon when she met most of the younger set who will be her colleagues when she settles down here. Mrs. John Spoor, Mrs. Robert McGann, Mrs. Joseph Coleman, and many other Chicago hostesses have arranged entertainments in her honor.

Another addition to the rapidly growing circle of newlyweds are the Albert Farwells, who have returned from their honeymoon, and are at present visiting Mr. Farwell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Francis C. Farwell, at 26 West Walton place, before settling down in Hubbard Woods, where they will make their home.

Chicago-Boston Marriage Alliances.

It seems as if Boston were becoming more closely allied by marriage with Chicago than any other eastern city. Both Mrs. Albert Farwell and the future Mrs. Loring Coleman come from the famous New England metropolis, while several of Boston's young Lochinvars have come out of the east and taken away some of Chicago's fairest daughters, offsprings of our most conspicuous families, such as the Hobart Chatfield-Taylors, the Edward L. Ryersons, the John S. Runnellses and Mrs. William Hubbard, whose three daughters all married New England men and are living in or near Boston.

There was never a younger looking bride and bridegroom than the youthful pair that stood up in front of a screen of roses and smilax at 1130 Lake Shore drive a week ago yesterday before Dr. J. G. K. McClure and took their marriage vows. The bride was Miss Isabel Baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred L. Baker, and the bridegroom was Robert M. Curtis, who has been for a year an inmate in the Baker home, as well as an employé of Mr. Baker's firm.

In true patriarchal fashion, after the French and Italian customs, the Curtises will make their home with Mrs. Curtis' parents for the first year of their married life. They have gone west for a wedding trip and will join the Bakers in Santa Barbara, where the latter have a most attractive house, embowered in pale yellow Cherokee roses and hanging over the long, slow breakers of the Pacific ocean.

The next bridal couple on the calendar —and this seems to be a season particularly dedicated to marriage and giving in marriage—are Miss Lucy Arrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Arrick, and James Monroe Walker, son of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Walker. This marriage will be celebrated two weeks from yesterday at St. Chrysostom's church at 4 o'clock and will be followed by a reception at the Arricks' home, 1307 Ritchie court.

Bazaar Workers Celebrate.

An aftermath of the bazaar was that gay late supper party a week ago yesterday at the Kellogg Fairbank's, when Mrs. Fairbank, presiding genius and moving spirit of the bazaar's wonderful cabaret, brought together for one final celebration some of her active helpers like the Morris Johnstons, "Joe" Winterbothams, "Jim" Thornes, et al., and the brilliant lights from the operatic, legitimate, and vaudeville world who had so generously aided her in making her department one of the record making successes in the annals of Chicago charity performances. To provide a continuous entertainment for nine afternoons and ten evenings was an extraordinary achievement and one worthy of much celebration.

The company that gathered at Mrs. Fairbank's was a unique and interesting one and included a varied line of celebrities, from members of Ziegfeld's Follies, the Robinson Crusoe troupe, and the Russian dancers, to William E. Hodge, Guy Hardy, and Mme. Beriza.

Long tables were set around the edge of the room, leaving an open space in the center where the entertainers—amateur and professional—performed their various stunts. Howard Gillette and "Bert" Strange of New York combined some pas seuls and sleight of hand tricks to the great edification of the company. Mrs. John Carpenter read her immortal paper on "Eugenics"—a gem of its kind. "[illegible]" Little and his antithesis in physique and general bone structure gave an imitation of the "Dolly Sisters." John Carpenter at the piano spread the purest joy of the evening. The brunt of the affair, as you see, was borne by local and amateur talent, though the professionals one and all contributed their gifts to the occasion.

About seventy guests were present and the early Sunday morning milkman saw the last of the company depart. It isn't often in this staid town of hard workers that a social gathering convenes at midnight and only disbands at 5 o'clock cockcrow.

Measure of Civilization.

Auerbach, the well known German novelist of the first half of the last century, says that a civilization can be measured by the nondaylight hours it keeps. True it is that primitive folk time their waking activities by the sun's rising and setting, and that the more sophisticated we grow the later are our hours for rising and for going to bed.

As a rule, however, measured by Auerbach's dictum, we Chicagoans are not highly civilized. The whole standard of living nowadays inclines towards the sanitary, simple and wholesome. Most of the older and more experienced leaders of fashion eschew entirely cocktails and champagne. The majority of women decline the after dinner demi-tasse of delicious, but deleterious, black coffee. Even cigaret smoking is on the wane. Also the fad of not eating red meats is spreading among both men and women, while limiting one's diet to meat but once a day is almost universal among those who have had years of good living and much wining and dining.

Early hours are the cult of many of our "mondaines," women who are ready to sacrifice every form of self-indulgence to the desire to preserve health and youth. The result of all this self-denial is a prolongation of youth far beyond the formerly accepted limits of this period. The girl of 20 and the woman of 60 today wear the same hat or dress model, enjoy the same sports, practice the same new dance steps. But the price of all this is a strict and unremitting asceticism and self-discipline on the part of the elder woman which sets a new standard among those who belong to the "world that amuses itself."

Away to Balmy Climes.

The rapidly growing leisure class of America is learning to enjoy its independence and opportunities for comfort by curtailing its stay in the vigorous but irksome restraints of a northern winter. The annual migration of society folk from Chicago at this season has fairly started.

The departure of a large band of our fellow citizens this coming Tuesday for Santa Barbara, Cal., will make quite a hole in our ranks. Among them will be the Clyde Carrs, Mrs. Alexander Smith, the Edward L. Ryersons the Alfred Bakers, Mrs. Joseph Field, and Mrs. Louis Huck. Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gillette and their young son departed for this same second home of Chicagoans on Thursday. The Robert McGanns go thither on the 12th of this month, while Mrs. Arthur Ryerson and Mis Ellen Ryerson will set forth for southern California on Feb. 22.

By the way, the group of Chicagoans who left us a fortnight ago to set sail for China had a "narrow squeak" in catching their steamer. They planned to arrive in Vancouver on a Wednesday, which would give them a night there before the S. S. Empress of Russia sailed on the following day. But the deep snows which clog travel between here and the Rockies delayed their train nineteen hours, and they had to hurry from the railway station direct to the steamer, which had retarded its departure just to accommodate this Chicago contingent. Those must have been breathless hours to our fellow citizens as they sped down the western slopes of the Rocky mountains, not knowing whether or no the ship would sail without them.

The Hugh McBirneys, Arthur Aldises, Charles R. Crane, Joy Mortons, Sterling Mortons, Howard Shaw, Miss Sylvia Shaw, and Day McBirney are among those who hurried anxiously westward on this first lap of an oriental tour which is to take in Japan and China and many untrodden paths in the "Celestial" kingdom.

The exhibit of paintings and sculpture by Chicago artists which opened at the Art institute on Thursday is interesting to a purely social chronicler because of the important part art plays in our social life, especially this winter, when the Arts club has made such a dent in our consciousness by its preeminently successful Lincoln ball, its chic little teas, and its notable picture shows. With such sponsors as Mrs. Robert McGann, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, and Mrs. John Carpenter promoting and pushing it, this newcomer among clubs is bound to become a factor in society, as well as in artistic life.

Also the return of Abram Poole and his settling in and opening his new house in Lake View avenue gives an added impetus to interest in matters artistic. It is probably because of Mrs. McGann's strenuous labors in the Arts club and Abram Poole's preoccupation with house building that neither of them is represented in this exhibit of Chicago painters at the Art institute. But Mrs. Cecil Clark Davis has three fine canvases there, one an impressionistic portrait of Capt. Roald Amundsen, while Miss Katherine Dudley's charming likeness of little Sarah Brewster, daughter of the Walter Brewsters, catches the eye and arrests the attention of even the hasty visitor.

It is a pleasure to see more of Mrs Jessie Arms Botke's delightful decorative canvases. Last year introduced us to her first crop of these effective and alluring Bob Chanleresque panels. She is a former Art institute pupil who, after graduating from the institute and until she married her achitect husband, worked in the Herter studios in New York. Mrs. McGann bought one of her most striking decorative pieces a year ago, a creation of white peacocks on a sort of tapestry background. This season's contribution from her brush includes more peacocks—golden as well as white—and some brilliant flamingoes wading in a burbling pool of sapphire blue, quite a riot of color.

Farwells in New Home.

The Arthur Farwells gave a delightful housewarming Friday evening, when they invited their friends to a musical in their recently finished home on the corner of Ritchie court and Goethe street. The architect, Gamble Rogers of New York, and formerly of Chicago, has given a rather severe exterior to the house, which, to the uninitiated, savors of the Georgian period, crossed with Venetian. The chief feature of the interior is an unusually large drawing room, or music room, on what the Italians call the "piano nobile," or main floor.

The program Friday evening was furnished by two sisters, the Misses Kouns, young women from Kansas City, who are starting on a musical career. They are the daughters of a prominent official in the Santa Fé railroad, whose untimely death last summer in the outset of the negotiations of the country's railway officials with the federal government at Washington attracted much attention. Mr. Kouns was taken ill in Washington and was hurried home on a special train, only to die on the way from the train to his residence. Their father's death made it necessary for the daughters to turn, what had been up to then a charming accomplishment, into a means of support.

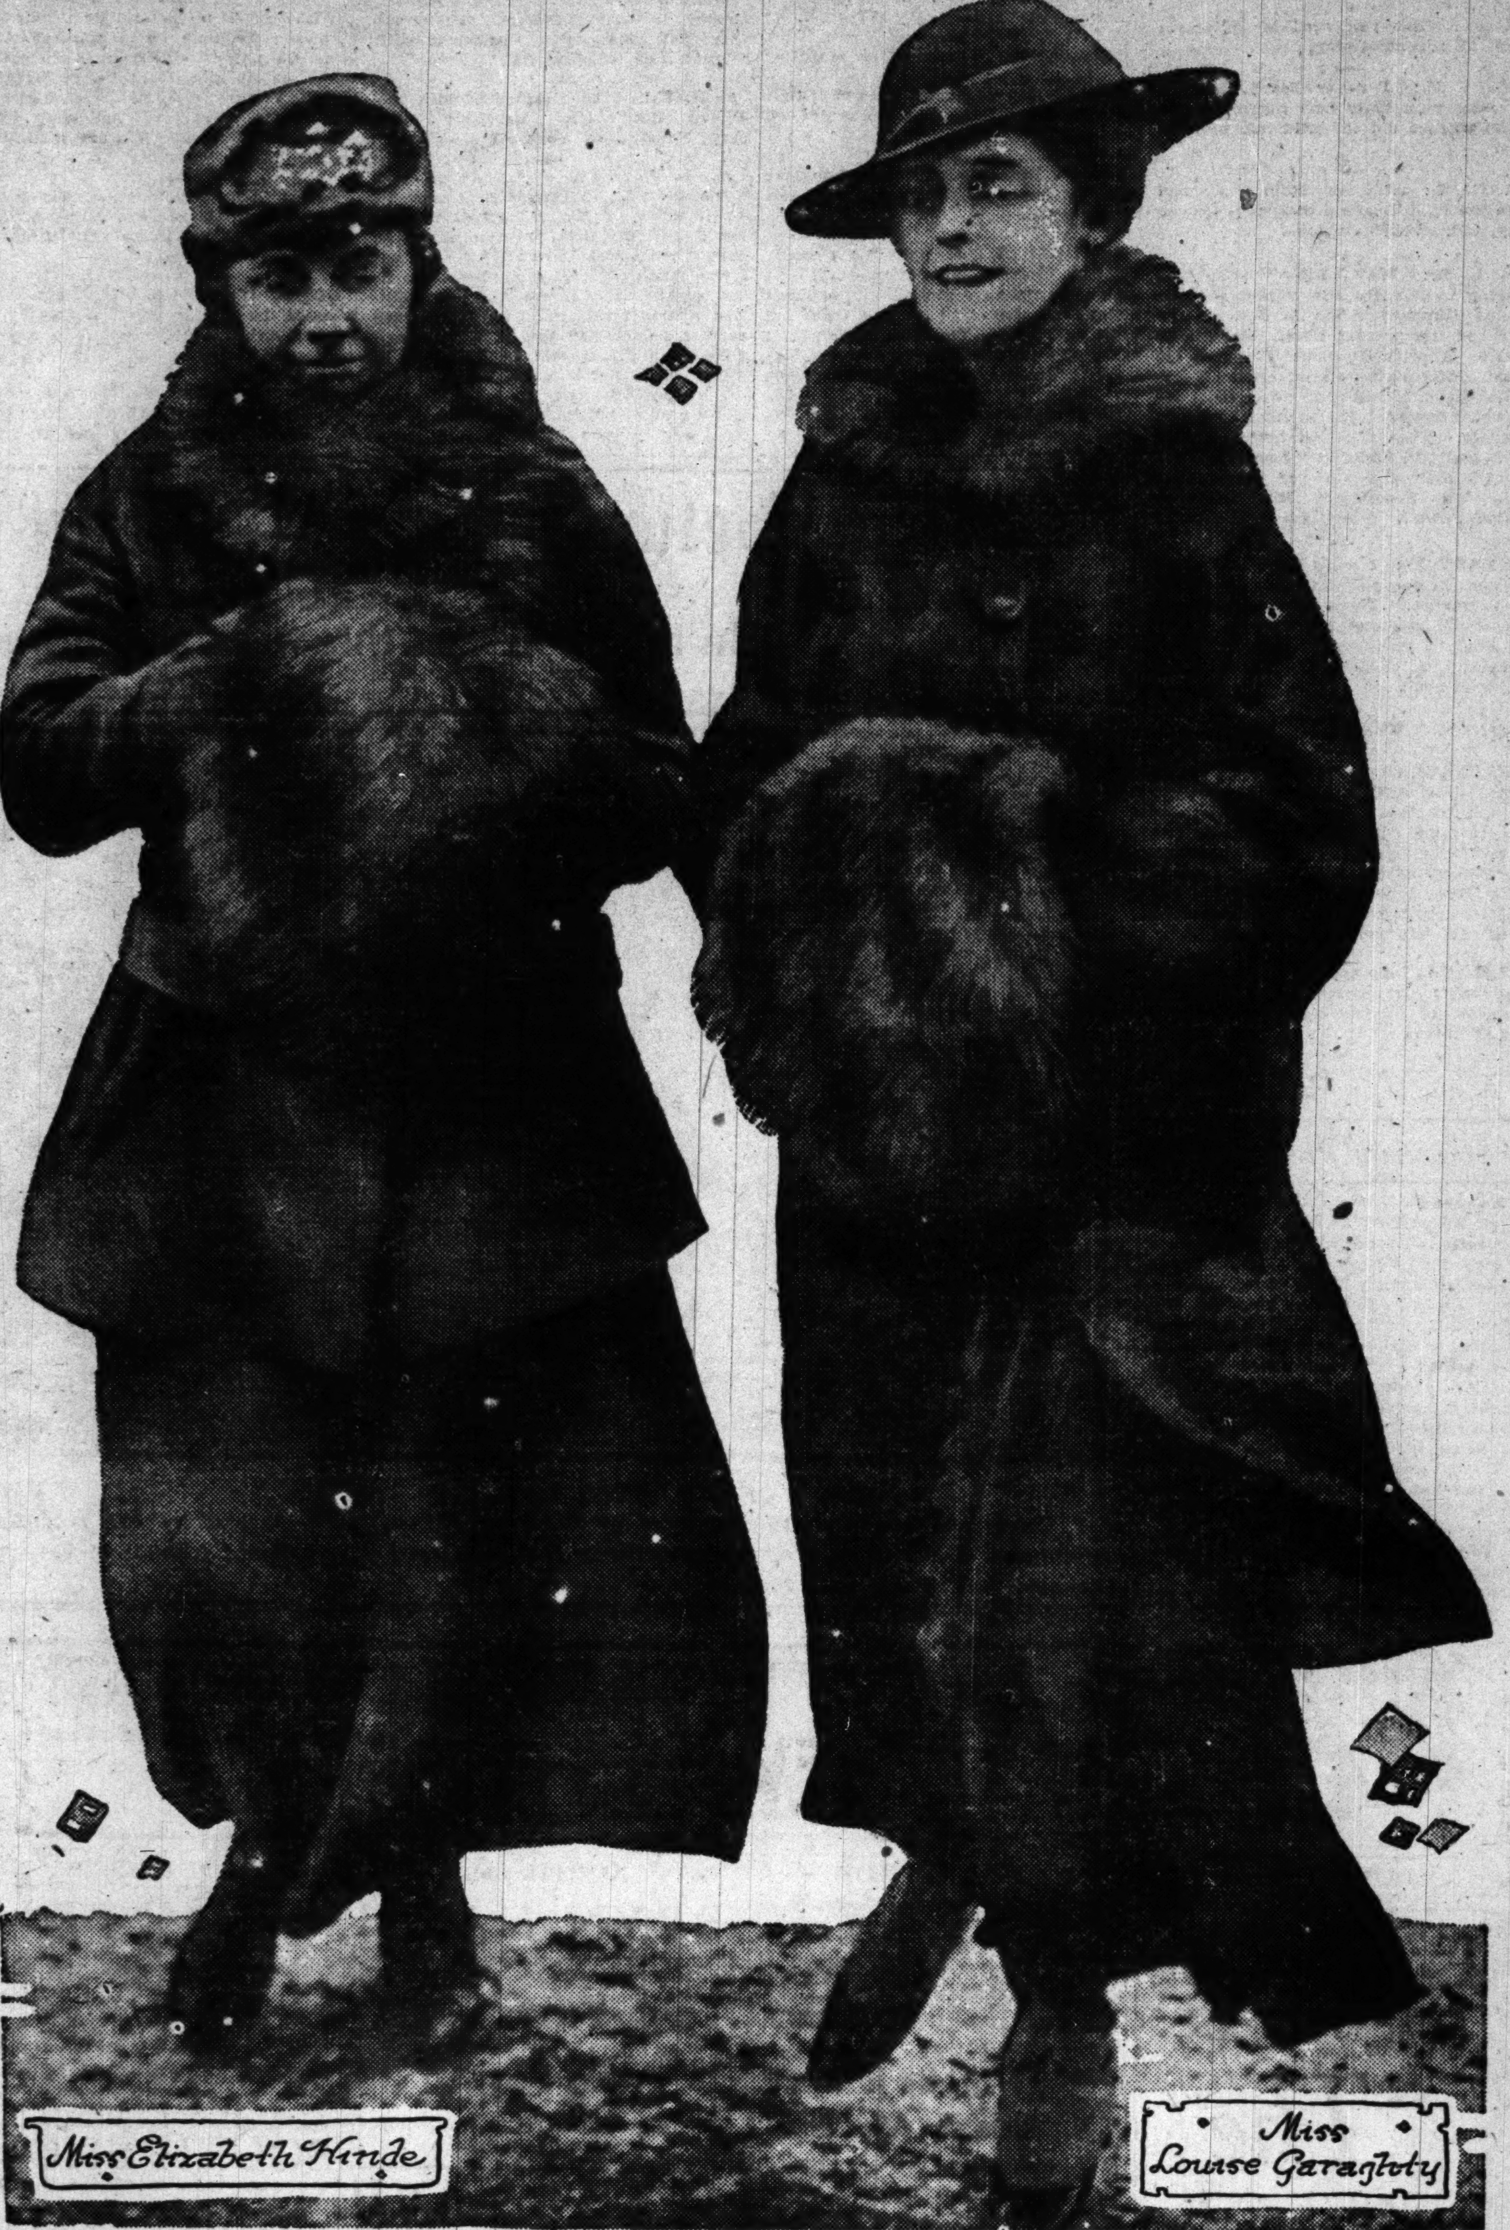
Miss Lorraine Wyman, a former Chicago girl, already well known among us for her singing, is returning here to give a concert, with Howard Brockway, the pianist, Friday evening, Feb. 16, for the benefit of the Hindman Settlement school, Knott county, Ky. The program will consist of what the performers call "The Lonesome Tunes" and "Fast Music," being songs handed down by Kentucky mountaineers for generations in the Pine mountain region.

In a 300 mile tramp afoot and a-horseback, Miss Wyman and Mr. Brockway collected these songs from the aborigines and gave them their first written form, their work resembling that of Cecil Sharp among the North Carolina mountaineers. It seems that we have in this country a wealth of scarcely tapped folklore and folksong in remote regions, only awaiting the enlightened explorer.

The concert will be given in the Central Music hall, in East Jackson boulevard. If we mistake not, in one of its many phases, this was once the New theatr, where a group of society leaders tried to an unsuccessful conclusion the experiment of highbrow drama.

Last evening Mrs. Marshall Field, once Chicago's most brilliant and popular social leader, gave at her spacious house in Sixteenth street in Washington an entertainment that will recall many similar functions during her reign in Chicago. It was a dinner to seventy-eight guests followed by a program of songs from the Metropolitan Opera company's best soprano (name forgotten momentarily), given in the hostess' beautiful big salon, famous even in that city of splendid mansions. A dance succeeded the musicale and a supper completed the whole royal affair. The Marshall Fields III. were the guests of honor and Washington's youngest, gayest, and most fashionable set enjoyed rare combination of dinner, music, dance, and supper.

One Is a Junior League Worker; the Other Is Going South for Rest of Winter.



Miss Elizabeth Hinde (left) and Miss Louise Garaghty are two of the younger society girls of the north side. Miss Hinde is one of those who will take part in the annual spring entertainment of the Junior league, to be given soon after the close of Lent. Miss Garaghty is one of the many debutantes who are about to leave for warmer climates for the rest of the winter.

Post-Graduate Auxiliary Plans a Benefit Party.

By Hazel Whitaker.

THE woman's auxiliary of the maternity and children's departments of the Post-Graduate hospital, 2400 Dearborn street, is to have its annual benefit party on Friday evening at the Lexington hotel, when it is hoped to raise at least $1,000 to apply toward the eleven free beds maintained by the auxiliary.

Mrs. Harry Oberman is general chairman of the dance and will be assisted by the following reception committee: Mrs. William F. Dickson, Mrs. Emil Ries, Mrs. Harry L. Meyers, Mrs. Carl E. Ingram, Mrs. W. A. Newton, Mrs. G. F. Suker, Mrs. Franc Daniels Green, Mrs. Otto J. Stein, Miss Pauline Stein, Miss Leontine Meyers, Mrs. Hanna Kraft, Miss Nan Flanagan, Miss Laura Masters, Mrs. Harry Gradle, Mrs. Jacob Berolzheim, Mrs. Joel Miller, Mrs. E. F. Hockaday, Mrs. Charles Frazier, Mrs. R. W. McNealy, Mrs. F. L. Crilly, Mrs. Edgar Crilly, Mrs. L. C. French, Mrs. J. E. Reichard, Mrs. Laura Nathanson, and Mrs. C. E. Carson.

Miss Katherine Greer, Miss Edith Porter, Miss Eleanor Spears, Miss Anna Louise Newton, Miss Marie McDermott, and Miss Adaline Mayer will sell refreshments. Miss Nan Flanagan has charge of the card tables and Mrs. Joel Miller of the "Tombola" booth, where one may purchase whatever his fancy pleases. Tickets may be purchased from Mrs. G. F. Suker, 5358 Winthrop avenue, or from Mrs. Emil Ries, 4419 Greenwood avenue.

The auxiliary, which has been organized for seven years, owes its existence to Dr. Gay K. Durbin-Ries, formerly of the hospital staff. Due to the many calls for help she received from poor and deserted wives and from the children's clinic, she realized the dire need of a charity ward. And so in 1911 the eleven charter members organized and elected Dr. Lena K. Sadler the first president. From this beginning there has resulted three maternity and eight children's free beds maintained entirely by the auxiliary, all medical and nursing services for these being contributed by the hospital staff and nurses. In this way all money realized on benefits and donations goes directly to the wards.

Although the majority of the cases cared for come directly to the hospital, yet many more are referred from the various charities, through visiting and school nurses, and by physicians outside the hospital. And they are taken if needy, regardless of nationality or creed, though if they are able to contribute, even if it is but a mite, they are asked to do so in order to better teach them to help themselves.

Mothers are also encouraged to bring their children to the clinics for treatment after they have been dismissed as hospital cases. The recently elected board is as follows: Mrs. W. F. Dickson, president; Mrs. Hatty Oberman, first vice president; Mrs. Harry L. Meyer, second vice president; Mrs. Carl E. Ingram, secretary, and Dr. Gay Durbin-Ries, treasurer.

Harbingers of Spring are the new arrivals in all our garment sections—welcome in their freshness and beauty.

Suits for Spring—for women and misses—in Wool Jersey, Khaki-Kool, Yo-San, Burella, Gunniburl, and Gabardine, Poplin and Serge, in delightful Springtime models.

Among the Serge Suits is one of those clever models which the early season sometimes brings forth; unique in line and "different" in treatment. It is most attractive and decidedly new. $45.00. Others priced $25.00 to $150.00.

The Coat Sections are showing new models in jersey and sport silks, as well as the more staple materials.

Dresses for Immediate Wear—These include two new tailored models in serge, quite simple but distinctive—designed to meet the demand for a quality dress for general wear. Both are moderate in price—$18.50 and $20.00.

There are other clever models in other materials also moderately priced, and beautiful individual pieces at higher prices.

And in the Sections of Separate Skirts is reflected the surprisingly active interest in the new models so pronounced in pattern and color as to be absolutely different.

The Misses' Section also announces its new Spring models in Suits, Dresses and Coats.

St. Andrew's Asks Old Parishioners to a Homecoming.

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

The St. Andrew's Protestant Episcopal church, North Robey street and West Washington boulevard, the Rev. Benjamin E. Chapman, rector, has sent an appeal to all former rectors and parishioners to gather at a homecoming at the church next Wednesday.

The speakers at the evening meeting will be the Rev. Frank E. Wilson, Wilmette, and the Very Rev. William C. Dewitt, president of the Western Theological seminary, former rectors, and the Rt. Rev. Sheldon M. Griswold, suffragan bishop of Chicago. Former members of the choir will join with the present choir in the musical part of the service. The holy communion will be administered at 10 a. m.

St. Andrew's church traces an unbroken lineage to the organization of the Church of the Atonement in Lake street in 1849, the third Protestant Episcopal church organized in Chicago, St. James' being the first and Trinity church the second. The first move was to North Peoria and West Washington streets, where a new building was erected. This church was purchased and enlarged by the then Bishop Whitehead, who presented it to the diocese as the cathedral church which it now is. The lots on which St. Andrew's now stands were then purchased.

Just before the great Chicago fire the St. John's church had begun the erection of a large edifice at Ashland boulevard and Ogden avenue. The fire so crippled the finances of the supporters of the church the newly begun building was sold to the Presbyterians and became the Third Presbyterian church as is today. The St. John's congregation then merged with the Church of the Atonement and the name changed to St. Andrew's. This was in 1878.

Archbishop George W. Mundelein

The Most Rev. George William Mundelein, D. D., will complete next Friday his first year as archbishop of Chicago. He was enthroned and invested with the pallium on Feb. 9, 1916, being the youngest archbishop in the Roman Catholic church in America and perhaps in the world, as he was before his appointment as archbishop by Pope Benedict XV. said to be the youngest monsignore and bishop in the church. He came to Chicago from Brooklyn, N. Y.

A high official in one of the benevolent institutions of the church in Chicago made this statement: "I have never seen Archbishop Mundelein, but from what I know it seems that immediately on his arrival he waved a magic wand over the city and every Catholic church and organization became active."

Among the outstanding movements Archbishop Mundelein has inaugurated or given new life to have been a boys' home under the Knights of Columbus, clubrooms for young women in the Venetian building under the auspices of the Catholic Women Foresters, the home for half orphans in Oak Park, and, greatest of all, the Quigley Memorial Preparatory school for the education of young men for the priesthood. He has greatly extended the work of the Holy Name society and placed Auxiliary Bishop McGavick in charge, making the society responsible for the big brother care of young men. He appointed the Rev. W. J. Kinsella spiritual director of the Total Abstinence society and gave the society his approval. He appointed the Rev. E. F. Rice spiritual director of the St. Vincent de Paul Society for the Relief of the Poor and directed that chapters be organized in every parish. He appointed Hans Merx supervisor of the music of the archdiocese.

Today at 10:30 o'clock Archbishop Mundelein will bless the Mission of the Holy Cross, Desplaines and Randolph streets, the founding of which is one of the most notable achievements of the year.

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME. Y.

Off to Southern Resorts as Social Season Closes.

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—The Bagby musicals are over. The debutantes are all introduced. They are beginning to announce their engagements. The big, wooden doors are going up at the front entrances along Fifth avenue. The occupants are starting south. The season of 1916-'17 is over—as it were, is laid to rest.

"And faith we need it," commented one of the smart set when the phrase was quoted to her. Not to have dark circles under the eyes—still to borrow from this same smart setter's lore—simply meant that one had not been popular.

There is only one difference indicated between the rigorousness of this season and others. You would deduce that this one has been more so because those who manage it have given out before Lent. Usually, you will remember, the participants have succeeded in "hitting it up" until the midnight hour of Lent struck. This year they are sidestepping; the city has the forsaken air of being deserted now—not by people in general, let me hasten to add. It is thronged as never before; but the smart setter is not there. He is digging his toes in the sands of Palm Beach.

Jolt to Newport Colony.

His subject of conversation is chiefly Newport and the outrage being committed by a small group of mere people—not members of the aristocracy of our country—there. You know the attitude of the summer colony toward Newport—that it is a city that sprang up several centuries ago for the rich and fashionable of this generation to go to in the summer and cut up into a degree not sanctioned anywhere else in the world. They charge things at the grocer's and call him impertinent when he tries to collect his money. They race around the town in their motors and make it so dangerous for children to be about the streets that the steady inhabitants have to picket their little boys and girls in the yard during the pleasantest season for being abroad out of doors. They grab the best bathing beach, and the only way one can possibly bathe in it is to have a card of introduction from one or another of the houses now in power.

Two enterprising business men are now planning to interfere with the exclusiveness of this resort. They have got their hands on another of the potentially good beaches there and are going to put it into shape. The mere people in and around Newport will then be able to dip into the Atlantic ocean without a letter from any of the 400 on the one hand or without bathing with the mill workers from Fall River on the other in their private beach off a ways, or yet without the trouble of taking two street car lines, not counting the transfer, one ferry boat, and one transfer wagon drawn by a decrepit mule to get to the bathing beach of Narragansett, the resort looked down on and held in jest by the fastidious Newporter.

This outrage on the part of two business men in making a clean, free for all bathing beach at Newport is one of the subjects of discussion up and down the Atlantic coast at this particular time. I should not be surprised if we heard more about it; I should not be at all surprised if measures were taken by the concerted wealth of the summer colony of Newport to thwart the promoters on the grounds that it does bring a great many people to the exclusive old town, you know.

Mrs. Belmont in New Role.

Meantime the national game of baseball is raging in the south. Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont appeared in a new rôle last week. Her social march through the years has certainly varied in character. I always remember when anything comes up about her present activities the hectic accounts of those years when she was entertaining Prince Henry, she being the only hostess the royal guest permitted himself to accept during his visit here. I think of her later career, too, when she was marrying her daughter, Consuelo, to the Duke of Marlborough.

Compare those two activities with the more recent one of marching up Fifth avenue at the head of a suffrage club. Compare them, too, with this latest note from the life and career of Mrs. Belmont. Last week she threw the ball which opened the season at Palm Beach between the Poncianas and the Breakers team.

My informant writes me that she was beautifully dressed. She had on a gown of white silk pongee, a black sailor hat of taffeta silk, a white lace veil, a white silk parasol with a wide band of brown round the edge, and—sudden and unexpected note—a string of diamonds. A few of the others present at the game were Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte, Mr. and Mrs. Philander Knox, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Eddy, and Mrs. John C. King.

Debutantes Danced Demurely.

People who do not believe that the young daughters of the rich—or the old ones, or anybody, indeed, that is at all rich—ever does anything for charity at all are asking these days what it is that the debutantes of the Junior league exert themselves to make money for. They gave the dramatic performance of which I wrote last week and took in over $20,000 above expenses. The following are one or two of the things that these young girls have at heart. But first let me, before mentioning them, tell you what the smart set is laughing about in connection with them.

It is the way they danced. Katherine Porter, in her servants' dance with Sydney Breese to the hurdy-gurdy music, looked as if she had been instructed not to lift her toes more than twelve inches from the floor. All of the girls, indeed, danced demurely, with their feet under strict control. It made a curious, laughable contrast with their highly professional and sure way of managing themselves. You instinctively expected the emphasis of a kick at certain points, but you got it not.

They are saying that certain of the fathers put their feet down securely on the possibility of their daughters lifting their feet, and the idea was suggested to them by last year's performance, when the debutantes at their theatrical performance seemed less restrained. There was, in fact, quite a little comment then on the reverse of the demure manifestation of this year.

Activities of Junior League.

But to mention the charities: Seven years ago, through the initiative chiefly of Mrs. Willard D. Straight, Mrs. Frederick R. Swift, and Mrs. Cortlandt R. Barnes, the sum of $200,000 was subscribed by the league to buy stock in the City and Suburban Homes company, and the Junior League house, a model hotel for working girls, was erected at Seventy-eighth street and the East river. That was the league's contribution toward solving the housing problem in this city.

The present activities of the Junior league extend to nearly twenty widely different charitable enterprises. Last year seventeen institutions or funds were included in the distribution of $20,210.17 cleared from the theatricals of the season.

Mrs. F. Louis Slade is president of the league proper. Miss Helen A. Hoadley, Miss Mary Sloan Colt, and Miss Margaret Van B. Mason, three debutantes, are president, secretary, and treasurer, respectively, of the 1917 group of debutantes who "made" the league this season and who are known as sustaining members. Upon their shoulders fell the responsibilities of arranging and staging this year's production.

Mr. and Mrs. C. K. G. Billings are spending the winter at Los Angeles.

Mrs. Secor Cunningham will be hostess tomorrow at a luncheon for twelve to be given at her home, 999 Lake Shore drive.

A charity benefit recital to be held on Friday evening, Feb. 16, in Central Music hall, is being arranged by a group of Chicago men and women who are interested in the Hindman settlement school of Knott county, Ky. Miss Loraine Wyman and Howard Brockway will give a program of song ballets which they collected last summer in the Pine mountains of Kentucky. Among the patrons and patronesses are Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Buffington, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde M. Carr, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus C. Dawes, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Upham, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Hinde, Mr. and Mrs. Earl W. Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Burton, Mr. and Mrs. Dexter Fairbank, Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Waller, Dr. and Mrs. William Allen Pusey, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard A. The Chicago auxiliary of St. Mary's of the Lake church of Riverside, Mich., will give a card party for the benefit of the church on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Garfield park refectory. The little country church for whose benefit the party will be given is of especial interest to Chicagoans, as it is named after the church said to be the first one built in Chicago after the one which was the place of worship of Father Marquette. Miss Margaret Wheeler is president of the auxiliary.

The Chicago alumnæ of St. Joseph's academy will give their first annual dancing party on Tuesday evening, Feb. 13, at the Hotel La Salle. Miss Winifred Humphrey is president of the chapter and Miss Hazel Noonan is chairman of the dance committee.

The Alumnae Association of the Chicago Lying-In Hospital will hold its annual benefit dance on Wednesday evening, Feb. 14, at the Edgewater Beach hotel. The proceeds will go toward equipping the new hospital. Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. William R. Odell, and Mrs. Morris L. Johnston are among the patronesses for the ball.

PERSONALS.

One more real fling before Lent begins, and then for sewing circles, Red Cross bandage rolling, and instructive lectures. The Yale prom will be held this week, one of the events of the year for society girls all over the country. From Chicago will go quite a little group, among them Miss Betty Hoyt, Miss Elizabeth Goodrich, Miss Marion Osborne, Miss Aline Manierre, and Miss Mary Buford Pierce. Miss Margaret Carry, who is at school in the east, will also be in New Haven for the week. Mrs. Edward Hines of Evanston left a few days ago to be one of the chaperones at Colony house during prom week. Her son, Edward Hines Jr., is at Yale.

William R. Stirling and his daughters, Dorothy and Jean, will leave this week for Tampa, Fla., to be away until April 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde M. Carr are among those who will leave Chicago on Tuesday bound for California to spend the rest of the winter.

Owing to delay in the completion of the houseboat which Mr. and Mrs. Laurance H. Armour have bought they have postponed their cruise in southern waters until the latter part of this month.

Mrs. William R. Linn of 1415 Astor street is entertaining Mrs. Linn's niece and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. V. S. Prentice of New York.

Mrs. John Lewis Cochran is in California, where she plans to remain through the spring.

Mrs. Henry Dibblee expects to return to Chicago on Wednesday after a visit at Palm Beach, Fla.

Mrs. James T. Harahan of 119 Lake Shore drive will leave today for Palm Beach to be away until late in the spring.

A cablegram recently received by Miss Catherine ReQua, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. ReQua of 3629 Grand boulevard, announces to her the arrival on Tuesday of her fiancé, Stewart Johnson, son of Mrs. Lorenzo Johnson of Winnetka. Mr. Johnson, who was until recently chargé d'affaires at the legation at Guatemala, has been appointed to a similar post at Costa Rica and is on his way home preceding the taking up of his new work. During his visit plans for the wedding will be made.

EVE LESLIE WANTS MONEY, CLOTHES, LOVERS,

CHANCE throws together Betty Howard, the brilliant actress, and Eve, the unsophisticated girl. Betty has every luxury that Eve most wants. To cap Eve's trials, Adam Moore, her lover—her only possession—falls under Betty Howard's spell.

Livingstone Skinner—rich, cold, calculating—comes upon the scene. For his own purposes he inflames Eve's envy. Her desperation drives her to rash acts. Her life is in danger—her soul is in peril. Then she is rescued by the very actress she has envied and tried to injure.

See this great story in one of the theatres named below. See appealing Ann Murdock, the Frohman star, in the charming role of Betty Howard. See Shirley Mason and George Le Guere in some of the sweetest love scenes on the screen. Your most important engagement this week is to see ENVY!

"Here's an Invitation from the Stanleys"

"It's going to be a perfectly glorious dinner and lots of charming people will be there. But somehow—I dread the thought of it.

"We don't know them very well, and I'm sure we'll be terribly embarrassed. I never do know what to talk about, anyway. Isn't there some way we can learn something really interesting—something that will make us more entertaining to our friends?"

The husband reflected only a moment. "You're perfectly right, dear, perfectly right. We surely ought to make better use of our spare time. After all, it ought to be easy to learn one worth-while thing every day. Only to-day—at dinner—I was discussing this very subject with Bob Arnold and he was telling me about

The Mentor Association

"It costs only $3 a year to join and Bob says it's the best investment he ever made. Let's see if it won't help us, too."

It's a fine thing, isn't it, to know an entertaining couple! Hearing them talk, you know immediately why they are so gloriously happy. They find pleasure in each other's company because they always have something interesting to talk about. Theirs is a life of growth and development; they refuse to stand still.

You note it and wonder. Maybe your wife—or husband—notes it, too. And down deep in your heart you are wishing—oh, so much!—that you might be just as entertaining, just as happy, just as much at ease in any company.

The encouraging thing about it is—you CAN! Not all at once, mind you, but little by little you can accumulate a usable knowledge of the finer things of life—Art, Travel, History, Nature, Biography, Literature, Domestic Science, etc.,

—and you can do it in your spare time, too.

If you are ambitious, if you really long for a well-rounded existence, then you surely ought to join The Mentor Association.

For the very aim and purpose of The Mentor Association is to help just such busy people as yourself—men and women who are really interested in worth-while things and who haven't the time to dig them out for themselves.

Make up your mind that you're going to learn one worth-while thing every day—that you're going to utilize every minute of your spare time in a pleasurable accumulation of knowledge, —and let "The Mentor" help you do it.

In each issue of "The Mentor" one worth-while topic is discussed in an absorbingly interesting way by an authority who is also a gifted writer. And with each issue of "The Mentor" are six gravures or color pictures printed on heavy paper and suitable for framing. All of these in addition to the regular illustrations.

What Membership Brings

But "The Mentor" is only one of the advantages of The Mentor Association. Briefly, this is what you get for $3 a year:

First. 24 issues of "The Mentor," bringing you a beautifully printed and illustrated story every two weeks, each different subject written by a leading authority upon that subject—300 pages during the year.

Second. 600 beautiful illustrations, distributed during the year through the text of the 24 issues of "The Mentor."

Third. 144 gravure or color pictures, printed on heavy paper, all ready for framing, in deep, rich tones that bring out all the beauty of the originals. On the back of each picture is a crisp five-minute description of the subject that is portrayed.

Fourth. Answers to any questions on Art, Travel, Literature, History, Nature or Architecture; each answer by an authority.

Fifth. Authoritative Club Programs. Any program you may want for a club, a reading circle, a literary afternoon or evening—each made for you by an expert.

Here are some of the subjects recently discussed in "The Mentor." Note the variety:

Last Monday we sold more furniture, we believe, than was ever sold before in any one day in Chicago! If that tremendous volume of sales doesn't prove the merit of Rothschilds' furniture values nothing could.

The public cannot be fooled. People are too shrewd to be lured by words. If this furniture were not just what we represent it to be we could never establish such a record.

We want you to SEE THIS FURNITURE! Don't judge by a picture—that is not fair to the furniture or to yourself. When goods are right and savings real, the more they are seen the better. This is a wonderful sale in view of the unparalleled price advances of the past year. Tomorrow will be another tremendous day. Come!

We cordially invite you to open a charge account or join our furniture club and divide the payments, to enable you to secure your share of this superior furniture. Furniture charged or paid for tomorrow will be held up to May 1st if desired. Extra salespeople to serve you quickly. Sixth Floor.

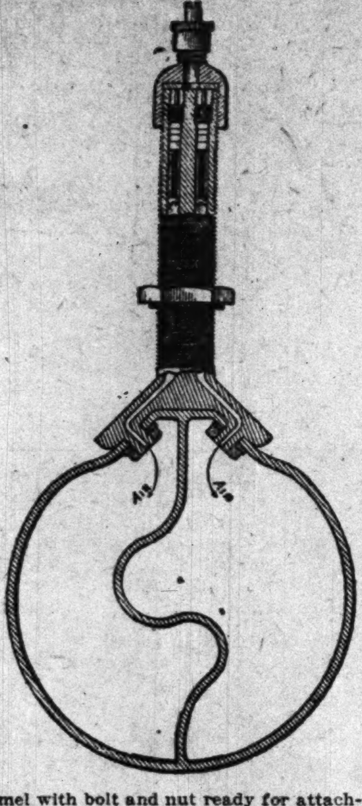
The LITTLE THINGS THAT HELP



Twin Inner Tubes.

A new thing is a twin inner tube consisting of a resilient portion vulcanized within the tube and dividing the interior into two equal compartments. This partition consists of a continuous strip corresponding to one-half of the inner circumference of the tube. A single two way valve serves to inflate either compartment separately or both compartments at the same time. In the event of puncture of one of the compartments of the tube one-half the air remains in the unpunctured side. This is sufficient air to carry the vehicle to a convenient stopping place for inflation to the original pressure. It also prevents tire destruction by rim cutting resulting from running on flat tires and the necessity of replacing the tube with the accompanying loss of time.

Automatic Spring Lubricator.

A novel spring lubricator is an oil pocket held tightly against the sides of the spring by means of three coiled springs. As the leaves of the spring go and come with the motion of the car, it is claimed that the lubricant is automatically spread between the leaves. The oiler may be attached to any car, and needs to have the oil supply renewed monthly, it is said.

Deflector on Exhaust.

A new device on the market is a sheet steel deflector which is designed to be clamped onto the end of Ford exhaust pipes to turn the exhaust dirt and grease away from the spare tire and rear end of the car. It is finished in black enamel with bolt and nut ready for attachment.

The VOICE of the MOTORIST

Marine Signals for Autos.

A code of signals with the auto horn might be taken up among motorists and made use of in much the same way that the pilot on water uses the whistle. For instance, when two machines on the same street are approaching a crossing and one of the drivers intends to make a turn to the left at the crossroad passing in front of the other machine, he might signify this intention by two blasts of the auto horn. This signal could be understood by driver following or one approaching the machine making the turn. Three blasts of the horn could make known that a machine was going to stop, and four blasts that it intended to back up. Of course, such signaling would be made use of on occasions when this method seemed to the driver to be expedient or necessary. It would seem that a code made simple and clear as to intent could be gotten out and made known to practically all drivers and eventually worked into shape so that it would be useful.

Road Signs Please Tourists.

I question whether at the present time there is a subject of greater importance to the promotion of motor travel than sign posting. Good road surface is, of course, primarily essential, while adequate hotel accommodations are no less important. But in my opinion the liberal and intelligent employment of road signs along the route does more to please the average tourist than the most elaborate of expensively printed information can do.

The motorist of today is no longer satisfied to travel with his eyes glued to a book or card. He does not want to be bothered to find his road by means of complicated detailed route cards and road books, and the extensive travel last year over the splendidly marked route of the Lincoln highway has done much to show the American tourist that it is not necessary to do so. He wants to look around and see something of the country he is driving through, and desires little more than a simple itinerary, with names of villages and towns traversed, with mileages, and a clear outline map of the route.

These, together with plain and prominent road signs whee necessary, enable the motorist to follow his road without losing the scenic attraction of the tour.

The fact that the Lincoln highway is marked throughout is one of the strongest points in its favor, and appeals strongly to prospective motor travelers.

Questions and Answers

By High Speed

I have heard that the Cook county commissioners recently purchased a large wooded tract of land, to be used as a public park. Please inform me where this place is located and how it may be reached by automobile.

P. K. E., Chicago.

You probably refer to the purchase of an additional tract of land for the Cook county forest preserves. There is no particular tract, but many of them located in various parts of the county. All will be open to the public. Several articles on the forest preserves have appeared in "The Tribune" at various times. The last one, under the signature of Henry M. Hyde, together with a map, appeared in "The Tribune" of Thursday, Jan. 11. Let me know what particular tract you wish to visit and I will tell you how to get there by automobile.

Persistent knocks are noticeable in my motor when the engine is running idle, also a little when the motor is pulling the load. These knocks do not seem to affect the power of the car, but are quite annoying. What is the cause of the knocks and what is the remedy?

H. M. J., New Carlisle, Ind.

Your description is not explicit enough for me to give you an exact answer. The knock may be caused by a loose connecting rod bearing, main bearing, or wrist pin bearing. Then again it may be caused by piston slapping, preignition caused by carbon deposits in the cylinders, or by incorrect timing. The way is to locate the knock first and then take steps to remedy the trouble. Try shorting the spark plugs in each cylinder while the motor is running. If a cylinder which is shorted pounds severely it is likely the connecting rod or wrist pin bearing is loose. If none of the cylinders knocks any more than usual the trouble probably is caused by carbon, which should be removed either by scraping or burning it out.

What do you consider a safe road clearance for the axles of a car without cutting down the speed of the machine by using smaller wheels? At what weight would you estimate a car equipped with a motor of 110 horsepower? Would 4,000 revolutions per minute for a four cylinder motor, three and three-quarters by six and one-quarter, be considered too high in speed to obtain good general results? Would there be much vibration?

The road clearance should not be much less than 9½ inches for average roads. It is hard to estimate the weight of the car you describe, as it would depend upon the design of the engine and chassis. If I were to make a rough guess I would say in the neighborhood of 3,000 pounds. A speed of 110 m. p. h. is pretty high and vibration would be likely unless especially designed.

What is your opinion regarding the so-called gasoline economizers now on the market and are they hard to look after? Do they really increase one's mileage and what is the best type?

B. G., Royalton, Ind.

Most any of the automatic gasoline economizers, or air valves, that screw into the inlet manifold between the carburetor and the motor should give good results without any attention whatever from the driver. An automatic air valve is by far the best for the amateur driver, but for the man who thoroughly understands his car the best results may be obtained by using a plain air valve screwed into the inlet manifold and regulated by hand from the steering post. By setting the carburetor for a fairly rich mixture, the motor has the best pulling power over heavy grades. On level ground the air may be supplied by hand as desired, and results to suit the operator may be obtained. On down grades the air valve may be opened wide and the motor will consume little gasoline. One of these devices is sure to increase the mileage. One man reports that without an economizer he drove 120 miles and averaged nineteen miles per gallon. Later, with his car equipped with an economizer, he made the same trip and averaged twenty-three and one-half miles per gallon.

We have just left the cold weather zone and are nearing Atlanta, Ga. I am shaking hands with myself that I talked with you before leaving Chicago and came south by train instead of by automobile. We shipped our car to Jacksonville, Fla., and expect to tour from there on. As far as Winchester, Ky., we found the ground well covered with snow and cold winds were blowing. All reports on the Dixie highway were unfavorable and proved that your article of Sunday, Jan. 14, was all right. Much rain fell throughout the south previous to the cold weather and made the roads heavy with rough, frozen ground. I talked with many motorists en route, and all of them had shipped their cars south. I have not heard of a single person who has driven through from Indianapolis since Dec. 1. I have received word from a garage owner in Jacksonville that foreign cars are pouring into that city in increasing numbers. Reports show that the west coast branch of the Dixie highway from Tallahassee and also the east coast branch of the highway from Jacksonville are in good condition to Miami and other southern Florida points.

A. G. W.

As promised, I am writing you to report on the condition of the roads as I found them the other day in driving from Chicago to West Chester, Ia. You doubtless will remember that you informed me that the trip would be a hard undertaking at this time of the year. As a matter of fact I would not have expected to find any better roads in September than I did in coming here. The first hundred miles out of Chicago was fine, with no snow drifts at all, and there was a good track for my car. From there on it had rained more and kept getting icier, but only a few miles were at all bad. From Davenport to Muscatine was the worst stretch, and that was for only a short distance. If you should happen to have any inquiries tell them to come on, as the roads will be in good shape until they begin to thaw out.

R. F. MCFARLANE, West Chester, Ia.

Owing to the large volume of inquiries for automobile routes and the relatively small amount of space in which to answer them, readers wishing immediate replies are advised to inclose a 2 cent stamp with inquiries so they may be answered by mail. Only routes and answers to questions of general interest will be published.

Lincoln Highway to Be Marked Through Chicago.

By John G. De Long.

AFTER a delay of several years, the Lincoln highway, acknowledged to be the leading transcontinental route of the United States, bids fair to be marked into Chicago from the south and out of the city to the west. As it is and has been ever since the highway was mapped out, its nearest point to Chicago is Chicago Heights, twenty-nine miles to the south.

Taking advantage of the presence in the city of Secretary A. F. Bement and Field Secretary H. C. Ostermann of the Lincoln highway, President William G. Edens of the Illinois Highway Improvement association called together representatives of various good roads and civic organizations and secured their unqualified indorsement of the plan to mark the proposed feeders.

The official routing of the highway through Chicago Heights, Joliet, Plainfield, Aurora, and Batavia to Geneva would not be interfered with. The improvement would consist of artistically designed markers, bearing the symbol of the highway, posted between Dyer, Ind., and Chicago, and between the city and Geneva. Here the transcontinental tourist would be enabled to again pick up the highway proper after having entered and departed from Chicago over a plainly marked route.

It has taken three years for the importance of the Lincoln highway—"the main street of the nation"—to be appreciated by the people of Chicago. The development of the Lincoln highway, its constant improvement and consequent volume of traffic has brought home the possibilities to Chicago in the securing of a share of this traffic which Chicago should rightly receive, but which to a great extent has in the past avoided the city.

Thousands of Lincoln highway tourists traveling both east and west have been passing within a few miles of the city, through Geneva, Aurora, Joliet, and Chicago Heights, and continuing on their way without paying Chicago a visit, which nine-tenths of them, especially those from the west, really desire to do. Tourists from distant states, many of them from small towns, hesitate to enter congested traffic centers, or leave a thoroughly marked route upon which they are always sure of their direction and of the correctness of their course, unless some distinctive marking is provided, which they can follow with certainty through the maze of Chicago streets and be sure that they will, without the necessity of inquiring directions, be able to find their way back to the Lincoln way.

More than fifty miles of country highways and city pavements would have to be signboarded. The work and expense conected with the marking would be jointly assumed by a number of organizations. Included on the proposed route of the feeders would be ten or twelve miles in Lake county, Indiana; eleven miles of city streets, twelve miles of the south park system, and nine miles of the west park system. Then, too, there would be eighteen miles of signboarding to be done in Dupage county, in addition to several more miles in Cook county.

One of the proposed feeders would start at Dyer, Ind., and run north through Hammond and South Chicago to the south park boulevard system, through which it would be continued downtown via Jackson and Washington park, Garfield boulevard, and Michigan avenue. Leaving Chicago, the Lincoln markers, bearing two red and one white band and the symbol (the official colors are red, white, and blue) would guide the tourist out of the city through Oak Park, Maywood, the edge of Wheaton, and over Dupage county roads to Geneva. Another feeder would start at Chicago Heights and run through Blue Island and up Western avenue to Garfield boulevard, thence east to Michigan avenue, where it would join the marked route from Indiana.

When the great advantages of the marked feeders are taken into consideration it is thought there will be little difficulty in securing the consent of the park boards to place small, neat, and artistic markers at certain intervals along the boulevards.

"For three years the Lincoln Highway association has desired and endeavored to secure the marking of the Lincoln highway feeder routes, looping through Chicago, one of the largest and most important cities on or near the transcontinental road," said Secretary Bement. "It is particularly gratifying to see the interest which is being taken now in Chicago to place the official feeder marker, consisting of a red, white, and red band with the words 'To the Lincoln way' along the route from Dyer, Ind., to Geneva, Ill., which has been selected and agreed upon by all the representative organizations of Chicago and Illinois.

"It is to be hoped that the placing of the markers will be accomplished before the great flow of through traffic on the Lincoln highway begins early in the spring.

"In a large city like Chicago the volume of tourist traffic and the increased business which accompanies it is not so noticeable as in the smaller towns and cities along the route, but it is there, nevertheless, and it is an item to be reckoned with. Salt Lake City newspapers carried the advice last fall that records kept by the local touring bureaus and estimates made by the Commercial club indicated that a sum in the neighborhood of $850,000 of outside money had been left in Salt Lake City from through tourist traffic during the 1916 season. This is but an indication in a small way of what this traffic can and will mean to Chicago.

"The official Lincoln highway marker has been placed on the city streets of Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Oakland, and other large cities on the route. Specially designed markers have been erected through such wealthy suburbs as Sewickley, just east of Pittsburgh, by the local authorities, and there is no reason why a distinctive, satisfactory, artistic design carrying out the standard marker cannot be prepared and utilized in Michigan boulevard and along the other streets followed by the feeder in Chicago. The municipal art commission of New York is now considering a handsomely designed marker produced by the American Institute of Architects for the Lincoln Highway association, to be erected along Forty-second street from Times square to the Forty-second street ferry."

The advantages to Chicago of the marking of the Lincoln highway feeder through the city do not end with the consideration of the incoming tourist traffic. The 90,000 Chicago motorists who every year in larger numbers leave the city for extended tours both east and west will be served by a distinct and easily followed system of marking along those streets which experts have determined as being the best route over which to leave the city.

With the backing and thorough support of the Illinois Highway Improvement association, the Cook County Good Roads association, the Merchants' association, the Hotel Men's Association of Cook County, and other public spirited organizations, it is certain that the interest which has been aroused in Chicago will have secured before the next touring season opens a thoroughly marked distinct route of travel to lead the thousands of tourists from other states through the most beautiful portions of one of the most attractive cities on the transcontinental route.

Boosters Indorse Danville Platform

THE movement for improved roads in Illinois received an added impetus on Thursday when representatives of sixteen Chicago and Cook county organizations met at a luncheon given at the Chicago Athletic association and unanimously indorsed the Danville platform. The plans provide for:

A state bond issue of $60,000,000 for the purpose of constructing a state-wide system of permanent hard roads to connect the different communities and principal cities and towns of the state.

A reasonable increase in the automobile license fees, the greater increase to fall upon the larger and heavier automobiles and trucks.

The appropriation of sufficient money from the general fund of the state to meet the requirements of the federal aid statute for the building of durable roads in Illinois, such roads to be so planned and located as to be of the greatest good to the whole people.

The delegates listened to a talk by President William G. Edens of the Illinois Highway Improvement association, who outlined plans for the building of about 4,000 miles of the principal roads of the state. Those present proved to be the best kind of good roads enthusiasts, and it was agreed that all state interests should unite in the effort to get the general assembly to submit to the people of the state at the next general election a law authorizing the issuing of the desired bonds.

The proposed system would reach practically every county of the state and would connect nearly all of the cities and villages having more than 2,000 population, as well as many smaller places. Among those present were:

William G. Edens, Illinois Highway Improvement association.

Ernest Belfeld, Chicago Hotelmen's association.

George A. Quinlan, county superintendent of highways of Cook county.

A. F. Bement, secretary Lincoln Highway association.

H. C. Austerman, field secretary Lincoln Highway association.

George H. Van Pelt, West Michigan pike.

Newton C. Farr, Chicago real estate board.

A. A. Murray, Cook county real estate board.

L. Wessell Jr., Association of Commerce.

P. J. Dunn, State Street Merchants' association.

Fred I. Gillick, Cook county real estate board.

John Williamson, Michigan Society of Chicago.

Rains Hinder Travel South

HEAVY winter rains have erected an almost impenetrable barrier between Nashville and Chattanooga, Tenn., and between Huntsville and Chattanooga or Rome, Ga. Tourists going south over the Dixie highway are advised to ship their cars between these points.

A committee of the Chattanooga Automobile club and of the Dixie Highway association has been engaged in scouting out all possible roads in order to find a detour which could be used while the Dixie highway between Nashville and Chattanooga is in course of construction. The committee was able to negotiate all of the roads undertaken, but its observation of the experiences of parties of tourists from the north indicates that the difficulties which must be overcome are too severe to warrant any one attempting to travel them before these roads have had an opportunity to thoroughly dry out.

Fully 50 per cent of the tourists using any of these routes have been pulled out one or more times and their mileage record limited to fifty miles a day or less, in addition to the motor troubles encountered as a result of the tremendous strain placed on the cars. How long this situation will last will depend on the weather conditions. It is hardly possible that there will be much improvement during February.

One Boy in Each High School Will This Spring Get a Suit of

LANGHAM—HIGH CLOTHES

IN order to introduce these clothes to the younger young men in this town—the fellows between 15 and 20—we are going to give a suit to that boy in each High School who submits to us the best essay of one hundred words or less on the following subject:

"How Much Does Good Taste in Dress Influence Success?"

Each boy can handle the subject from any angle he desires. But he must keep his essay within one hundred words, write it plainly in ink on one side of the sheet only and deliver it to our store in person.

There are no other restrictions—no other conditions. Here is a chance for every boy in town to show what he can do, to get without cost a suit of these dandy clothes. Langham-High Clothes are just built for you, old man—the only clothes that have ever been expressly made to satisfy all the preferences of High School boys.

The judges, who will decide which boy in each school has written the best essay, will be men prominent in the business and professional life of this city. We hope to announce their names in the near future.

Start at once on your essay. Some boy in your school is going to win a Langham-High—why can't you be that one?

Knights of Boston, members of the contest board; James Allison and T. E. Myers of the Indianapolis motor speedway, Phil McShayne of the Omaha speedway, and David F. Reid of the Chicago speedway; W. C. Willson and F. W. Jencks of the Elgin Road Racing association, C. C. Winningham of the Hudson Motor Car company, F. D. Norman of the Bosch Magneto company, and H. M. Bacon of the B. F. Goodrich company. The racing drivers included Dario Resta, Johnny Aitken, Earl Cooper, Ralph Mulford, Louis Chevrolet, Billy Chandler, and Ira Vail.

The championship awarded Resta included speedway as well as road races, in fact, every class of motor event in which the A. A. A. specified that its points would be attained during 1916. In addition to being proclaimed 1916 champion, Resta also received $5,000 in cash as his portion of the $10,000 B. F. Goodrich cash prize, as well as the Bosch trophy cup and $2,000 in cash given by the Bosch Magneto company. Johnny Aitken, who finished second, received $3,000 of the Goodrich money and $1,000 of the Bosch awards. Eddie Rickenbacher, who finished third, received $2,000 of the Goodrich money and $500 of that posted by Bosch.

Some interesting racing news was announced at the dinner and indicated that the 1917 racing season is likely to be a busy one. Perhaps the most interesting announcement was made by C. C. Winningham of the Hudson company, who stated that his concern would engage actively in the sport. The Hudson fleet will consist of at least five cars and all of them will be entered in the big races of the year. Ralph Mulford will be the Hudson's star driver and Arthur Hill, late of the Peugeot team, will be the manager. Billy Chandler, who has given up active racing, has been appointed master mechanic to look after the cars.

Another interesting announcement was made by James Allison of the Indianapolis speedway, who said that it had been decided to go back to a 500 mile event on Memorial day with a purse of at least $50,000.

Exhaust Echoes

One of the most trying trips ever undertaken in a motor truck is being made by W. H. Paull and James Phillips, who are piloting a Diamond T truck from Chicago to Miami, Fla. The object of the trip is to test the durability of the truck and the possibility of transporting stores over the Dixie highway in case of military necessity.

Announcement is made by the Saxon Motor Car corporation of a system by which its employés share in the profits of the company for the last fiscal year. Under the Saxon company's plan office employés who have been with the company more than ninety days received a bonus of 5 per cent, based on the yearly salary. The factory employés shared on the same basis, except the piece workers, who received 3 per cent. For succeeding years the company proposes to make some changes, basing its awards upon merit. Punctuality and carefulness and other attention to business duties will be taken into consideration.

Announcement is made by the Smith Motor Truck corporation that 27,500 Smith Forma Truck attachments have been sold recently in the territory east of the Mississippi river. The largest individual order came from John Judd, the New England distributor, who has contracted for 3,000 to be shipped before July 1. Other orders range from a few hundred to over 2,000 in some cases.

A low fuel device using a mixture of half gasoline and half kerosene, the invention of J. W. Duntley, is being shown at 1615 Michigan avenue. On a seventy-two mile test over country roads in zero weather a two ton Little Giant truck equipped with the Duntley economizer and loaded to full capacity is reported to have developed a third greater power and made a third greater mileage than had been obtained under ordinary fuel conditions.

Of fifty stock cars which contested in a dealers' endurance run out of Kansas City, Mo., recently the "Wolverine Eight," the new Jackson model, was one of three to make a perfect score. The car, taken from the dealer's sales floor, went the entire distance of 300 miles with a clean score, averaging eighteen miles to the gallon of gasoline.

The two passenger Madison roadster has been discontinued and in its place comes the new "Dolly Madison" four passenger roadster. The five and seven passenger touring models will be continued. The original "Dolly Madison" was christened by Barney Oldfield in 1915 at the Indianapolis speedway races.

"I don't like to tell tales out of school, and everybody in the trade knows I'm no knocker," says R. C. Rueschaw, sales manager of the Reo Motor Car company, "but I will say this: If automobile manufacturers would pay less attention to the ticker tape and more to the real business of making and selling cars there wouldn't be nearly the railroad congestion nor the 'car shortage' there is."

John R. Morron, formerly of Chicago, now president of the Atlas Portland Cement company and director in many banks and other enterprises, recently has been made a director of the Maxwell Motor company.

The latest event of significance in the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company's program for promoting a better understanding between the company and its alien workers and of fostering allegiance and love for "the land of the free," is the formation of the Goodyear Cosmopolitan club. This club is composed of workmen representing twenty different nationalities.

Bad weather was all that stopped the Lincoln highway crew of sign painters, who have spent the entire season in remarking and standardizing the road signs along the route of the transcontinental highway. Six states were crossed and the marking ended in the seventh, Nebraska, after a total distance of 1,750 miles. About 8,000 markers were placed.

FEAR OF DEATH.

A boy, boxing in Albany, was killed by his opponent and Gov. Whitman says that he will send a special message to the New York legislature asking for the repeal of the Frawley boxing law.

The death of a boxer proves that boxing is dangerous human error just as the drowning of a swimmer would prove that swimming must be prohibited by law. If a skater went into an air hole and did not come out alive, a law would be needed to prohibit the manufacture and use of skates.

If a racing automobile went into the ditch and killed driver and mechanic, a law would be needed to prohibit the manufacture and use of automobiles, at least for racing.

Occasionally a boy is killed in a baseball game, being hit by a pitched or batted ball or by a bat thrown by the batter. Curiously we do not consider legislation to prohibit the playing of baseball. If a boy is killed playing football we do not consider whether the game should be tolerated. It is prohibited in certain colleges and schools.

The hazard in baseball is not so great as the hazard in football, but it is not negligible. The hazard in swimming is appreciated, but we urge youth to learn to swim.

The inconsistencies which might be extended in detail establish two facts: One that we do not all the time regard a hazard as inherently an evil, and the other that thought is merely static convention. We fix an idea and are governed by it.

It is immoral for the community to permit a boy to be killed in the boxing ring. It is proper to permit him to take the chance of being killed in the lake. We urge him to take the chance in the lake. Cramps do not respect life any more than a blow beneath a weak heart. We conventionalize life and determine how it should be ordered by dogmatic assertions rather than by reasoned rules.

The Cook county hospital at this moment is a more terrifying spectacle to compassion and tenderness than any well ordered military hospital in France. We comfortably deny that the Cook county hospital has any real, significant relation to life. Life, barring the cruelty of man and the malevolence of leadership which finds expression in a military hospital, would be a serenity. The Cook county hospital, quite as monstrous a collection of physical horrors as a military hospital, does not exist in our thought.

The whole neurotic philosophy is based upon denial of the facts of life, but pain, anguish, terrors are unescapable. They cannot be avoided. A pacifist cannot avoid death or the toothache. He can unfit himself to accept the fact or bear the pain.

Force rules the world and the end of the world is extinction. Death is the rule of progress. It is not the worst thing in life, although it be the end of it. Fear of it may be the worst thing. The very processes which compel the mind to consider how to avoid a fate may be more destructive spiritually than the fate itself.

Fear of death and a code of conduct based upon this fear will destroy the people who submit to it. Such a code is based upon gross materialism, selfishness, and cowardice. It produces a fear of death that is worse than death. Life is an acceptance of hazard. It cannot be morally or spiritually sound if its desideratum be avoidance and nothing else. That plus sensuality is a rabbit's idea.

ENTERING THE EUROPEAN TANGLE.

During the first twenty years of American existence the chief effort of our statesmen was to teach European nations that we were not a part of any balance of power. They did not learn easily. There was a French party and a British party in our congress. There was open recruiting and outfitting of ships for both belligerents in our cities and ports. Congressmen were subsidized by foreign governments. Both France and England wanted us as partisans. The country was split.

The answer is that men of that time were colonial and were accustomed to think in European terms. But before going into an entanglement which involves adjudging one or another nation iniquitous, sending troops to punish some nation, whether or not it had harmed us, regardless of trade relations or blood relations, we should ask ourselves whether we are any more capable of judging as a nation than we were in those early days.

Our experience in the early days of this war should make us doubt ourselves. We have no unity yet. We are still colonial. When a goodly part of us rejoiced in the sinking of the Lusitania and another thrills over German helmets exhibited at a bazaar, consuls have to be imprisoned for connection with bomb plots, and recruiting posters are discovered in our border towns, there is no reason for expecting that we should unanimously name any nation felon and set about to punish it.

We have been subject to every kind of propaganda, for and against every nation having connection with the present European war, and our opinions have been formed largely by what propagandists have told us. Foreign countries can organize opinion here quite as easily as they ever did. A sympathetic hearing among some section of our miscellaneous citizenship can always be won.

There is no reason to hope that foreign nations will not continue to fill us with their opinions. Whether a nation is a felon nation or not, some part of our citizenship will not believe it. And they will object strenuously to any action based on such judgment. If Americans could agree about anything, if we were a nation with a fairly unanimous set of prejudices or judgments, it would not be unpleasant to mix ourselves with European politics. It would be exhilarating, if dangerous. But if we are looking for domestic turmoil, the league of nations is a good way to get it.

Senator Borah's resolution lays the basis for one of the most important discussions ever held in congress. We hope it will present a minimum of vague thought and histrionic sentiment and a maximum of sound patriotic thought.

THE OTHER WAY ROUND.

If we look eastward from our coasts to the war lines we see two liberal nations fighting two nations less liberal. Germany may be more advanced in the art of government than England and France, but her political philosophy is less liberal. Political control rests among the select, as it does in Austria, though in the latter country the selection is less felicitous. Austria cannot be thought of as a liberal nation. Medievalism hangs moldily to her political thought except where Germany and the war have brushed it clean.

But if we look at the war the other way around the world it is not by any means a simple struggle between the more and the less liberal. We can understand how Germany talks so sincerely about saving European civilization. Opposing her on that side nearest us are the two least liberal countries in the world. Russia and Japan profess belief in absolutism and approximate it. Democracy has scarcely been planted in either country. Neither was manured by the French revolution. Feudalism is only decades gone, not centuries.

We see the two extremes fighting the mean—democracy and absolutism fighting a compromise between democracy and absolutism. Circumstance brought the allies together and will probably keep them together during the progress of the war. But there are signs of a break.

Japan has not consummated an alliance with Russia, so far as we know, but thought in Japan is turning toward Russia and away from England. There is an understanding between them and informed Japanese declare that further friendship is to be expected. Japan also expects increasing coolness with England. England's interests in the orient irk the Japanese. Japan's ambitions in the east frighten the English. Japan is better disposed toward Germany than toward England.

It is difficult for Americans to conceive of any alignment of nations other than that which now exists in world politics. That is why the possibility of a Japanese and German alliance or arrangement has scarcely entered our heads. It has entered the heads of the Japanese. They have not only talked and written about it extensively, but they have maneuvered themselves into a position where such an alliance can be easily accepted.

Publicists of other nations have remade the maps of the world on a basis of the victory of their causes. Japan's imaginings have included the possibility of defeat of the allied cause.

Mr. Kawakami, an American Japanese who writes diligently, explains in the current Atlantic Monthly how an understanding between Japan, Russia, and Germany may come about. If England is unwilling or unable to satisfy Russian desires at the peace conference, he believes the event is not merely possible but probable.

For Japan will choose Russia in preference to England. Russia is necessary to Japan. England is merely irritating. Irritation with England is, in fact, one of the outstanding Japanese feelings at present. It began when the British sent an expeditionary force to aid in the reduction of Tsing Tao. That seemed insulting want of confidence. English opposition to the Japanese demands on China seemed to cheat Japan out of her reward. English unwillingness to share the Yangtse valley with the Japs seemed uncalled for selfishness. The Anglo-Japanese treaty is popularly described as "unilateral"—hopelessly one sided.

Combined with this discontent there has been a growing admiration of Germany. German prisoners have been treated with conspicuous honor. The Japanese press has been devoid of hatred. Japan knows that Russia alone is not enough and there is a widespread feeling that if Russia and England cannot hit it off together, Germany would be a satisfactory substitute.

The arrangement is by no means an impossibility, even though it is not comforting to American optimism. At any rate, when the nations are shuffled again the grouping will not be the same. It may be Japan and Russia with China a vassal between them; England and France and Italy associated; and the German conception of Mittel-Europa approximated. What will be our situation in such a world?

CONGRESSIONAL SUCCESS.

The six thousand inhabitants of Bristol, Va., are rejoicing in their congressman, Mr. C. B. Slemp. He has done what he could to provide for Bristol in the divvy of pork postoffices. An item of $80,000 has been incorporated in the public buildings bill now before congress.

If the bill passes Bristol, Va., will be spared the humiliation of seeing just across the street and the state line the $150,000 postoffice which adorns Bristol, Tenn. There are a thousand more persons in the Tennessee town than there are in the Virginia town, although geographically the two municipalities are one.

"The building of such a house here," comments the local newspaper correspondent, "creates another unique distinction in that it will give Bristol two public buildings."

Two public buildings, two postmasters for Bristol! Congressman Slemp is a great man.

Editorial of the Day

THE DISTILLERY IN THE HOME.

[From the New York Sun.]

A writer in the Medical Times not only takes a gloomy view of possible nation-wide prohibition but suggests that it would add complications to our domestic life:

"Do we not know from past experience that where prohibition is enforced the people will make their own spirits? Prohibition could never be enforced, for it would be impossible for any government to police all homes. The making of spirits is a simple matter, requiring no more intelligence than bread making."

There is temptation here to suggest that if only a moderate quality of mind is necessary for the making of good bread; then thousands of our bread cooks are intellectually subnormal; but it is more to the point to consider the prospect of every rebellious home being equipped with a distillery. To begin with, unless there should be a slump in the copper market the expense for worms and retorts would be huge. Again, there is little enough room in New York apartments as it is. If the still should come in the phonograph would have to go out. Most important of all, would man or wife be the moonshiner? The operation would require some knowledge of mechanics and chemistry. Your average New York man looks upon a screw driver as complicated, and compared with his wife he knows nothing of chemistry at all. Flat dwelling wives are so busy now that they do not go in for the bread making which the medical writer holds so slightly. Would they be willing to give up the weekly matinée to compound a sour mash for their husbands' tipple?

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

HENRY VANDYKE, who has resigned the post of American minister plenipotentiary for the Netherlands, which he had occupied during the last four years, was subjected to discourtesy by the German government on the occasion of his recent departure from Holland.

In accordance with the custom in such instances, when he left The Hague, after presenting his letters of recall to Queen Wilhelmina, the principal dignitaries of the Dutch state and his fellow members of the foreign diplomatic corps assembled at the railroad station to bid him a last farewell.

All his colleagues were present, save those of the kaiser's legation in Holland. Every representative of the German government was conspicuous by his absence, and it was interpreted by all present, as well as by the Dutch public, as intentional rudeness on the part of the foreign department at Berlin. For it is believed in Holland that the German minister at The Hague, his secretaries and his attachés, would not have ventured upon such a demonstration against the United States unless they had received instructions to that effect from headquarters.

An extraordinary sensation was created the other day at Rome by a wonderful sermon by the famous Franciscan preacher, Father Michael Angelo Draghetti, in the Church of San Andrea della Valle, which was thronged with a congregation in which officers and soldiers of the army were extensively represented. The preacher declared at the end of his sermon:

"I pray for our soldiers and sailors on land and on sea. For their fathers, their mothers, their wives, their sons and daughters; for their country and for true Christian civilization. That they may face the enemy like walls of steel; and I pray that they may have victory, which will bring peace to our country, and a victorious peace to all our allies."

The sensation was heightened when the friar added that before preaching he had knelt at the feet of Pope Benedict XV., who had encouraged him to tell the faithful of Rome and of all Italy to pray for victorious peace—not for a peace without victory. As he concluded the entire congregation rose and led by the military element made the sacred edifice ring with enthusiastic applause.

Among the titles inherited by Emperor Charles on his accession to the throne of the dual empire two months ago is that of King of Jerusalem, which is shared by King Alfonso of Spain and also by the former bourbon kings of Naples and of the two Sicilies.

In reply to a letter from a reader as to why Emperor Charles should bear this title of King of Jerusalem, I would say that it has been in use by the sovereigns of the Hapsburg monarchy only since the marriage of Duke Francis of Lorraine and Grand Duke of Tuscany (who figures in history as Emperor Francis I.) to the great Empress Marie Therese. The Dukes of Lorraine had always made use of the title of King of Jerusalem ever since it was bestowed upon that Godfrey of Bouillon, Duke of Lorraine, the leader of the first crusade, and who after the successful siege of Jerusalem was crowned as king of the holy city.

It is recalled that he refused to be crowned with a golden crown, declaring that where the founder of Christianity had been crowned with a crown of thorns it was not meet that any other king of Jerusalem should be crowned with a crown of gold, or with the laurels of a victor. Consequently, he, too, was solemnly crowned with a crown of thorns.

On his death, in 1100, he was succeeded by his brother Baldwin as King of Jerusalem; and from that time on all the Dukes of Lorraine were also Kings of Jerusalem, until they became merged in the house of Hapsburg through the marriage of Duke Francis to Empress Marie Therese.

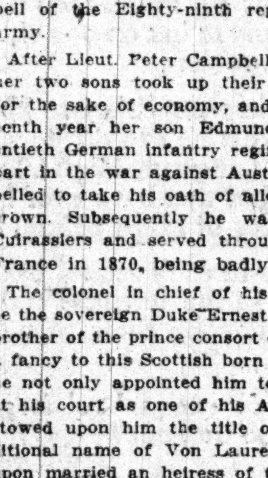
Every transatlantic visitor to England who has stayed in or around Windsor during the last thirty years will remember a stalwart and tall and soldierly looking man who used to go by the name of Baron Campbell. The baron, who stood high in the favor of Queen Victoria, and who was always treated by the royal occupants of Windsor castle and of Cumberland lodge as a near and valued neighbor, has just been gathered to his fathers at an advanced old age at his Windsor home of Rosmead.



He was, in spite of his foreign title, a Scotchman, and one of the Campbells of Craignish, and a son of Lieut. Peter Campbell of the Eighty-ninth regiment of the English army.

After Lieut. Peter Campbell's death his widow and her two sons took up their residence in Germany for the sake of economy, and on reaching his eighteenth year her son Edmund enlisted in the Seventieth German infantry regiment, and as such took part in the war against Austria in 1866, being compelled to take his oath of allegiance to the Prussian crown. Subsequently he was transferred to the Cuirassiers and served throughout the war against France in 1870, being badly wounded.

The colonel in chief of his regiment happened to be the sovereign Duke Ernest of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, brother of the prince consort of England; and taking a fancy to this Scottish born officer of his regiment, he not only appointed him to an honorary position at his court as one of his A. D. C.'s, but also bestowed upon him the title of baron, with the additional name of Von Laurentz. The baron thereupon married an heiress of the Windsor district, a Miss Budgett of Stoke Park, and, going on the retired list, settled down to the life of an English country gentleman at Rosmead.

At all official functions at Windsor castle, especially when there were any members of the reigning house of Prussia staying there, he would be a conspicuous figure in his German Cuirassier uniform, adorned with the iron cross which he had won in 1870, the Prussian red eagle, and other foreign decorations.

On the outbreak of the present war it was discovered that at the time he entered the German army he had been naturalized as a German citizen, and as such he was about to be either interned or deported, when the royal family intervened in his behalf and permission was given for him to be renaturalized as a British subject.

In spite of this and of the fact that since 1876 his entire life had been spent in England, he felt that as a German baron and as a former officer of the German army he was regarded by his English countrymen with suspicion and withdrew from all his accustomed haunts and from society. The depression from which he suffered hastened his death.

HEALTH WORK IN BELGIUM.

IN a recent number of the Journal of the American Medical Association Dr. W. P. Lucas of San Francisco gives an account of health conditions of civilians in Belgium at the end of the second year of the war. This report is interesting because of what it tells about the Belgians and also because of the conclusions which can be drawn as to the effects of certain social and economic conditions on health.

The darkest picture painted by Dr. Lucas relates to the increase of consumption in all parts of the kingdom. The reports from Brussels indicate that consumption has about doubled in that city. Dr. Verhogen reports that his hospital ward, which normally has ninety-eight beds, now has 106; all of the beds are full, and consumption predominates. One-third of the cases are cases of quick consumption. Rapidity of progress characterizes the disease. Many persons who were thought to have been cured have relapsed and developed the disease in a rapidly progressive form.

The reports from the children's hospitals show that the disease is more than twice as prevalent in children as before the war. The report from the throat hospital is that tuberculosis of the throat has increased 150 per cent.

Dr. Tieren of Antwerp reports that in his city cases of consumption have become more frequent and more malignant; cures are much harder to obtain and old cases apparently cured for five years or longer are reappearing in large numbers. In Namur the consumption death rate has practically doubled.

Dr. Gengon, secretary of the National Tuberculosis society, gathered opinions from all parts of Belgium. He says that the information obtained is unanimously to the effect that the spread of tuberculosis has progressed among the poorer classes and that among the children of these classes the surgical type of tuberculosis has increased markedly. Tuberculosis of the glands in children has increased from five to ten fold.

The reports from the large manufacturing centers, such as Liege, Brussels, Antwerp, Ghent, Mons, Charleroi, and Verviers, show the increase in glandular tuberculosis especially. In one school in Brussels 305 out of 485 boys have developed enlarged glands in the neck.

What are the fundamental reasons? Poverty and poor food supply, resulting in undernutrition.

The average amount of fat consumed varies from 300 to 450 grams a day. The adult population is not getting enough fat, but the growing population is suffering especially. The average daily consumption of meat and other forms of protein is far too low. The milk supply is scanty and the quality is poor.

It has been noted that the children in school are under weight. Furthermore, they are not growing. The persons registering at the clinics average about ten pounds under weight.

The efforts at relief are largely in the direction of furnishing food. The children in school are given a lunch that is as substantial as circumstances will permit.

The consumptive adults respond readily to good feeding. The lesson is that consumption is largely dependent upon undernutrition. Naturally there has been a decrease in birth rate. Births are registered in Belgium, and in consequence the facts are obtainable. The decrease in certain cities is as follows: Brussels, 48 per cent; Antwerp, 41; Louvain, 41; Heverle, 41; Namur, 42; Mons, 36; and in Liege, 41. A large part of this is the result of disturbed family relations, but the lowering of nutrition and the fear as to the outlook for the future of the people are large factors.

The newly born babies are not of normal size or strength. Dr. Dauve of Antwerp reports that the average weight of newly born babies is about two-thirds normal and the average one inch less in height. The average gain in weight per week of young babies is about an ounce and a half.

It is significant that the mothers are not able to nurse their babies as long as formerly, nor is their milk as rich. Before the war the mothers registered at the national canteens nursed on an average of nine months. Now they give milk for a scant seven months. In the maternal canteens mothers are given substantial meals for two or three months before the birth of the baby and for several months thereafter.

The decrease in the quality and quantity of mother's milk in these women shows how essential is an abundance of good food and peace of mind.

Before the war nearly 5 per cent of the children attending the clinics had rickets. In 1916 the percentage was over 21.

The preservation of child life has become a patriotic duty in Belgium. In spite of all the adverse influences, not only has the baby death rate decreased, but it is lower than in New York, Chicago, Boston, or any other extremely large American city. In Brussels in 1908 the baby death rate was 124. In 1916 it was 94. In Namur the baby death rate dropped from 150 to 84 between 1908 and 1916.

The death rate from summer complaint is markedly decreasing. In Antwerp the number of deaths from summer complaint per year just before the war was 749; during 1915 it was 219. The decrease in Brussels was about as great, also that in Liege.

While the figures as to baby death rates do not stand close analysis, it is plain that there has been material betterment. It is worth while to attempt to discover the reasons, which are in part as follows:

1. Thirteen thousand nursing and expectant mothers are being fed.
2. There are 329 canteens for infants in which 52,000 children under 3 years of age are being given milk and cereals.
3. There is an extensive system of visiting nurses doing infant welfare work in the homes. Much educational work in the care of babies is being done.

Dr. Lucas says: Both of these types of canteens have undoubtedly had a great influence on the reduction of infant mortality in Belgium. There is no question that today more is being done for the mother and the child than was ever done before. Previous to the war there were only two national canteens in Belgium. Now there are over 329 canteens caring for infants. There is medical supervision and regulation of the dietaries of mothers and babies to a degree unthought of before the war.

While attention has been centered on children under 3 years of age, older children have not been neglected. There are canteens to give food and medical care to debilitated children between 3 and 17 years of age. The children are selected by medical examination. Each child in a canteen is given a card on which is entered his or her weight each month, the results of physical examinations and the diet prescribed. There are 25,000 children in these canteens. For awhile the upper age limit of the children in these canteens was 14. Last July it was extended to 17.

These facts show that even in the face of the severest economic conditions the baby death rate can be materially decreased. Dr. Lucas finds that the well to do are getting along fairly well. They are getting enough to eat and are in good health. The agricultural classes are also in satisfactory condition. They are getting good prices for what they produce and they are keeping enough of their produce at home to nourish themselves. Dr. Lucas makes the statement that this class will be better off after the war than they were before it began.

Great privations are the lot of the industrial and minor commercial classes, which constitute nearly two-thirds of the entire population of Belgium. These groups are living on the narrowest margin of dietary necessities. The best that can be said is that they get enough fat and proteid to be able to live and do a fair day's work.

The country has been remarkably free from epidemics. In this respect this war has been unique in human history. Nowhere on the western front has the civilian population suffered from devastating epidemic. Typhoid and other forms of contagious and epidemic diseases have been even less than normal in Belgium during the last two years.

Dr. Lucas divides the responsibility for this satisfactory condition between the unusual care for health and physical welfare displayed by the people themselves, the unusual devotion and skill of the medical men in Belgium, and "the watchful eye of the army of occupation in the protection of its own interests, with the military restrictions of movement of the population."

The brunt of the burden of relief has been borne by the commission for the relief in Belgium. The cessation of the commission for relief in its labors for a single month would unquestionably bring physical disaster to the industrial and lower commercial classes.

PREVENTION OF HEMORRHOIDS.

R. Y. V. writes: "My experience with curing hemorrhoids may be of benefit to others likewise inflicted. I seem to have inherited constipation, but learned early not to fight it with drugs, as drugs call for more drugs. Although I managed by eating coarse food to get the better of the fault, yet I hadn't learned that straining at the stool was decidedly bad practice. Consequently I found myself inflicted with two small hemorrhoids. I immediately consulted a physician, but he seemed more interested in treating the effect than the cause. I therefore took my own case in hand, added two bran muffins to my bill of fare, including a paraffin wafer eaten about half an hour before the midday meal. I found this procedure furnished the necessary lubricant for natural bowel action, and within a month the hemorrhoids had entirely disappeared. Having no desire to be forced to eat paraffin wafers indefinitely I discontinued their use, depending on proper eating to bring the necessary results. I find that if bran bread, bran muffins, bran toast, or bran itself is eaten with other food its unpleasant, irritating effect is done away with."

EYE OPERATION SAFE.

L. W. writes: "My left eye has been weak since birth and I slowly am becoming cross eyed. My eyes are straight in general, but when I meet somebody I know I cannot look straight. When I am alone or reading a book my eyes are straight. I am thinking now about an operation, and the question now is, Can I expect to have my left eye satisfactorily straightened? Do you think that problem can be solved satisfactorily with a knife? Is chloroform used in this operation?"

REPLY.

There is a reasonably good chance your trouble can be cured by wearing glasses and that operation may not be required. Much depends on whether the trouble is with the lens or with the muscle. If operation is required it is a simple one. Results from operation are nearly always satisfactory. The operation is generally done under local anesthesia. Do not postpone having your eye attended to.

TREATMENT IS O. K.

Mrs. E. J. C. writes: "My husband is taking the juice of half a lemon in a cup of hot water with a pinch of salt every morning before breakfast. We were told that it acted directly on the liver, and counteracts biliousness. He stops it for a while and when the biliousness returns begins taking it again, and is always better when taking it. But we are told that it will thin the blood, and his circulation is poor anyway. Do you think the lemon habit is injurious as he uses it? His age is over 60."

REPLY.

You must not believe all that you are told. Lemon juice does not act directly on the liver. It has some tendency to overcome constipation (and that is about the same thing as biliousness). It will not thin the blood, whatever that means. He should continue using lemon juice. He will need it to overcome a tendency to scurvy which is nearly universal toward the end of the winter.

DON'T OVERDO IT.

Mrs. H. H. S. writes: "I have two children subject to bronchial colds—one 3, the other 10 years old. What would you advise as a spray for their throats when hoarse to prevent a cold? Should one continue this spray if they developed a bronchial cough?"

REPLY.

It is not good judgment to spray throats as a routine procedure. Keep the children in the open air as much as possible but do not try to toughen them by exposure. Ventilate their bedrooms and playrooms. Keep them away from children with colds.

NEED NOT RECORD WILL.

Chicago, Jan. 30.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—My brother desires to make a will in favor of a widowed sister. If he writes same in the presence of two friends and they sign their names below his as witnesses would such a will be legal? Does the will have to be recorded? M.

The witnesses must sign at the request of the testator in his presence and in the presence of each other. They must take no interest under the will. If the estate is of any size you should employ an attorney so as to be sure that you are accomplishing your purpose. The will need not be recorded.

NIECE TAKES PARENT'S SHARE.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—An aunt living in Michigan dies without making a will. She is survived by one brother and a niece. What is the niece's share in the estate? M. B.

If aunt died leaving no husband, only one brother and only one niece or nephew, brother would take half and niece or nephew half. In other words niece would take her father's or mother's share.

ALLEY SHOULD NOW BE CLEAR.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The first alley north of Fullerton avenue, between Sheffield and Seminary avenue, is being used as a dumping ground for ashes by residents and a furniture company's plant. This alley was paved some time ago and the residents who have taken pride in the neat appearance of the premises feel that offenders should be restrained in this practice. T. F.

Weekly ash service is now given to this alley. Cinders have been stored on the property of the furniture company and have been hauled by private ash collectors. Notice has been served on offending persons to stop dumping in the alley.

HALF-MASTING FLAG ON FEDERAL BUILDING.

Chicago, Jan. 24.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Why was not the flag at half mast on the postoffice out of respect to the late Admiral Dewey? Reader.

The rules governing national flags at buildings displayed from treasury department buildings are as follows: The flag of the United States shall be hoisted over all public buildings under the control of the treasury department during the hours of business, except when stormy weather prevents the display. The national ensign will be displayed at half-mast on Memorial day, on all public buildings under the control of the treasury department, and at such times and on such buildings as may at any time be directed by executive order. On Jan. 18th at noon a telegram was forwarded by the secretary of the treasury to hoist the flag at half-mast until after Admiral Dewey's funeral. This telegram was received at 3 p. m. As the flag staff on the dome of the Federal building was condemned and a contract let to George R. Carpenter & Co. for the erection of new flag staffs at the entrance of the building this office, upon receipt of the telegram immediately got in touch with that company to hoist the flag at half-mast on the condemned flag staff in order to comply with instructions received from the secretary of the treasury. On the morning of the 19th the flag was hoisted at half-mast. This office complied strictly with the rules of the department and for that reason the flag was not hoisted at half-mast until instructions were received to that effect.

THE PUBLIC WELFARE DEPARTMENT.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Mr. Merriam seems to be now opposed to the department of public welfare of Chicago. Every reason which he advanced in favor of establishing this department is as valid now as at the time it was made. It has performed a considerable amount of valuable service to the community. An attempt to classify the results pertaining to the St. Charles school by looking up the career of the boys who have left that institution, the investigation of loan sharks, the attempt to localize the districts in Chicago from which the greater number of delinquents come, is a valuable social asset.

The head of the department under the present system will always be of a political nature. This position should be filled by one qualified by a civil service appointment, but all this is beside the question. It is a bad principle and is bad politics to destroy a useful department because some people may be hostile toward the head of the institution whose tenure of office is at best of short duration.

THE UNSINGABLE NATIONAL SONG.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I have just read your "O, Say," editorial, and I am moved to let you know that there are others. "The Star Spangled Banner"—my hat is off to it, my heart throbs with patriotic emotion at sight of it, but blowed if I ever could sing it. As you say, "some time a great song will come," for songs, like citizens, are born, not made. Next to the immortal Lincoln, George F. Root, with his "Battle Cry of Freedom" and "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching," did more to settle matters then under consideration than any other force.

STORING COAL.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The railroads have been blamed for a lack of cars to move coal, when, as a matter of fact, they have plenty of cars to handle the traffic if it moved in equal monthly volume. Under present conditions retail dealers cannot afford to make the investment required to stock any considerable quantity of coal during the summer months.

The only practical means of preventing a recurrence of the present shortage is the storage of coal at or near the point of consumption by consumers and dealers. This can best be secured by seasonal freight rates, as suggested by Mr. C. G. Hall, in an address before the annual meeting of the railway fuel agents.

An advance of 25 per cent in freight rates in September, October, and November, and of 50 per cent during the winter months would, no doubt, be a sufficient incentive to store coal in spring or summer.

BORROWING UNDER THE FARM LOAN ACT.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Mr. Frank R. Wilson of the federal farm loan bureau, in an article in the United Press, comes forward with an interesting sample of "high finance." "Suppose John Smith, a renter, wants to buy 100 acres of land valued at [illegible] an acre and has not the money to buy it. Under the federal farm loan act Mr. Smith would be entitled to borrow [illegible] of the appraised value, if this appraised value should be the same as the purchase price. This would leave [illegible] to be handled by a second mortgage. The amount borrowed under the farm loan act could be paid to the original owner of the land and a second mortgage executed for the difference.

"The original owner would thus get a satisfactory payment down, and if he had confidence in the purchaser he would probably be willing to accept a second mortgage for the balance, divided into ten annual payments."

The above is illuminating if it is a fair sample of the intelligence of the federal farm loan bureau. The original owner of the land, if he wishes to mortgage it, can borrow the first [illegible] through a hundred channels and probably also through a federal land bank when these institutions commence operations, but why should he deed his farm over to a tenant and receive no remuneration for it except a very doubtful second mortgage? This rather important oversight remains unexplained in Mr. Wilson's article.

TO THE PURE ALL THINGS ARE IMPURE.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Is it not possible for the authority that appoints the board of film censors to appoint only such as have clean and normal minds? When the work of a man as clean and sweet as Mr. Elmendorf is impugned and banned it can only mean that our censors are in dire need of examination by a board of competent alienists.

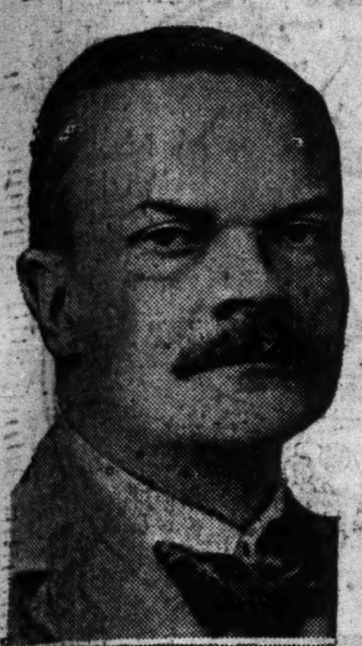
THE BUSYBODY

By Edward Goldbeck



Somewhere in his essays Macaulay says that it is possible to get along with a tyrant, but not with a busybody. During the first years of the reign of William II. I have often thought of these words. The young emperor, stimulated by an ardent and noble ambition, but overestimating his gifts as a ruler and undervaluing the difficulties which confront the government of a large empire, wanted to do everything himself. He had inherited this inclination from his ancestors. Frederic William I., Frederic the Great, Frederic William III., and even William I., when he came to the throne, had felt like that and acted on this principle. It had been beneficial under Frederic William I. (1713-1740), because at that time it was still possible to administer Prussia as if it were a large estate. Conditions were relatively simple, and the king, who without any doubt was the best administrator of his time, could extend his personal supervision over the whole country.

Frederic the Great followed his example, but although he was by far the greater man—in fact, the only man of genius the Hohenzollern dynasty has ever produced—the system proved obsolete and obnoxious under his rule. When he had closed his eyes and a weak man had taken his place, the wheels of the engine soon became rusty and did not function any more with the old speed and accuracy. As he had been Providence incarnated, the only tradition he had left was that of obedience. Everybody looked up to the throne and expected guidance and inspiration from that exalted place. That is what Queen Louise hinted at when she said that the Prussians "were resting on their laurels." The real defect was that the king was omnipotent and that the subjects sincerely believed in his superior wisdom.

Frederic William III. was a very modest man, but he too felt that in his quality as a king he ought to be the originator as well as the ultimate judge of any new measure, and he resented interference very bitterly. When Queen Louise for the first time dared to utter a divergent political opinion, the king without saying a word left the room and in a few minutes returned with a pair of half finished stockings which he silently put on the lap of his royal spouse. The queen had to apologize humbly before her husband forgave her unruliness.

Many years later when the Hohenzollern already had gone through the terrible experiences of 1848, King William I. said to Bismarck: "I shall be my own minister of war and foreign policies. I understand that." Then Bismarck explained to him that the times when the king could direct all the details of government were irretrievably gone. But when William II. ascended the throne he labored under the same illusion and he was confirmed in it by the disgusting toadyism of that period, during which the whole nation weltered in adulation of the brilliant young emperor. The chancellor and the ministers were only his tools, a man like Gen. Caprivi had no idea of the responsibility with which the constitution invests the first official of the empire. He took the military point of view and obeyed without any attempt at an opinion of his own. In later years the opposition against this personal rule grew so strong that the emperor had to give in. His merits as a wonderful stimulator shall not be depreciated, but there is no doubt about the fact that in the first two decades of his reign he was that busbody of whom the English historian is speaking.

THE revolution of 1848, which was rather harmless compared to the French eruption of 1789, had to come, because life had grown to be complicated, and the royal conception of government had remained simple. The king considered himself as a father and his subjects as children. He was eager to do his paternal duty, he was kind or strict, just as it seemed to suit his educational purpose, and he did not see that the family had become too large and the children grown up. But the children did what they are bound to do, they emancipated themselves and limited the paternal power. "Is the king really omniscient?" the agitators asked.

O, no! He is simply mortal, he is in most cases a man of mediocre intellect, and his information, while of a wider range than that of the average man, lacks solidity and thoroughness. He is an amateur in all the domains of national life, and he ought to rely on the judgment of his ministers, who should be well trained experts and men who know the needs and the wishes of the nation. The sovereign has no time to study all the intricate issues of modern political and economical life. If he has the gift of practical psychology, if he knows how to find reliable, clever, industrious men, men of vision and initiative, he has done enough. Let him rule, but not govern. To govern is a difficult art and a man must give his life to it, if he wants to do useful work. Even so he will have to remain a specialist, otherwise he will never be able to master his field as it ought to be mastered.

The constant appeal to the king as the instance of unchallengeable decision, as the holder of divine inspiration, is degrading and nonsensical. The poor man is so overworked with a thousand different things that he cannot concentrate on any one of them. This kind of monarchical government is nothing but dilettantism and the reverse of that scientific government which should be the ideal of our scientific era. It would be a sounder plan to disburden the king from all petty affairs and to give him time for serious work in the most important national issues. We do not want a shadow on the throne, we want an energetic man who makes his personality felt, but to be efficient he must understand that it is necessary to lessen the number of his rights and duties, to limit the range of his activities. If he is a man of insight he will see that this loss is a gain and that his position is not weakened, but strengthened, by giving up the false pretense of omnipotence and ubiquity.

Under present conditions it is but natural that he should very often act inconsistently, that important matters should drag for years, because he cannot come to a conclusion. His brain must be a chaos and it is hard to understand how he can resist the nervous strain of saying fifty times a day: "Yes!" or "No!" in answer to urgent questions about which he knows nothing or very little. Will he ever find the courage to narrow his activities, to renounce the semblance of power, so that he may get more of its essence? Will he ever understand the necessity of delegating his privileges to other men whom he can rely upon so that he may reserve all his individual faculties for the great issues of our times? If he cannot be made to realize this necessity, we are in for a period of anarchy, and it is difficult to say what may emerge out of such an earthquake.

THERE is no royal ruler in this country. You know the French proverb: Il y a quelqu' un qui a plus d'esprit que Monsieur de Talleyrand et c'est Monsieur Tout le Monde. (There is somebody who is cleverer than the cleverest diplomat and that is Mr. Everybody.) A ruler never lacks flatterers. In this free country Mr. Everybody rules. He is considered omniscient and omnipotent. A hundred times a day he is called up by the newspapers of the country to put his foot down and exert his will. Millions of voices appeal to the ruler to favorize this or that new measure and assure him that if he refuses the country will go to mischief.

But is Mr. Everybody really omniscient? Alas! he is a simple mortal, harassed with a thousand worries, trying very hard to make both ends meet, more interested in the high cost of living than in any other national issue. His political knowledge is that of the average straphanger. If he lives in Evanston he will be a little better informed than an inhabitant of Ravenswood, because the trip to town is a little longer and will allow him to read one more editorial. He is a man of mediocre intellect and his horizon is necessarily narrow, as he never was rich enough to travel through foreign countries, to study with sufficient leisure and a quiet mind, and as he has only lived in one set of human society.

Would it not be better if this ruler who is almost absolutely ignorant about the most important political matters would rely on the judgment of public servants who should be well trained experts and men who know a little more than he does about the needs of the nation? We saw that Mr. Everybody has no time to study all the labyrinthic issues of modern political and economical life. If he has the gift of practical psychology, if he knows how to find reliable, clever, industrious men, men of vision and initiative, he has done enough. Let him rule, but not govern. To govern is a difficult art and a man must give his life to it if he wants to do useful work. Even so he will have to remain a specialist, otherwise he will never be able to master his field as it ought to be mastered.

The constant appeal to his majesty Mr. Everybody as the instance of ultimate decision, as the holder of divine inspiration, is misleading and nonsensical. The poor man is so overworked with a thousand different items that he cannot concentrate on one of them. This kind of popular government is nothing but dilettantism and the reverse of that scientific government which, of course, is the ideal of our scientific era.

TWO remedies are recommended. The one is socialism. If you listen to the socialists, the constitution as the fathers made it is a fake. The "fathers" were all rich people and they only worked for class interests. They were grafters, most of them, unscrupulous speculators in land, scrips and public securities, and knew how to profit by a governmental "leak." Their constitution is permeated by suspicion against the plain people. We have no democratic government. Those who pretend that Mr. Everybody rules use the same sycophantic talk with which the members of a powerful Junker party befuddle a weak king who is nothing but their instrument. The Tammany statesman who said: "Give the people what they want, but make it unconstitutional," lifted the veil of magic; he knew the real meaning of our system of "checks and balances."

Mr. Everybody is now what the mikado was during the period of the Japanese shogunate; he is an invisible idol, called divine and all-powerful, but who in reality has not the slightest influence upon national developments. He is in the hands of the capitalistic magnates and all the rites which are performed to make him believe that he is the sovereign and holds the balance of destiny in his callous hands are meaningless antics. The only possibility of giving us a real government by the people is to repudiate the national debt, put production into the hands of the people, abolish the senate, and make all the officials, the president included, subject to recall. Then we shall have a real democracy.

This is the radical solution of the problem. The conservative answers: "You will make a nice mess of it. Don't you know that a nation can only remain great as long as it adheres to the principles which have made it great? The foundation of our national achievement was individualism. Curb it—we know that it is necessary—but do not destroy this well of strength! Don't think that the evils of liberty can be cured by more liberty; the only cure is self-restraint. You are not advancing, you are going back. Your aim is not liberty, it is despotism. Your Mr. Everybody is another Louis XIV., who says: 'L'Etat c'est moi.' We think that it would be a sounder plan to disburden the king from all petty affairs and to give him time for serious work on the vital national issues. We do not want the ruler to be a zero, we want him to make his personality felt; but to be efficient he must understand that it is necessary to lessen the bewildering number of his rights and duties, to limit the range of his activities. If he is a man of insight, he will see that his loss is a gain and that his position is not weakened but strengthened by giving up the false pretense of omnipotence and ubiquity. Under present conditions it is but natural that he should very often act inconsistently; that important matters should drag for years, because he cannot reach a conclusion. His brain must be a chaos and it is hard to understand how he can resist the nervous strain of his overwhelming and never ceasing responsibility. Will he find the courage to narrow his activities, to renounce the semblance of power so that he may get a little more of its essence? Will he understand the necessity of delegating his prerogatives to other men whom he can rely upon so that he may reserve all his individual faculties for the great issues of our times? If he cannot be made to realize this necessity, we are in for a period of anarchy, and it is difficult to say what may emerge out of such an earthquake."

TODAY Mr. Everybody interferes here, interferes there, without any definite plan; he is a victim of faddists and reformers. Czar Nicholas had his Rasputin, we have thousands of Rasputins who, though mostly well meaning, are none the less dangerous. The constitution ought not to be a fetich. The living generation has surely the right of remodeling it, but it would be insane to destroy it. The aim of such a remodeling ought to be simplifying, systematizing, organizing, but no iconoclasm. Our system works badly not because Mr. Everybody has not enough rights and duties, but because he has too many.

"THE Mecca of Poetry." That's Chicago. No less a person—and personage—than Amy Lowell, the subtle sobber of succulent songs, has christened it. The Mahomet of the city then is Carl Sandburg. He'd never call Chicago Mecca, though, nor admit that it is like any city that ever was before. To him it is an incomparable town with a soul unlike the souls of any other towns in the world, a being that he loathes and adores and fears and trusts, that sings a lover's song while it is betraying its own children unto death, that lets its face go unwashed while its soul is seeing God, that starves the men and women who feed it, and then offers them in compassion the unspeakable loveliness of Michigan boulevard on a rainy night, the throb of the harbor lights. Chicago is a real person to him, and when you listen to his low, slow speaking voice tell about it, Chicago will grow to be a person to you, too. "Chicago Poems" (Holt) are strange, wild things, some of them, but they are Chicago, and they fill you with a new consciousness about this home town of ours.

This afternoon Carl Sandburg is going to talk at the Little Theater about Chicago. "We have just as much right to write about Chicago as Dante had to write about hell," he says. "We at least know more about it." There are twelve poets who are the Dantes of the city, he says. It would be "telling" if they were named before this afternoon, but he promises to tell them why he thinks they are worthy laureates. The seven circles of Chicago have inspired a new poetic cult and Carl Sandburg is its prophet.

"Mr. Britling Sees It Through" (Macmillan) started out the new year with 100,000 copies in circulation in the United States. A correspondent asks if there is not another book of cartoons about the war, "an even more important book than the Bairnsfather book you talked about last Sunday." There are, of course, the Louis Raemaekers cartoons (Doubleday-Page) which stirred Europe emotionally as no other cartoons ever have. There is a rather romantic story about Louis Raemaekers. Two years and a half ago his name was practically unknown. He was at that time an obscure Dutch lanscape artist. At the outbreak of the war he began drawing cartoons for the Amsterdam Telegraaf. The German authorities objected to the cartoons and charged Raemaekers with endangering the neutrality of Holland. He was acquitted, but a price was put upon his head if he should ever cross the border. When he crossed to England his wife received anonymous postcards warning her that his ship would be torpedoed in the North sea. It wasn't, however, and he is living now in an obscure studio in London.

It is the record, he says, of the communication which his son, Raymond, who was killed in Flanders, has had with his family since his death. Sir Oliver Lodge has prefaced the chronicle of the messages by letters which his son wrote, and a description of their home life in order, he says, to make the reader feel acquainted with the boy. It is probably the most important volume dealing with the psychic phenomena which has been published in the last twenty years. Count Ilya Tolstoi, who is touring the United States lecturing about his father, tells how the great master used to relieve the tension of unwelcome guests or of domestic difficulties. One of the games with which his father used to clear the cloud riven domestic sky he called "Numidian Cavalry": "We would all be sitting, perhaps, in the zala rather flat and quiet after the departure of some dull visitors. Up would jump my father from his chair, lifting one hand in the air, and run at full speed around the table at a hopping gallop. We all flew after him, hopping and waving our hands as he did. We would run round the room several times and sit down again panting in our chairs in quite a different frame of mind, gay and lively. The Numidian cavalry had an excellent effect many and many a time. After that exercise all sorts of quarrels and wrongs were forgotten and tears dried with marvelous rapidity."

A war book from a different angle is "A German Deserter's War Experience" (Huebsch), written by a German anti-militarist. He is a Socialist who served during the first fourteen months of the war, escaped, while he was on a furlough, to Holland, determined never again to take part in the ghastly game of war. He is now in America, but his identity must necessarily be kept a secret. The book is not directed against Germany, nor against France (England or the English are not mentioned in it). It is an inveighing against militarism in general. It contains, incidentally, the first German eyewitness accounts of the advance through Belgium and the battle of the Marne and the retreat which have been available to Americans beyond the official German accounts.

"Swords for Life" (Huebsch) is the second of the slender volumes of poetry by Irene Rutherford McLeod. "Songs to Save a Soul" was the first, and if you haven't it among your poetic treasures, search it out immediately. "Swords for Life" is no less lovely, no less sheerly exquisitely beautiful than the first volume. You remember that "Songs to Save a Soul" stirred England as no volume of verse has in the last decade; that Masefield declared Miss McLeod the poetic prodigy of the hour; that W. L. George said that she had "touched the hem of two garments, Blake and Francis Thompson, while maintaining herself." This lyric, "To My Friend," is one of the most delicately lovely verses that I have ever read in commemoration of that sense of touching the finger tips of God that comes when real friendship is yours:

When memory, and grief, and fear
Assail my heart with bitter stress
I am not afraid to come
    Begging here,
Seeking, for love and quietness,
    Your heart, my home.

I am not afraid to take
Peace, and strength, and kindling fire,
I am not afraid to ask,
    For love's sake,
The utmost need of my desire,
    The highest task.

Were I less proud I could not speak
Thus simply all my need of you;
Less strong, my heart could not confess
    Its mood is weak.
I could not come were love less true
    For quietness.

Ian Hay, author of "The First Hundred Thousand" (Houghton-Mifflin), who came to our land as the representative of the British government and the guardian of the British war exhibit at the various allied bazaars, has written a little book which is called "Getting Together" (Doubleday-Page). It is an imaginary chat between an ordinary American and an ordinary Englishman about the war in general and England's and America's relations to each other in the crises. Capt. Beith (that's his real name, Ian Hay is his pen name) wrote it, he said, because he found that we don't understand one another. The book will be published in England as well as here and will do missionary work to the heathen in both countries.

ADDRESSED TO US

By Robert Herrick

PARIS, Jan. 7.—This afternoon at a great meeting in the Trocadero called to protest against Germany's deportations of the Belgians, Maeterlinck spoke these words, which I will repeat, although doubtless you will read them at your breakfast table tomorrow morning, long before this article can appear. But we Americans have short memories for disagreeable things; it will do no harm to anybody to read them twice.

"Now what can we do? We, the belligerents, are powerless in this great despair. All our forces are stretched to crush the monster; we have no others except our cries of agony and of malediction. We must then use the sole force that is left us and never cease our cries; they will end perchance by waking from their inconceivable sleep those who are not taking part in the struggle which we are making for their safety as much as for our own, and who to this day, it must be said, have not done their duty. . . . You alone who still bear the name of neuters, which some day will seem to you very heavy, you alone can still hinder or punish certain crimes, against which, beyond the reach of our arms, we can do nothing more.

"Those who commit these crimes live in your midst, enter your houses, shake your hands in your streets, in your clubs, are seated perhaps at your tables, and still dare to treat you as equals. It is time to make them feel by acts that it is no longer so, that they are no longer the equals of any one on this earth, and that there is henceforth between humanity and them an abyss that they will not be able to cross until long years of penitence, sufferings, humiliations will have finally purified them and rendered them a little more nearly like other men."

These just words were not addressed merely to the few thousands gathered in the Trocadero this January Sunday—largely exiles from that country whose invasion was Germany's first crime and whose thirty months of sufferings are at last crowned with the final infamy of enslavement; Maeterlinck's solemn words were addressed to us, the one powerful people in the entire world who have been content to stand aside and witness from a safe distance the perpetration of every known crime against humanity, against justice, right, the law of nations, the decencies of civilization, content to do nothing more than chatter about peace and pass futile resolutions, indite futile notes and feeble protests, content to make money off the war and drop a few dollars from our billions of profits in Europe's poor box (with much complacency), and at the climax of Germany's slave raids in Belgium and Poland content to demand from these thieves and murderers in the same deferential terms as from their victims: "What are you fighting for? If you will only tell the world what it is all about we'll do our best to bring you together and make peace."

HOW can such a people be roused from "their inconceivable sleep" of thirty months to a realization that this struggle is "as much for their safety as for ours"? Too proud to fight, too feeble to protest effectively, whose representatives in congress want to prohibit them from going on the seas in ships in order that the nation may not be "involved" in Germany's crimes—what words, I ask myself again for the hundredth time, can awaken such a people to realities? The deadly taint of moral cowardice which has crept over the spirit of Americans since the first months of the war, from the first hesitations, the first refusals, has now well-nigh paralyzed the will to act. Emotions that do not complete themselves in acts, the psychologists tell us, are harmful; Carnegie hall eloquence and resolutions sound in Europe like the chattering of neurasthenics. Silence even would seem better!

Yet in such moments one cannot be silent. Words, as Maeterlinck has said, are all that are left to us. I have been uttering them now for nearly three years, each week, in these pages, and I shall continue to utter them each week either here or elsewhere, whether they bore my comfortable countrymen or disgust them, whether they reach home in the hearts and consciences and minds or one or two or of none. Until the burden and shame of the term "neutral" awakes America from her inconceivable sleep—a sleep disturbed by bad dreams!—until the dishonoring presence of the German ambassador no longer stains the good name of America, I for my part shall never be silent. I will repeat the primary truths that only those who will to be deaf do not know.

Before these words can reach the United States the question of questions will again be put plainly to America. For Germany is unmasking. She threatens to renew the submarine warfare with increased horror—"fresh and joyous!" (Has it ever been suppressed?) In such an event will the president once more palter and accept verbal evasions? Will congress meekly obey the imperial order and warn Americans to abstain from tempting Germans to murder them? Will the American people continue to chatter a mild pacifism and pass fervid resolutions while successful crime becomes the recognized moral code of the world? Will the one most powerful nation founded on the ideal of liberty and humanity for all slump still deeper into the slough of spiritual stagnation, hiding behind its president's mellifluous generalities concerning duties and good will and a little hysterical enthusiasm for the French wounded?

Or, as Vandervelde, the Belgian minister of state, eloquently said, Will the liberty bell, silent now for two and a half years, ring out once more a tocsin to a world in danger of losing for generations to come its most precious liberties? Shall we have the manhood and the clear insight at last, after all these weary months of disintegrating hesitations, to take our part, to proclaim that we, too, believe that wrong is wrong for nations as for individuals and that it does not take a state paper to teach us what Germany has been trying to make of this world; that a crime is still crime whether committed against a citizen of the United States or any other human being, and that as a people we will not recognize even in diplomatic formulas a felon nation as our equals?

THE time when such an act of simple truth and honor might have had its full effect, when it might have stopped at once not only the repetitions of crimes but even the carnage in Europe, has passed unused for all time. President Wilson, who aspires to become the peacemaker of the earth, to rival our great Lincoln—he who dared the bloodiest of civil wars rather than admit a legalized wrong—runs the risk of going into history as the supreme weakling of our times, as the leader who failed to lead his people when they were in doubt, the man who preferred sentimental words about justice, humanity, good offices, etc., etc., to one courageous act in their defense—as the president, finally, under whose direction the American people began the steep descent into a soft selfishness and a fatty material degeneration.

Is the decadence of the United States to be dated from his consulship? Does he wish to be pictured in history at work on his typewriter at a peace suggestion? Does he think that the opinions and the good will of a government that has endured all German intrigue, that retains the German ambassador after the Lusitania, that addresses the imperial government after the murder of its own citizens in terms of affectionate regard, will have the slightest influence in the settlement of the struggle for justice and right? I cannot think that he is either so ignorant or so timid as that. I cannot believe that a people as proud and as brave as Americans will endure to play to the end the evasive rôle that he has accepted for them.

In all the dark confusion of these days, when no one can guess what the future will be, when the fate of humanity for centuries to come hangs in the balance, when the possibility of the collapse of civilization is not fantastic and the danger is imminent of a world domination beside which the Roman empire under Caligula was a dreamy paradise, at such a moment America will not stand by in willful impotence, talking peace and good will; America must act to prove that she knows what right is and has the will to attain it. Otherwise she will be forever condemned to share with Germany the responsibility for the world's greatest disaster.

FOR out of all this welter of embattled nations there is emerging into sight of those who can read beneath the material facts the truth that Germany and the United States are the two great nations who are in danger of losing their souls in the world war, while England and France are winning theirs. Germany, by the strange paradox of spiritual law, has saved her enemy from becoming what she falsely believed her to be already—weak and decadent, content to sit by in a cowardly safety while Germany stole what she wanted from others. And Germany, so strong, so sure of herself, has irretrievably lost, no matter where her armies may march, because she has lost her own soul. America has grown richer but not stronger, because strength does not consist in the possession of money and resources, but in will, purpose, courage—all "imponderables" of prime importance, which we are in danger of letting slip from us while we sop our consciences with all the fine things we will do for the world when somebody else has saved it.

FRANCE has received in America much sympathy, admiration, praise; yet the reason why France has become the supremely heroic figure in the world today is but dimly realized in America. It is not because the French have fought bravely to defend their country; it is not because they have spent so much of their best blood in the effort to expel the invader from France. It is because rather than make a dishonorable peace, though it might preserve France in safety, the French are giving themselves nobly, running the gravest risk of race extinction, rather than admit the possible triumph of wrong. "It is for the right!" That ends it for them, even if they must seal the affirmation with their lives—all their lives.

So the Belgians, the Poles, the Serbs, the French—all those who have been martyrized in the war and who have struggled heroically even if thus far unsuccessfully against the wrongs done to them and to the world—are not to be most deplored. They have given, they are giving themselves for what is of more importance to mankind than mere life. It is those peoples who are willing evil and those who still linger in that inconceivable sleep of neutrality before evil from which no crime can rouse them that are most to be deplored.

"He who is not for me is against me" was as surely meant for nations as for individuals.

AUTOMOBILES — Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER — MOTORCYCLES

THE GREAT—GREAT—GRANDPA OF THE MOTOR CAR

1769. Vevers's Travelling Chaiſe deſcribed. 409

THE converſation of the public having been ſo greatly taken up with a machine to move without horſes, we are perſuaded the preceding plate, with the following explanation, will be not a little agreeable to our readers.

Mechanical Projections of the Travelling Chaiſe without Horſes, ſhewing plainly by Inſpection the Conſtitution of theſe Machines,

By JOHN VEVERS, Maſter of the Boarding-School at Rygate in Surry.

IGNORANCE of mathematical ſciences makes mechanical problems appear abſtruſe and aſtoniſhing to thoſe who are not exerciſed in mechanical ſtudies.

For to find out an unknown hypotheſis, required, amongſt a confuſed infinity of others, to be accuſtomed to diſcern the proportions, and the force of mixtures; to take a right method in reſolving the moſt intricate and perplexing propoſitions, is to have the mind well cultivated and clear in geometry, arithmetic, aſtronomy, and mechanics, which are keys to unlock the underſtanding and ſolve the greateſt difficulties. Therefore, upon the above-mentioned principles, the conſtruction of theſe carriages are here demonſtrated.

A Deſcription of the firſt Scheme A.

THE hinder wheels B, D muſt be large and firmly fixed to their common axletree E, F, that one cannot move without the other.

Put a trundle-head with ſtrong and cloſe ſpindles round the middle of the axletree E, F, and near to that fix upon the beam a notched wheel G, the notches of which may catch the ſpindles of the trundle-head, and ſo in turning with the handle H, I, K, that wheel round its axletree K, L, which muſt be perpendicular to the horizon, it will turn the trundle M, N, and with that the axletree E, F, and the wheels B, D, which will thereupon ſet forward the chaiſe without horſes, or any other animal. Obſerve the axletree muſt enter into the beam, in order to turn within it.

A Deſcription of the ſecond Scheme B.

The contrivance of this machine is as follows, but put in motion by a foot-man, who makes it go with his two feet alternately, by virtue of two little wheels hid in a box between the two hind wheels A B, figure C, and made faſt to the axletree of the chaiſe.

The little wheels in the box are Q, Q,—in figure B, and P, P is a roller, the two ends of which are made faſt to the box behind the chaiſe; R is a pulley, upon which runs the rope that faſtens the end of the planks S, T, upon which the footman puts his feet.

W, W is a piece of wood that keeps faſt the two planks at the other end, allowing them to move up and down by the two ropes P, T, and P, S, tied to their two ends.

X, X are two little plates of iron which ſerve to turn the wheels Q, Q, that are fixed to their axletree, which is likewiſe fixed to the two great wheels B, B.

Thus you will readily apprehend that the footman putting his feet alternately upon T, and S, one of the plates will turn one of the notched wheels.

For example!

If he leans with his foot upon the plank T, it deſcends and raiſes the plank S, which cannot riſe but at the ſame time the plate of iron that enters the notches of the wheel muſt needs make it turn with its axletree, and conſequently the great wheels.

Then, the footman leaning upon the plank S, the weight of his body will make it deſcend and raiſe the other plank T, which turns the wheel again; and ſo the motion will be continued.

You may eaſily imagine, that while the two hind wheels advance, the fore wheels muſt likewiſe advance; and that theſe will always advance ſtraight, if the perſon that ſits in the chaiſe manages them with reins made faſt to the fore-beam.

N. B. The velocity of theſe carriages depends upon the activity of the manager.

FROM the above humble but interesting ancestor descended the high powered limousine in which you or your neighbors ride about. It is an announcement and an explanation of an invention of a horseless chais, published in an English magazine in August, 1769. Although the element of propulsion in the invention was that of man power rather than of motor power, it demonstrates the first crude attempts to get rid of the horse as a means of travel. Despite the early English "esses" which look like "effs," there should be no difficulty in reading the quaintly phrased explanation of the invention, as it is reproduced directly from the original pages of the magazine. The original clippings of the magazine are owned by Julius Frankel, 6238 Champlain avenue.

Rates Cut on Cars to Coast

AN announcement of interest to automobilists contemplating western tours this season is that the Tourist Association of Central California will run a special trainload of touring cars out of Chicago on Feb. 28 for San Francisco, arriving in that city about ten days later.

Arrangements have been made with the railroads for a special carload rate of $3 per 100 pounds. This is a saving of more than 50 per cent over the single automobile rate of $6.80 per 100 pounds.

Arrangements are being handled by I. W. Alexander, Chicago representative of the tourist association, with offices at 900 Lytton building. Mr. Alexander has a great variety of attractive and reliable automobile booklets and road maps which he will be glad to place in the hands of prospective western tourists.

Although March is not the best month for touring the national parks in Montana, Wyoming, and Colorado, it is just the time to see the parks and the multitude of other wonderful scenic attractions in California. This is the time of the year when the Golden State is at its best. The orchards are in bloom, the wild flowers cover the plains and hills, and California's magnificent system of highways guarantees ideal touring throughout all parts of the state.

From California Oregon and Washington are easily accessible. Scenic grandeur awaits the automobilists in these states. Millions of dollars expended on highways assure comfortable travel. Two months' weather conditions will permit of an easterly route, and the national parks of Montana and the other Rocky Mountain states can then be visited. A tour of this kind would afford the middle states automobilist an opportunity to see the great western country under ideal climatic conditions. The Lincoln highway affords a good route for the return.

Automobile travel to California and other western points has been increasing fast. Cars come from every state. The Tourist Association of Central California is strictly noncommercial, and is maintained to supply, free of charge, information to travelers coming into the west. In addition to the special automobile train from Chicago, it will run one from New York, leaving there so as to arrive in San Francisco at the same time as the Chicago train.

The project has awakened much interest, and representatives of the association already have booked several carloads. It is an excellent opportunity for automobilists to ship their cars west during the early spring season at a minimum cost.

Keeping the Light Close to the Road

THE problem of headlights, at least for the time being, seems to be best met, according to Chairman O. I. Yellott of the American Automobile association legislative board, by the simple suggestion of the Society of Automobile Engineers that "no beam of reflected light shall rise above forty-two inches at a distance of seventy-five feet." This decision is the outcome of much study and experiment during the last year and adheres closely to the California plan of bending the lamp brackets in such a way as to divert the rays to the ground.

To ascertain when a light is forty-two inches from the ground at a distance of seventy-five feet in front of the car the following instructions are given:

Have the light focused so that the reflected rays will be condensed in solid volume as much as possible, and so as to eliminate stray rays as far as possible. To focus a light place the car in front of a building or any perpendicular flat surface of sufficient size at a distance of ten or fifteen feet and by adjusting the bulb backward or forward reduce the area of light as much as possible and make the light from both lamps as nearly uniform as possible. This is the most difficult of the three things necessary to overcome objectionable glare.

Place the machine on the level and measure a distance of seventy-five feet to the front.

Make a mark on a board, broom handle, or on the coat of an individual 42 inches from the ground and see that the upper circumference of the solid volume of reflected light does not strike above that mark at seventy-five feet in front of the light. Police officers and others may easily determine the distance from the ground by noting a certain button, pocket, lapel, or any other distance mark on their wearing apparel. By stepping in front of the machine on the level at a distance approximating seventy-five feet they may easily determine whether or not the lights are properly deflected.

The Society of Automobile Engineers has what is known as its committee on standards, and a division of the committee is now working on the details of head lamps, reflectors, and bulbs, with the object of establishing standards which shall make it easier for manufacturers to supply head lamps in the future that will give adequate illumination and at the same time comply with the provision preventing the beam of reflected light rising above forty-two inches at seventy-five feet distance.

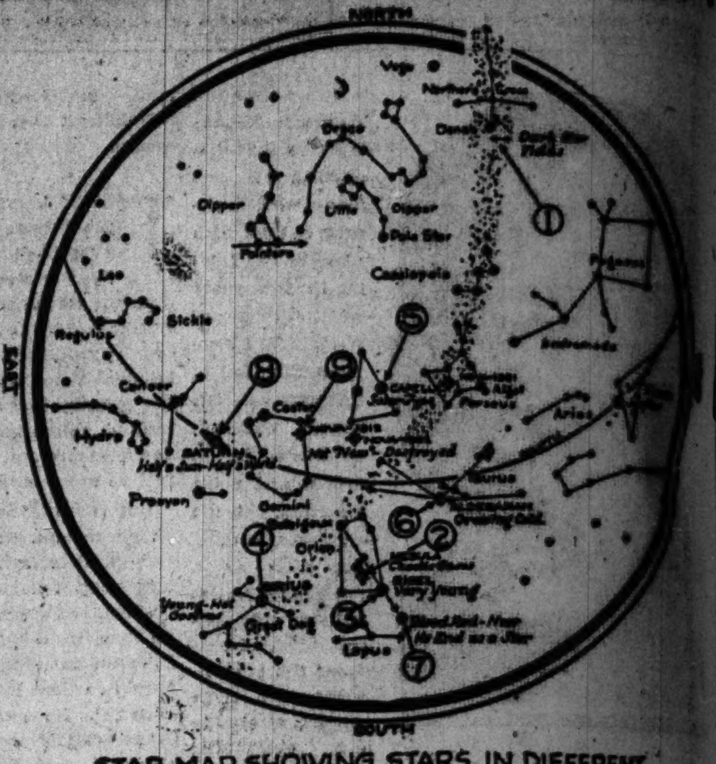
ASTRONOMY



STAR MAP SHOWING STARS IN DIFFERENT STAGES OF EVOLUTION
DRAWN by S.T. MAXWELL

STARS are born of dust and end in dust. Over portions of the sky lie clouds of dark stars, like those in the milky way near Deneb. It is in these rayless nebula fields that stars have their beginning and their end. Many black nebula show light patches in their midsts, faint green glowings half hidden in the billows of inky star dust. From nebula to star is only a question of attraction. The Orion nebula is a conglomeration of tangled skeins of gases and half formed suns.

Young stars are enveloped in seething, tenuous atmospheres and pour forth heat in prodigious quantities. Such a star is Rigel, in the foot of Orion. A strange fact, in passing, is that the stars of this type are rich in Helium, which, as we know it, is a product of decomposing radium. With cooling comes the Sirian type. The star is still exceedingly gaseous, but hydrogen, a well known element of water, has appeared, and a few metals are forming. In the succeeding stage, typified by the sun or Capella, the heavy atmosphere has condensed and metals, such as iron, nickel, titanium, and sodium, are very much in evidence. In the sun a few compounds have appeared, but it is not until a star reaches the condition of Adlebaran that we see rocks, in vapor of course, gathering together. Aldebaran is one of the cooler stars, for its temperature barely exceeds that of a hot furnace.

In Lepus, on a line drawn through Betelgeux and Rigel, and continued a length equal to half the distance across Orion, is a giant sun, lusterless in hue and deep blood red in color, whose life is almost spent. Various ores and also chemicals resembling gasoline are floating in its atmosphere.

Our own solar system can furnish an example of what happens next. Saturn, the sixth planet in order from the sun, a globe 73,000 miles across, is too cold to be a sun, but far too hot to remotely approach the conditions which we find on earth, except, perhaps, those in the throat of some volcano. All the rocks are now solids, lying at the center of the ball, but the air is still heavy and reeking with salty vapors and biting acid steams. By the time it had attained the condition of the earth a star would be almost extinct. The earth lives solely by virtue of borrowed solar heat, a star, frozen and encrusted as the earth, is dead.

Frozen and lifeless it courses on. But to travel forever it cannot. Because space is not empty, but peopled with meteors and dark nebulas. At length the dead sun crashes into some great meteor swarm. There is a sudden [illegible] flash of fire, a tremendous explosion, and the star, mountains, valleys, [illegible] plains and all, is broken into fragments of splintered rocks and clouds of nebulous dust. It is the end of a sun and the beginning of [illegible]

Prizes Awarded in Exhibition of Chicago Artists

NOW that the excitement of the opening days is past, the awarding of prizes a fixed and settled thing, the receptions and committees come and gone, the triple sided exhibit at the Art institute—artists, sculptors, and etchers—is in full and vigorous swing.

The prizes, awarded on Thursday night at the opening reception, gave to Walter Ufer the first prize, Logan medal, of $500. "In the Land of the Manana" was the fortunate painting and one which richly deserved the honor bestowed upon it.

Ufer has seven paintings in this exhibit and back of all of them is the force of a spirit truthfully and honestly expressing itself. He paints as a born colorist, achieving depths and quality in his effects, and, besides that, his knowledge of the Indian temperament and disposition has made him a master depicter of the red race.

The second prize, Logan medal of $250, went to Victor Higgins. The fact that his subject matter was the same as that of Ufer's gives an interesting opportunity to contrast the two pictures from a standpoint of technique and personal taste.

One landscape prize of $100 went to Edgar Cameron. He has five canvases on display and all of them are well representative of that tendency toward naturalism which is so characteristic of the best in American landscape paintings.

The other prize went to Wilson Irvine. Admirers of Irvine will rejoice with him at his achievement. His pictures are a real delight. He never sees things singly or awkwardly, but, grasping the harmony of trees and skies and water, makes of them a union like the notes of soft music.

There are other landscapes in the exhibit which are deserving of merit. Alfred Jansson, Edgar Payne, Carl Krafft, Alfred Juergens, Lucie Hartrath, and Frank Dudley have all taken bits of landscapic beauty, seized on its essential charm, and recorded it for the permanent possession of those whose vision of it otherwise would be but of passing briefness. Laura Van Pappelendam has three carefully executed landscape scenes, E. Martin Hennings a "Bridge" which is possessed of sterling worth, Edward Butler two characteristic mountain pictures, and Wallace L. De Wolf a desert canvas and also one of "Goat Mountain, Banff."

Ingerle, who filches poetry from the obvious and deftly transmutes it to canvas, has a rare bit of nature rendering in his "Moonlight." Edgar A. Rupprecht has three pleasing pictures, his "Sunny Day" being a charmer to the lover of brightness and light.

Among the pieces of portrait work that stand out strikingly from the hundred or so canvases to be seen are Anna L. Stacey's "Southern Girl," Ernest Basebe's "Little Irish Miss," Walter C. Brownson's "Harmony in Russet and Green," Vurgina Keep Clark's two portraits, Ralph Clarkson's "Wallace Heckman," Dorothy Loeb's "Study of a Young Girl," Frank Werner's "Jeanette," Ada Walter Shulz's "Mother and Child," Charles M. Lessar's "Ruth" and Gerald A. Frank's "Phyllis."

Gertrude Spaller has two excellent mural notes which are to be placed in the Elm Place school, Highland Park. Norman Tolson has a couple of good posters, "Combat" and "On Guard."

There are some attractive and valuable miniatures at the east end of the exhibit halls. Edward W. Carlson has three miniatures, including one of exceptional charm which he calls "My Baby." Helen B. Slutz's portrait of Mrs. Neville is a bewitching golden haired miniature, and the twins by Carolyn D. Tyler are veritable angel heads in diminutive form. Anna Lynch's "Boy and Horse" is a good portrait study in form and expression.

In the sculpture exhibit Polasek's "Figure of a Boy" took the prize for the best piece. There are some other really fine examples of our modern American sculptor work. Maximilian Hoffmann has some strong "studies" and also a faun in bronze which is deserving of special mention.

Frank Gustafson's "Bather" is the graceful figure of a nude woman half reclining in a difficult position. Edwin Pearson has some ten pieces of work in varying mediums. They are in plaster, iron, and silver, and there is a Mexican head which is powerfully strong. Adelyn L. Joseph has an Indian girl with heavy braids and a pensive, thoughtful expression. The face of James Whitcomb Riley is well reproduced in plaster by John G. Prasbuhn, and also a fountain figure by the same sculptor is handsomely decorative.

Ruth Sherwood of the Art institute school of sculpture has a number of pieces in the exhibit, one of them a wall fountain, which is the full length figure of a small child, natural and expressive in the extreme. A. F. Tellander has two portraits, one of a child and one of a Negro. Vastly different in subject, they are characteristic of the artist and typical of the types they represent.

In the printroom of the institute there is a delightful collection of etchings for those etcher lovers of Chicago and its suburbs to enjoy. And they are delightful. There is great diversity of character in the etchings shown, as the artists themselves have come from many different countries.

There are 283 etchings in all, and out of these seven were chosen by the jury to be purchased for the permanent collection of the Art institute. These are an "Obscure Turning," by Clifford Adams; "Fog on the Thames," and "Back of a Roman House," by Bertha E. Jaques; "Gisors," by Ernest D. Roth; "Doorway," by Ralph Seymore Fletcher; "Façade of Art Institute," by Otto J. Schneider; "Help Wanted," by Dwight C. Sturges, and "Canal in Venice," by J. C. Vondrous.

Blanding J. Sloan has four unique etchings of a fanciful picturesque nature; William Auerbach Levy has three distinctly fine etchings of a characterful nature, and Charles P. Larsen has two powerful symbolic etchings which he calls "Life" and "Omega."

Childe Hassam, who has recently had such a large number of his paintings in the institute, has three etchings in this display. They are Hassamesque, to be sure, and even more modern in spirit and treatment than the majority of his paintings.

Eskridge has five etchings, in which he has managed to give a maximum of expression with a minimum of means.

A grim, sinister etching by Theresa A. Garrett is a "Rendezvous with Death," uncompromisingly worked out in her best style.

Donn P. Crane has a compelling and sympathetic depictation of childhood in his "Bettie." It is absolutely truthful in its direct appeal, and escapes from any platitudinous quality by its sincere naturalness.

Ernest Roth has some exquisite renderings briefly expressed. There is the time old Roman forum and a straggling hill town of Assisi and a courtyard in Rouen, which is fascinating in its atmospheric suggestion.

Taken as a whole this exhibit is by far the best so far given by the Chicago Society of Etchers.

The portrait prize in this Chicago exhibit went to a miniature by Mary Hess Buehr, and the sculpture to Albion Polasek.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

The South Wind.

A SOFT wind comes and the bluejay surprises winter bound folk by a new note to his call, by a soft, alluring, attracting note which predicts the swelling bud and the furry hepatica under the brown leaf.

February intervenes and the influence of the soft south wind and the sound of the new note of the bluejay are, against the prospect of February, unreal symptoms of a not to be expected change.

Nevertheless the soft south wind hits the massed ramparts of snow and they melt, opening the expectant vision to prospect of young green onions, to thought of the productive processes which ask for the help of spade and hoe, which open a window in life and let in fresh air and new promises, which assure the resurrection and give substance to expectancy.

February intervenes and this hope of the quick renewal of living processes, of this triumph over stillness and inactivity, over frost and snow, is a feeble thing which the next drop of temperature and next scurry of snow stops dead.

The spring song of the chickadee is a futile promise. The spring song of bluejay is an ardent bit of optimism given to a world temporarily under the melting influence of the south wind. The brown earth shows its face momentarily and then come more snows and bitter weather.

Life without defeated promise and delayed prospect would not be worth while. There is an eternal need of expectancy vexed by delays and not made certain by perfect machinery.

CLIFFORD RAYMOND.

RIALTO.

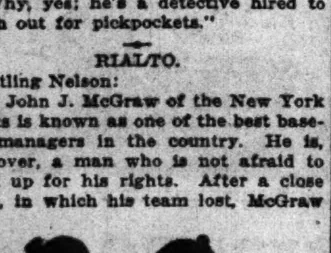
Battling Nelson:

Mr. John J. McGraw of the New York Giants is known as one of the best baseball managers in the country. He is, moreover, a man who is not afraid to stand up for his rights. After a close game, in which his team lost, McGraw walked up to the umpire and said: "What would happen to me if I should call the umpire an incompetent robber?" "You would be fined and suspended," was the reply. "What would happen to me if I merely thought the umpire was an incompetent robber?" "Why, nothing could be done to you then," returned the ump. "Well, let it go at that," said McGraw.



Speaking of baseball, a father once asked his 6 year old boy, if he could have a third eye, where he would like to have it. "On the end of one of my fingers," said the boy, "so I could stick it through a knothole in the baseball grounds fence and see the game for nothing."

I've got a little son of my own, but he's got one bad habit. He loves to gamble. The other day I caught him tossing pennies, so I said to him, "I'm going to flog you for an hour." "Wait a minute, dad," says he, balancing a penny in his hand; "I'll toss you to make it two hours or nothing."

A few weeks ago John D. Rockefeller Jr. addressed a New York City Sunday school. He told of meeting a ragged, hungry looking little girl in the street on a wintry day, and when he questioned her she told him a pitiful tale of a sick mother and some younger brothers and sisters without food. After giving her a dollar Rockefeller followed her at a safe distance to see what she would do with the money.

"Now, children," said Rockefeller, "what do you suppose is the first thing that little girl bought with that dollar?"

Up went the hands, and one child after another ventured a guess, but none proved correct. Finally the last little boy to hold up his hand was asked his answer to the question. "She bought a basket," he piped out. "Correct," said Rockefeller; "there's a boy who thinks. Now, my son, come up here on the platform and tell us why you thought it was a basket."

After considerable coaxing the boy reached the platform, but seemed unwilling to talk. "Go on," urged Rockefeller; "I want these boys and girls to learn to think, too." The boy still hesitated, so Rockefeller took a silver quarter from his pocket and said, "I'll give you this if you'll tell us what makes you think the little girl bought a basket first.'

"Be—e—cause," stammered the youngster at last, "I was over in Hoboken last Sunday and heard you tell the same story."

New Spring Dresses and Suits

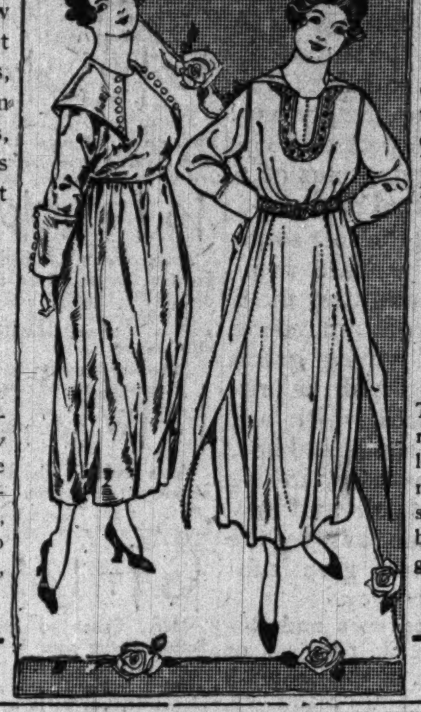
Second Floor

An unusually pretty group of women's new spring dresses with the fashionable new touches that set them apart from the past season's styles, effectively embroidered in bright contrasting colors, box plaited and plaited skirts that hang in long straight lines.

The dresses are made of taffeta silks and crepe de chines, good wearing qualities. But two of the many styles are illustrated.

You'll find dresses with large collars, both round and pointed, new shape cuffs, in all sizes, all the new colorings that will be popular for spring are included, dresses that others must ask to $20 for, choice for Monday at,

—$15—



The suits for spring are handsome indeed, as a glance at our comprehensive line will show. One special group is made of poplins, gabardines, tricotines and serges, ultra fashionable models, the correct spring weight fabrics, strictly man tailored, faultless in every detail.

The trimmings on most of them consist of tailored stitching and bone buttons, while on some buttons are used to good advantage. Correct length coats.

The skirts hang gracefully on the new silhouette lines, just a little longer than the winter fashions, new shape collars trimmed with silk in contrasting colors, in black, navy, apple green, tan, gold and beige, special Monday,

3.00 and 3.50 Shoes at 1.89

4th Floor, Center.

Here's another instance of what "spot cash" can do in the way of phenomenal savings. The S. & S. Shoe Co. (363 and 365 River St., Haverhill, Mass.), consigned a shipment of 4,500 pairs women's shoes to a Chicago concern, but owing to some difficulty in payment the shipment was held up in the freight house and rather than have them returned to the east, they accepted our low offer, providing we took them all and paid spot cash.

The savings are indeed timely, just when most women are thinking seriously of spring footwear. Included are

Panama button shoes, patent leather vamps, dull kid tops, patent leather lace shoes with white kid tops, patent leather lace shoes with cloth or dull kid tops, gun metal button and lace shoes with dull kid and cloth tops, black kid lace shoes, all the newest lasts and patterns with Cuban and fashionable Louis heels. An opportunity to save on your footwear. Take advantage of our purchasing power and buy several pairs of these women's $3 and $3.50 shoes, at......... 1.89

Well Planned and Well Built Homes

Are less expensive in maintenance and always command a ready sale.

Hogenson's Model Bungalow Homes in Austin

Are all carefully designed and have that complete, finished look that always attracts attention.

They are built in 5, 6, 7, and 8 light and liberal sized rooms and with large screened porches, sun parlors, or sleeping porches. The heating plants are large, so as to give sufficient heat in the coldest weather.

The trim used is of the best hardwoods, in the different finishes of oak and birch. The floors are of clear oak. We install the latest designs of lighting fixtures and together with the high grade art glass is made to harmonize with the decorations which these homes receive and which frequently are selected by the purchasers.

The prices, $4,000 to $6,500, are low for these homes, considering all that goes into them. Payments to suit, like rent, or cash.

Make an early inspection and select one now for spring delivery.

Take a Chicago-av. car to Latrobe-av. and walk north to Thomas-st., or a Division-st. car which connects with Grand, Cicero, and Crawford-avs. and which pass our property.

GROUND FLOOR

The New Orleans Great Northern Railway opens for farm settlement the immense acreage of the great lumber company lands along its lines in Mississippi and Louisiana.

Growing towns, churches, schools, lumber companies, shipbuilding, turpentine distilleries, pine oil, and paper mills have sprung up all along the line of the railroad, but timber being the chief asset, the land itself regardless of its great agricultural worth has been carried on the books at a mere nominal value.

As the timber is being cut and the stumps and discarded tree trunks and limbs in the logging field are being ground into pulp for pine oil, turpentine, and the manufacture of paper, an immense acreage of virgin land close in to the railroad, towns, factories, churches, and schools is being left for farm occupation.

Unless the railroad settles these lands with farmers it will fail to provide for a chief source of revenue when the timber is gone, and the railroad, with its future means of support materially at stake, will therefore afford every aid in the matter of prices, terms, and co-operation in obtaining settlers on the land. Write Walter S. Ayres, Industrial Commissioner, N. O. G. N. Ry., 864 McCormick Bldg., Chicago, Ill., how to obtain first hand a desirable farm out of this great body of cheap virgin land.

POTATOES 4c APIECE

LAST MONDAY in Traverse City, Mich., farmer Herkner sold a large load of potatoes for $2 per bushel. Another farmer refused that price and said he would store his potatoes instead. This price means approximately 2c a potato, the highest price ever paid to farmers in this leading potato state. It means that the consumers in Chicago will have to pay 3½c to 4c apiece for these potatoes. Probably 25 per cent of the entire crop is still in the hands of the farmers of this region. It is only another example of how the farmer "is getting his."

POTATOES yield easily from 100 to 150 bushels per acre and experts get as high as 200 to 300 bushels per acre. Manistee, Mason, and Lake counties, by the 13th U. S. census, had respectively 6,077 acres, 5,684 acres and 2,554 acres in potatoes. And bear in mind that the profits on these potatoes do not go to landlords, as over 90 per cent of the farms in these counties are owned by the men who operate them. Beans is another crop which brings good profits to Michigan farmers. Bean prices have also soared to a high figure.

SUPPOSE YOU PUT 10 acres into potatoes bringing a conservative yield of 100 bushels per acre, and at $1.75 per bushel this would make $1,750. And put 10 acres into beans, with a conservative yield of 15 bushels per acre, now selling at $6.25 per bushel, this would make $937.50. This makes a total for 20 acres of potatoes and beans of $2,687.50. If you own 40, 50, 60 or 80 acres all told and had the balance in staple crops you would be doing pretty well—wouldn't you? Now answer the question, "Is farming in Michigan profitable?"

OURS IS A COUNTRY where it pays also to grow clover, alfalfa, rye, vetch, wheat, oats, fodder and 90-day corn, barley, buckwheat, leguminous crops and root crops of all kinds. It pays here to raise cattle, sheep, hogs and poultry, and it is pre-eminently a country for profitably growing apples, pears, plums, cherries, grapes and berries.

REMEMBER that I am asking only $15 to $25 per acre for the unimproved land, and its earning power can be made as great as that of the high priced lands in Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, and Iowa. And my terms of $25 to $100 down per 40 acres, and $7 to $10 per month, or low yearly payments, enable most any man who is earning wages and can save a little to acquire the land for a farm home.

CONDITIONS of interest to the farmer are described in my 72-page book, illustrated with 115 photographic views, taken in the Swigart Tract, and will be sent free upon request to you if you will drop a postal for it. Call if you can and see samples of our 1916 crops on display in my offices and see the many stereopticon views that are being shown in my stereopticon room. When you call, ask for a large map and investigate my Mid-Winter proposition.

FOR THOSE who cannot get away at this time of year, nor in the early Spring, when my excursions commence, I have an Exchange Privilege in connection with my Mid-Winter offer, all of which means a material saving to you if you have made up your mind that you want land. Offices remain open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Texas.

FOR SALE—NEW FARM OPPORTUNITY IN ONE OF THE GREATEST STATES IN THE UNION. A new line of the Santa Fe is tapping a rich and fertile prairie section of Northwest Texas, where already many farmers have MADE GOOD in a big way with wheat, hogs and live stock. Here, if you ACT NOW, you can get first choice—get in on the ground floor of a great opportunity. You can get in AHEAD of the railway—ahead of the people whom the railway will bring—ahead of those who act more slowly than you do. This is the chance of a lifetime for a man of moderate means. A certain number of thrifty, farseeing farmers can acquire good land at an astonishingly low figure and on long, easy terms. If you have confidence that a great railroad, like the Santa Fe, would only recommend what it considers a good thing, and because it wants to see new territory developed and wants newcomers to PROSPER and PRODUCE—then write me TODAY for particulars about this district. Mild climate, social advantages, schools, churches, telephones, good roads. Everything there but enough men with their families. Will you be one of the fortunate firstcomers to reap the advantages of a section that has been minutely inspected by a Santa Fe agricultural agent and pronounced RIGHT? Write me NOW and let me send you a copy of the special illustrated circular we are getting out. C. L. SEAGRAVES, Industrial Commissioner, A., T. & S. F. Ry., 1105 Railway Exchange, Chicago.

In company owning valuable patents and trade marks on farm necessity and having same leased out on a royalty basis of 10% on the gross proceeds from sales. This is an excellent opportunity to place amounts of $1,000 or more with the utmost safety and greatest possibilities of gain. Replies solicited from those who have the cash to invest. Appointments will be made for interview with representative in Chicago.

A TREMENDOUS OPPORTUNITY

To make a quick sale we offer 12,000 acres of hardwood timber land [70,000,000 ft. of merchantable timber], in Northeastern Arkansas, at a price which the lumber alone will more than pay.

5 mills on property, and tram being built. Purchaser can either buy mills or operate on contract basis. Timber can easily be removed in two years, and pay entire cost of land, plus a big cash profit. Land is first and second bottom alluvial soil, drained by canal ditches and laterals.

Surrounding farms yield as high as $20 an acre rent from share croppers. The State Highway Commission has made surveys for macadam roads through property. Land when cleared will be worth three times price asked now. Sudden ill health of our client only cause for selling.

GIRLS RETRIEVED FROM STREETS AND BAD HOMES

Mrs. Shannon "Mothers" and Places Juvenile Court Wards on the Right Road.

BY AUDRIE ALSPAUGH CHASE

Combatting the destructive force of death, divorce, stepmothers, poverty, lack of sympathy is a home conserving force moving quietly but effectively under the wing of the Juvenile court. This is the child placing department, presided over by Mrs. Catherine Shannon, who is official "guardian" for the girls the court deems in need of a guardian.

Her wards are the delinquent and dependent girls who have been picked up off the streets, abstracted from dance halls or other places unseemly for their youth, and who have been found in need. These situations arise from various causes, in Mrs. Shannon's observation. The mother's death is the largest contributing factor. Along with that goes divorce, separating the parents.

Stepmother Problem.

A direct outgrowth of both is the introduction of the stepmother problem. She isn't always the problem, sometimes it is the stepchild, but for the most part she lives up to her legendary character. It isn't so much that there is bitterness as that her love isn't large enough to enfold the children of another wife, and they consequently feel this lack, realizing also they are not wanted.

Foreign homes where the children become Americanized and the parents do not sympathize contribute a large share of girls who rebel against the cramped quarters, the animal-like living. There are many such mothers who say openly, "She no good, she bring no money home." Girls in such situations run away from home, are picked up by various agencies, and so find their way into the Juvenile court and the wardenship of Mrs. Shannon. There are also many from absolutely unfit and immoral homes who have been rescued from their environments. In all, there have been several hundred cared for.

How They Are Placed.

They are investigated and placed according to their likes as far as possible. They come in ragged, tacky, most of them with hardly any change of underclothing even. They are started out with a little suitcase containing some clothing essentials, toilet accessories, and a fancy ribbon sewing bag.

"Just as soon as they think they are somebody, they are somebody," quoth Mrs. Shannon, adding further that in a month you would scarcely know them so greatly are they improved, for nine-tenths of them make good, according to her records.

The girls are sent about variously. Just now there are about eighty at school, ten at boarding school, seven taking training in hospitals, and eighty-six assisting in housework. Most of these in school are also assisting in homes, for it is the great object of the department to get the girls under good home influence.

Girls Paid Small Sums.

In the homes the girls are paid a small sum, which they have to buy clothes with and to save. Once clothes were supposed to be given, but the department discovered that people's kindness consisted more in disposing of their old things than providing the girls with suitable apparel, so a little salary was decided on as the better way. Girls who give all their time get about $3.50 a week or more if they are experienced. Girls in school, and many of them are in high school, receive about $2.

But the real point of the department is to provide homes for them.

"They might make more money working in department stores," explained Mrs. Shannon, "but they wouldn't save as much and they wouldn't have the conservative home surroundings. When they are taken into these homes they get a knowledge of home life that every girl should have. It is her right as much as enough food and clothing. Such a knowlede is an invaluable preparation for her future life. From her experience she learns the true home spirit and she learns also how to make and keep a home.

The Case of Dora.

"Yes, indeed, many of our girls have married, and all of them have been happy marriages.

"There was Dora. Her mother kept a cheap saloon in one of the worst districts in Chicago, and the girl had to be bartender. She was placed in a nice home, where she got $2 a week. She stayed there quite a while and in time through the family met a man to whom she is now married. He makes $35 a week and they have a baby of which they are too proud for anything.

"Then there was Maria. She was our little Italian girl who was rescued from her ragman father out chasing her with a frying pan. She lived with a nice family, learned a lot of things about home keeping, and now she is married to a druggist whom she met first at a little party. They are a very happy couple and it is long past their honeymoon. Our romances are very successful. You see the girls are fitted for them."

Three Clubs Established.

In connection with this department there have been established three clubs. They are Miss Bartelme's project, in which she has interested many women, but she so disclaims credit for them that they are called only the Mary A and Mary B clubs. They are clubs for these girls as real as any grownups', fitted up to supply the home atmosphere they have missed, to which they go every month to report privately on how they are treated in their new homes and where they stay when out of work or in a difficulty which needs shelter and protection. Many women of the city have memberships in the clubs and take personal interest in the girls. Many high school girls are likewise interested.

This whole home conserving influence is a little leaven working quietly and continuously in the community, for the community's good, as witness the stories of Dora and Maria, and many others of whom Mrs. Shannon can tell.

MORMON

One of Fifty-six Children of Brigham Young Speaks in Chicago.

Mrs. Susa Young Gates

MRS. SUSAN YOUNG GATES, one of the fifty-six children of the late Brigham Young, head of the Mormon church, spoke on Friday in the only Mormon church in Chicago, at Wrightwood and Sawyer avenues. Mrs. Gates' mother was one of the prophet's nineteen wives and Mrs. Gates was a member of the happy family that lived in the Lion house and whose boast was that of never having heard an unpleasant word from the head of the house.

GERMAN CRISIS DELAYS HEARING ON RECEIVERSHIP

Landis "Protects" Von Frantzius & Co. Stockholders.

Because Ambassador Gerard has been recalled from Berlin and Ambassador von Bernstorff has been handed his passports, presenting a crisis in the stock market that well nigh threw various interests in the case into a panic, Judge Landis in the United States District court this afternoon postponed action on an application for a receiver for Von Frantzius & Co., stock brokers, until Monday at 2 p. m. In the meantime a "momentous secret" concerning the condition of the Von Frantzius estate is being guarded by the court.

Auditor's Report "Secret."

The "momentous secret" is contained in a report made to the court by auditors employed by the administrators of the Von Frantzius estate. Probate Judge Horner appointed administrators now in control after young Peter von Frantzius, son of the deceased Fritz von Frantzius, resigned from that office.

Numerous Attorneys Present.

Nearly a score of lawyers were in court when the Von Frantzius case was called. I. B. Perlman appeared to present his petition, for creditors, for an adjudication in bankruptcy and for the appointment of a receiver to take the estate from the hand of the Probate court and administer it as that of an insolvent concern. Men Marcuse, who was Von Frantzius' partner in the brokerage business until a "private dissolution" took place last September, appeared alongside of C. A. MacDonald, one of the administrators, and Mr. MacDonald's counsel, Harry H. Barnum.

German Situation Affects Case.

"Plans are well under way," said Mr. Barnum, "for a reorganization of the firm and everybody will be paid 100 cents on the dollar. But the estate will be imperiled by any disturbance of the existing situation at this time. The crisis between the United States and Germany puts a peculiar situation into force."

"O, I think you are unduly excited about the bears in Wall street," said Judge Landis. "What I called for this morning was that report. It seems to me there has been some effort to hold up that report until after the close of the stock market today. Now the stock market has closed—it's after 11 o'clock now—and I want that report immediately. If there are any momentous secrets in it I'll guard them."

The court waited for the report. When it came there was a stir of excitement among lawyers for creditors and lawyers for the estate. Judge Landis went over it.

Judge Considers Margins.

"I think we needn't get excited. If it is really important that these people who have margins should not see this report, I guess I can hold it off a while anyway."

"You see, you get all heated up," said the court. "I think you'd better cool off. I'll put the lid on until Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. In the meantime I'll talk to Judge Horner. You're all panicky. But calm down a bit by Monday afternoon."

Gautemala Buying All Its Print Paper in the U. S.

Guatemala is buying all of the print paper needed to supply four daily papers a number of weeklies, and several job printing establishments at this time in the United States.

During 1915 at least 6,000 reams of news paper, valued at $16,000 United States gold, were brought in, while paper of other classes to the value of nearly $131,000 was also imported. Of this "other paper" the United States furnished $102,000 worth and Spain $29,000.

Before the European war the bulk of the paper supply of Guatemala came from Germany and a small quantity from England.

Nutter Heavy Drinker, Says Widow

Inquest into the death of Lemuel Nutter, alleged leader of the "automobile trust," who died in the county jail, was postponed yesterday until Feb. 9, after his widow had given his family history. She testified that her husband had been drinking heavily for a year. Prior to that time his health was good. The inquiry was opened in Hager's undertaking rooms, 642 North Clark street.

BREAD RIOTS IN GERMAN CITIES, SAY LETTERS

Swiss Circular Reproduces Hun Correspondence.

William Matthiessen, 1928 Mohawk street, an employé of the Prussian National Insurance company, Insurance Exchange building, has received a series of printed letters, purporting to have been written by Germans in Germany, but mailed to him from Switzerland. The letters are printed in the form of a trade circular, which also contains photographic reproduction of the letters.

Said Matthiessen:

"I don't know who sent them to me. I have received many letters, all of them unsigned, and I suppose that some friend of mine in Germany is smuggling them out of Germany to a friend in Switzerland.

Escaped the Censor.

"It would be worth one's life to be caught sending such information out of Germany. How this circular escaped the censor, I can't say."

The circular is entitled "Letters out of Germany," and is subheaded, "News for the Study of the Commercial Situation in the Warring Countries." Mr. Matthiessen believes it was circulated for commercial reasons, but is unable to suggest the exact reasons for its publication.

Mr. Matthiessen translated parts of letters from the Swiss language as follows:

Bread Riots; Swords Drawn.

HAMBURG, Aug. 20, 1916.

Last Friday we had big food riots here. Many stores were plundered. At the city hall there was being given a huge dinner to celebrate the Austrian kaiser's birthday, but the populace have nothing to eat.

HAMBURG, Aug. 20, 1916.

Much of this city's supply of bread and butter was destroyed here yesterday during bread riots. The soldiers were after us with swords.

HAMBURG, Aug. 19, 1916.

Last night in Hamburg there was a terrible riot. Women and children destroyed many stores and robbed them of their food supply. Where will it all end? The people have nothing to eat. There are no more potatoes, no more fat, no more bread. How the war will end God only knows. When the enemy hears of this his joy will be great.

Fourteen Days Without Butter.

HOLSTEIN, Aug. 27, 1916.

We are having terrible food riots here these days. Stores have been knocked in and plundered in this section and that section. They took the loaves from the bakers. It is getting worse and worse from day to day. In Tinn 100 women marched through the streets. They shouted that they wanted more to eat. We have had no butter for fourteen days. Where it will all end no one knows.

HAMBURG, Aug. 26, 1916.

The people here are being given no more bread cards. They demanded bread without cards, offering to pay for it, and when the bakers refused the bread the people stormed the bake shops.

BAVARIA, Oct. 12, 1916.

It has been said that the government promised to take care of its people, but I am unable to observe any sign of it.

Germany Will Be Conquered.

LEIPZIG, Oct. 29, 1916.

Now it is nearly Christmas time again. Yet there is no sign of peace. The battle of the Somme has cost us no end of blood, but still the murdering and the butchering goes on. Germany will be conquered slowly but surely. Let's hope that it won't take too long and that at last we get out quiet days back again. One's heart turns around in one's body when one reads the death lists. Young blood of 19 years spilled! What did it have from life? I feel like shooting the members of the reichstag when I read of their doings. But enough, we must be quiet.

WHO WILL WRITE TO LONELY GIRL IN IOWA TOWN?

The Lonesome club is, like Cleopatra, finding itself confronted with infinite variety. The latest form for its activities to take is a department of correspondence. One of the most virulent form of loneliness is the lump in your throat that gets bigger and bigger when wou go to the postoffice every day and never get a letter. Ever felt that lump?

From all over the country letters have been coming begging for correspondents. "I don't ask to be introduced to any one in person," a girl from a small town in Iowa writes, "but I would be terribly grateful if you could find some one nice to correspond with me. I'm 22. I'd rather have a boy correspondent if you would find only one, or a boy and a girl about my own age if I could have two. I don't know whether you think I'm eligible for a Lonesome club because I live at home, but it's terrible living in a town like this and never having anything exciting or unexpected happen. I know everybody in town and everybody knows me, and it's pretty pokey. It would make life awful interesting if when I go to the postoffice every day I'd once in a while get something for myself."

The officers of the club are arranging the correspondence work as a regular department of the club's activities. Mrs. Elizabeth Guion Dormer, 2448 Jackson boulevard, is secretary of the club, and until the departments of the club's work are differentiated all correspondence is being carried on through her.

Urges Revival in Study of Old Irish Language

A plea for a revival of the study of the old Irish language and literature as a means of sustaining the interest of American Irishmen in their mother country was voiced by the Rev. Andrew O'Kelleher, Irish fellowship foundation profesor of Irish languages and literature at the University of Illinois, before the Irish Fellowship club yesterday. Father O'Kelleher, who recently came from the University of Liverpool, based his appeal on the ground that American Irish, hitherto bound to the old country by the common bond of the struggle for Irish freedom, are in danger of losing touch now that freedom has been gained.

MERRIAM SEEKS MAYORALTY, LOEB HINTS IN ATTACK

Alderman Bitterly Assailed in Statement by Head of School Board.

Jacob M. Loeb, president of the board of education, declared himself yesterday against the reelection of Ald. Charles E. Merriam in the Seventh ward. Mr. Loeb cited eighteen reasons why Ald. Merriam should not be returned to the council. They have to do chiefly with the alderman's policies on school matters. Mr. Loeb accused Ald. Merriam of joining the "insidious forces bent on undermining the public schools" in the hope of winning the labor vote for a mayoralty campaign. The statement, which follows that of William R. Fetzer, Ald. Merriam's opponent, that he does not believe in labor unions in the schools, follows:

"I am opposed to the return to the council of Charles E. Merriam, alderman of the Seventh ward, because I believe that though naturally gifted and academically trained, he has daily demonstrated his unfitness to hold public office. That his is the breadth of a bigot and the usefulness of a carping critic. That he has always been an iconoclast, never a builder. That his vision is fantasmal frenzy. That he is self-centered, self-sufficient, and intolerant.

"Has Exploited Constituents."

"That he has neither represented his constituents nor their thought or interest. That he has exploited them to his own ends. That his political fortunes are his consuming passion. That his political future is his sole idea. That he has sacrificed opponent and associate alike on the altar of his political ambitions. That he has openly and wantonly consorted with the insidious forces that are bent on undermining our public schools, in the hope thereby to command the union labor vote at a time when he might be seeking to represent a larger and more inclusive constituency than that of the Seventh ward.

"As one familiar with laws concerning our public school system, he must have known that the city council had no legal right to make its recent so called investigation of that system. That his active and noisy participation in that investigation can be accounted for only on the theory that he wished to be and to be kept in the limelight.

Political Move Seen.

"That as a student of the science of government and as a recent protagonist of the short ballot he must know that his indorsement of the 'elective school board' is indefensible. That the indorsement can be accounted for only on the theory that it will make votes. That his knowledge of public affairs and of public men must justify the belief that a salaried school board will attract members neither earnest, capable, nor honest.

"That here again, as always, he has taken the position which makes for class hate. That his attitude toward public service is not only obstructive but dangerous. That his retirement from the public service will redound not only to the advantage of the ward but to that of the entire city in which he lives."

ERBSTEIN JURY IS COMPLETED

The jury to try Attorneys Charles E. Erbstein and Patrick H. O'Donnell, with five others, on charges of conspiracy to suborn perjury, was completed before Judge Walker yesterday. Taking of testimony will start Monday.

It took three weeks to obtain the jury. More than 500 men were examined. The jurors are:

George F. Williams, 722 South [illegible] avenue.
William Melhoff, Tinley Park.
George Dore, Maywood.
J. A. Auerbach, 7200 South [illegible] avenue.
John A. Pinger, 2700 South [illegible] avenue.
Gustave Ehler, 3513 North [illegible] street.
Willard J. Cooley, 6045 Woodlawn avenue.
Edward A. Vetterli, 1834 North [illegible] avenue.
Herman D. Gess, 12059 Wallace street.
Harry Fitch, 4865 Magnolia avenue.
Richard F. Haldenwang, [illegible] North Sawyer avenue.
Walter M. McClosky of 1022 North Kedvale avenue, a locomotive engineer for the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, is the twelfth juror.

Loses Suit for $25,000 Against City for Fall

Miss Bridget Coen, a dressmaker, lost out in a suit for $25,000 damages against the city of Chicago yesterday when a jury before Judge Brentano in the Superior court brought in a verdict of not guilty.

In January, 1912, Miss Coen fell on an icy sidewalk in front of the house in which she was living.

The jury, in giving its verdict of not guilty, found that the ice on the sidewalk was placed there by "an act of providence, a matter over which the city could have no control."

Gambling Squad Arrests Fifteen in Loop Raids

Members of the gambling squad of First Deputy Supt. of Police Westbrook's office made two downtown raids yesterday and arrested fifteen men. The first raid was on the quarters of the waiters' union, 115 West Madison street, where seven were arrested. Robert Latour was booked as keeper. At [illegible] West Washington street eight men were arrested as inmates.

Four Taken in Raid on "Grogan Club" Freed

James Patten and three other men who wer arrested in a raid on "Grogan's club," 1462 West Madison street, Sunday, Jan. 21, were freed by Judge Rafferty yesterday. Assistant State's Attorney John Moran and Assistant City Prosecutor Harry Meneley both pleaded in vain to have the men fined. Patten was arrested on charges of violating the Sunday closing law.
